BRITAIN AND ITALY SIGN 16-POINT AGREEMENT

GUARANTEES GIVEN FOR SUEZ AND LIBYA

Empire to Work Through League Toward Recognition of Conquest of Ethiopia and Receive Extended Trading Facilities.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, April 16.—Italy and Great Britain signed tonight an agreement patching up African and Mediterranean quarrels which could have led to war in the last three years.

While the signing was hailed with satisfaction by Premier Benito Mussolini and Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain in an exchange of telegrams, Italy still must carry out the promise to withdraw her combatants from Spain, during or after the civil war, before it will become fully operative.

Points in the pact, formally signed in Chigi Palace by Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano and the Earl of Perth, the British Ambassador, include:

1. Withdrawal of all Italian fighters and war materials from Spain at the end of the civil war, if evacuation is not completed earlier.

2. Britain in return agrees to work through the League of Nations toward recognition of Italy's conquest of Ethiopia.

3. Italy reassures Britain she not only holds no territorial or political aims in Spain but also seeks "no privileged economic position" in Spain or Spanish possessions.

Navy and Suez Canal.

4. Italy adheres to the 1936 London naval treaty among Great Britain, the United States and France.

5. Italy agrees to withdraw troops from Libya at the rate of at least 1000 a week until the peace-time strength of possibly 30,000 men shall be reached.

6. Both countries reaffirm their Suez Canal convention of 1888, which guarantees free use of the Suez Canal at all times for all Powers.

7. Italy reaffirms guarantees regarding Lake Tana, Ethiopian source of the Blue Nile, in a clause of the accord in which Egypt participates.

8. Both countries agree not to use propaganda against each other.

9. Both reaffirm the gentlemen's agreement of January, 1937, and the Mediterranean status quo which that agreement involved.

10. Italy abandons all claims to influence in Arabian territories bordering the Red Sea and across from Eritrea and Italian Somaliland. Both agree to respect the integrity of Saudi Arabia and Yemen.

11. Both agree to exchange information on major prospective movements of armed forces in the Mediterranean, Red Sea, Gulf of Aden, the Sudan and other regions. They agree to notify each other in advance of any new naval or air bases in the Eastern Mediterranean, the Red Sea and the approaches to the latter.

East African Boundaries.

12. Boundary issues and related matters in the East African region are to be negotiated.

13. Italy is granted certain rights in the British Aden protectorate.

14. Italy reaffirms her June, 1936, assurance to the League of Nations that natives of East Africa will not be used for military service except for local policing and defense. In other words, Italy will not raise a black army in Ethiopia.

15. Italy promises British nationals full religious freedom in East Africa and agrees to allow British missionaries to continue their work there.

16. Extension of full British trading facilities to Ethiopia and a promise by Britain to prevent raids into Ethiopia from neighboring territory.

France and Power Pact.

Settlement of British-Italian differences appears to diplomats to clear the way for a French-Italian understanding which, with Germany working with Italy, might mean a line-up of four nations in Europe.

BRITISH FIGHT PALESTINE ARABS ON EASTER EVE

By the Associated Press.

JERUSALEM, April 16.—British authorities said 16 Arabs were killed in an encounter between terrorists and British troops. Three Jews were ambushed and killed near Bassa. Arab sources said 20 Arabs were killed.

The clash between the terrorists and troops occurred at Jenin, 50 miles from Jerusalem, ending when the Arabs fled southeastward toward Transjordan. The troops were aided by armored cars and airplanes.

The whole area around Jenin was surrounded by approximately 1000 soldiers tonight and all roads were closed to civilian traffic. An indefinite curfew was established.

The Holy City will be well guarded tomorrow as thousands throng the streets and churches to celebrate Easter.

Many Sects to Celebrate.

While Christians of many sects join in observance of Easter, representatives of two other great faiths will gather for important religious ceremonies.

For Christians it will be Easter in the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, for Moslems the feast of Nebi Musa at the Mosque of Omar, and for Jews the Passover at the Wailing Wall.

Franciscan and Dominican friars, in the simple garb of their orders, will mingle in the streets of the city with turbaned shieks and bearded rabbis as they go to their traditional ceremonies.

The city this year is crowded with pilgrims from foreign countries. For several years they have been dissuaded from visiting the Holy Land by the countrywide disturbances.

A quartette from the United States will sing hymns tomorrow to pilgrims in the Garden of Gethsemane. The singers, from Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky., are Fred A. Spotts, Huntington Park, Cal.; James Moore, Johnstown, Pa.; William G. Kuhn, Chillicothe, O., and Morris Culver, Wilmore, Ky. Their leader is Evangelist Samuel J. Williams of Columbus, O.

Before dawn tomorrow the Christian pilgrims will file in groups of 10 into the Church of the Holy Sepulcher. The weakened condition of the church caused the authorities to restrict entrance to successive small groups.

Meanwhile, in the adjoining Katholikon, with gold ikons reflecting the light of oil lamps, Greek Orthodox Christians will celebrate Palm Sunday as the patriarch inaugurates Eastern Christendom's holy week with the liturgy of St. John Chrysostom.

Moslem Ceremonies.

Early in the afternoon, as the services in the Church of the Holy Sepulcher end, thousands of Moslems will pour from the Mosque of Omar after their prayers.

Flourishing swords in their ancient ceremonial dance, to the accompaniment of hand-beaten drums, they will wind in a colorful procession between lines of police through the city gates to the tomb of Nebi Musa.

According to Moslem tradition, Nebi Musa—the Jewish prophet Moses—lies buried on the western shore of the Dead Sea.

Not originally a religious festival, this holiday has become the Moslem Easter which annually attracts thousands of pilgrims to Jerusalem.

At the tomb of Nebi Musa great encampments will be set up, and for three days devout Moslems will dance, sing, feast and pray before returning to their native villages.

P W A LOANS AND GRANTS $3,339,848,000 IN 58 MONTHS

Ickes Estimates Cost of 26,427 Projects at $4,475,000,000, Including Local Outlay.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 16. — The Public Works Administration which President Roosevelt proposes to revitalize with a congressional authorization to spend or lend $1,000,000,000, has used more than three times that amount during the past 58 months.

A summary made public today by Administrator Ickes showed an outlay of $3,339,848,476 in loans and grants since P W A was created by Congress four years and 10 months ago to help speed up reemployment through construction projects and orders to manufacturing plants.

Ickes' summary estimated the total cost of the 26,427 Federal and non-Federal projects at $4,475,037,553, including local contributions.

SPANISH PREMIER DENOUNCES NEW PACT

British - Italian Agreement 'Means Intervention Against Us,' Says Negrin.

By the Associated Press.

MADRID, April 16.—Dr. Juan Negrin, Premier of the Spanish Government, denounced tonight the British-Italian accord as "clear intervention in the Spanish war."

"Had other countries respected their treaties, this war would have ended in our favor long ago," he declared. "The Anglo-Italian agreement is clear intervention.

"Even the blindest can see this. . . . The Spanish Government must protest solemnly against such an agreement, which means intervention against us."

Negrin attacked the accord in a "fireside" radio broadcast from Barcelona. Much of his speech dealt with the Government situation following the fall of Vinaroz. He said no government in Spain ever was supported so stanchly and unanimously as that of Barcelona. He spoke of "this black moment" when the enemy, "aided by two foreign countries, engaged in its greatest offensive."

In his broadcast, Premier Negrin declared "we will fight on until victory is assured."

He praised the spirit of Catalonia, which he said had held the insurgents far behind their original schedule for subjugation of that northeastern portion of Spain.

If Government Spain stands fast, Negrin said, it can repel the invader despite the present outlook.

"An international Fascist (insurgent) victory in Spain would merely be a preliminary for a general offensive to sink the world in slavery," Negrin declared.

5 MORE SHOE COMPANIES ANNOUNCE WAGE CUT PLAN

10 Per Cent Reduction Would Wipe Out Pay Rises of 1937 in Most Cases.

Five additional St. Louis shoe companies announced yesterday that they would soon put into effect a 10 per cent wage cut for all of their employes, the cut having the effect, in most cases, of taking away an increase granted in 1937.

The companies are the Milius Shoe Co., Brauer Bros. Shoe Co., Johansen Bros. Shoe Co., Boyd-Welsh, Inc., and Wolff-Tober Shoe Manufacturing Co. and its subsidiary, Paramount Shoe Manufacturing Co.

In announcing the cut the companies are following the lead of three other St. Louis firms, International Shoe Co., Endicott-Johnson and Brown Shoe Co., which have already indicated that they would reduce wages.

The reason for the cut was given as a lowering in the price of shoes and increased competition from Eastern shoe manufacturers who have already cut wages.

CHINESE RED ARMY REPORTED IN AREA CLOSE TO PEIPING

Battle Only 20 Miles West of Walls — 15,000 Communists Said to Be but 40 Miles Away.

GUERRILLAS RENEW RAIDS NEAR SHANGHAI

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, April 16.—A dispatch from Peiping today quoted foreign sources as saying 15,000 Chinese Communist soldiers had been sighted 40 miles west of Peiping, seat of the Japanese-dominated government in North China. Japanese army officers admitted there was fighting 20 miles west of Peiping.

Chinese guerrillas, heartened by victories in Shantung Province, also renewed behind-the-lines raids in the Shanghai area, where 1200 Japanese wounded have been brought into the city proper in the last 10 days. Police reported heavy firing was audible today in Rubicon, a village only two miles outside the International Settlement.

Chinese said 11 of the 14 bridges along the north coast of Hangchow Bay had been destroyed and 30 sections of the roadbed torn up in an attempt to sever Japanese communications between Shanghai and Hangchow, 50 miles to the southwest.

Japanese continued to deny Chinese gains. A spokesman said a series of "minor engagements" was going on in Southern Shantung with "Chinese being driven back all along the line."

From foreign sources it was learned that a Japanese column had met a serious reverse at Wuyu in Kiangsu province where the infantry vanguard had outdistanced its supporting artillery and been ambushed.

Guerillas in Shantung.

Relentlessly Chinese irregulars continued widespread demolition of highways and railways through Southern Shantung province.

Japanese gave new indications today that they are ready for a new offensive in Shantung, clamping down a rigid censorship on all dispatches dealing with military and shipping activities on the North Shantung coast. British interests lodged a protest with Japanese consular officials, charging they have been unable to dock ships at Tsingtao for 10 days.

Reinforcements were moving down the coast toward Taierhchwang, where the Japanese suffered their most disastrous defeat of the nine-months-old war last week. These troops were reported between Chuhsien and Jihcao, 50 miles north of Lini on the South Shantung front, where the war has been bogged down for a month.

The Chinese, inspired by recent victories at Taierhchwang, now declare they can drive the Japanese out of Shantung Province which the invaders have failed to conquer in five months of fighting.

Seeking to Recover Shrines.

Two places they are especially bent on recapturing are the sacred Taishan Mountains, where Emperor Shun offered sacrifices to heaven more than 4200 years ago, and Chufu, birthplace of Confucious.

Since the Japanese offensive started a month ago, according to neutral estimates, Chinese and Japanese casualties at Taierhchwang, Yihsien and Lini have passed 100,000 with the Chinese suffering the heaviest losses.

Despite the losses, the Japanese have been able to advance only to Hanchwang, where the Tientsin-Pukow crosses the Grand Canal, 27 miles north of Suchow. They have been held there since March 21.

The recent turn in the fighting has carried a Chinese counteroffensive back 20 miles from Taierhchwang to Yihsien, about 30 miles northeast of Hanchwang.

Foreign military observers expect an elaborate demonstration of Japanese military strength as soon as the Imperial Army, blocked in its drive down the Tientsin-Pukow Railway, pushes through Eastern Shantung in a new drive on battered Taierhchwang.

To meet this threat, Chinese are building strong defenses along the Yi River on both sides of Lini and rushing reinforcements into the area.

Furious Battle at Yihsien.

Meanwhile, Chinese troops stormed the walls of Yihsien with broadswords and grenades, carrying the war to fanatical heights

$6,000,000 CITY SCHOOL BUILDING PROGRAM URGED

SUGGESTS FEDERAL GRANT FOR 45 PCT.

Remaining $3,300,000 Under Proposal Would Be Financed With a New Bond Issue.

A recommendation for a $6,000,000 school construction program, with a new bond issue and Federal public works grant, will be considered by a Board of Education special committee when it begins public hearings shortly.

This proposal, the Post-Dispatch learned yesterday, will be made by Arthur A. Blumeyer, chairman of the special committee and of the standing Building Committee, who urged the board last Tuesday to start a financial plan for immediate construction work. He will suggest a $3,300,000 serial bond issue and application for a Federal grant of $2,700,000, on a basis of 45 per cent of the cost.

Retirement of the bonds would cost $165,000 a year. Blumeyer, discussing his plan in response to inquiry by a reporter, expressed the opinion that the bonds would not have to carry average interest higher than 2½ per cent. At that rate interest the first year would be $82,500, and the interest cost would decline annually. Thus the probable maximum interest and sinking fund tax rate to carry these bonds would be 2½ cents on the $100 valuation.

Could Build 20 Schools.

The annual cost of carrying the bonds, Blumeyer pointed out, would be less than the expenditure if the board built only one school a year out of current revenue. He was of the opinion that more than 20 schools could be erected at once under the proposed bond and grant plan.

This proposal was based on President Roosevelt's recommendation to Congress last week for a new public works fund. The President suggested that the fund might be distributed either by the method of 45 per cent grants, which would be outright gifts, or by 100 per cent loans to be repaid over a maximum period of 50 years, without interest. The latter plan, he pointed out, would have virtually the same effect for the recipient as the former.

Missouri's Constitution limits public bond issues to 20-year maturities. Blumeyer said that a loan from the Government would be subject to this rule and to the approval of the local voters, but that repayment of a $6,000,000 loan over 20 years would run the expenditure up to $300,000 a year for the full period, hence would be undesirable. An attempt to amend the State Constitution to permit a 50-year loan would be too slow and difficult, he said, and might not leave sufficient time to permit construction under Federal rules.

Repairs on Buildings Costly.

By combining the districts of several old schools in one new school there will be sufficient savings in operation and maintenance costs to offset the principal and interest charges on a $3,300,000 bond issue, in the opinion of executive officers of the board, Blumeyer asserted. He pointed out that maintenance of old buildings was costly, taking the greater part of an annual repair expenditure of about $500,000.

Public hearings on the proposal, or similar plans of construction financing, will be called as soon as Superintendent of Instruction Henry J. Gerling is prepared to participate. It is the superintendent's function to recommend new buildings. Members of the special committee, besides Blumeyer, are John J. Sheahan, James J. Fitzgerald and Dr. Solon Cameron, who are the chairmen of the other standing committees.

In some instances new sites must be purchased for a building program, but existing school sites and other board property also may be used. Blumeyer said the proposed program should include the new Stowe (Negro) Teachers' College, in order to obtain a Federal grant on that structure, which may cost about $400,000. He reached the conclusion that a new high school would not have to be included, because the tendency to decreased attendance in the elementary schools soon would begin to offset crowded conditions in the high schools.

Specific structures he mentioned for the program included: Mallinckrodt School, to replace por-

U. S. CAVALRY FED FROM AIR IN TEXAS

Plane Delivers Supplies by Parachute in Army Test in Mountainous Region.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 16. — The War Department reported success today for an experiment in feeding an isolated cavalry platoon by air.

A telegram from Gen. Ben Lear said only two eggs of four dozen dropped to cavalrymen in the Big Bend district near Balmorhea, Tex., were cracked in parachute delivery. Generally, the test was highly satisfactory, said Gen. Lear.

The Army Air Force dropped 1000 pounds of supplies for men and horses yesterday and will continue to do so for several days. The platoon is in a mountainous region where it is impossible for an airplane to land.

The army bomber loaded with rations took off from Biggs Field, El Paso, at 9:15 o'clock this morning and located the troops. The dropping of food to the 32 men and 32 horses was successfully accomplished in 32 minutes.

APPEAL OF JAMES DALHOVER, CONDEMNED GANGSTER, DENIED

U. S. Circuit Court at Chicago Turns Down Plea in Two-to-One Decision.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 16.—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals denied by a two-to-one decision today the appeal of James Dalhover, Al Brady gangster sentenced to die for the fatal shooting of Indiana State Policeman Paul Minneman.

Counsel for the gangster contended the Government took too much latitude in presenting its case by submitting evidence, through Dalhover's alleged confession and other testimony, of 150 additional crimes. These included two other killings.

Dalhover was convicted of murder by a Federal jury in the court of Judge Thomas W. Slick in Hammond, Ind., and was sentenced to be electrocuted April 8.

In the decision of the appeals court, Judge J. Earl Major dissented from the findings of his colleagues, William M. Sparks and Walter E. Treanor.

Il Tevere in Rome Declares Nation's Flyers Dropped 173,000 Pounds of Explosives Also.

ROME, April 16.—The newspaper Il Tevere said today Italian aviators with the insurgents in Spain had brought down 538 Government planes since the start of the Spanish civil war.

Summarizing exploits of Italian aviators in Spain since the start of the insurgent advance to the Mediterranean on March 10, Il Tevere said the Italians had made 5246 flights, dropping more than 173,000 pounds of explosives.

ONE-THIRD OF $750,000 BANKER STOLE FOUND

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—The Justice Department announced today agents had recovered one-third of the $750,000 which it said Raymond McCauley Scruggs, vice-president of the First National Bank & Trust Co. of Oklahoma City, had confessed embezzling.

Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the announcement said, found $250,000 in bonds belonging to the Oklahoma School Board in the personal safety deposit box of Scruggs, who was treasurer of that board. Scruggs was arrested by Federal agents and members of the Dallas (Tex.) Police Department at Dallas Feb. 7.

The department said Scruggs signed confessions in which he said he began his offenses in 1932, converting funds belonging to his mother-in-law, which she had given him to invest in municipal or State warrants. Later, the department said he confessed, he converted the school funds to his personal use and lost most of the money in gambling and stock market speculations.

Counsel for the banker indicated at Oklahoma City that Federal charges of embezzlement would be resisted despite his plea of guilty at a hearing at Dallas last week.

"He didn't violate the national banking laws," said Draper Grigsby, Scruggs' attorney.

UNION, FIGHTING MERCHANTS SENDS SHOPPERS OUT OF CITY

Furnishes Free Bus Rides From Oregon City, Ore.; Stores Counter With Price Cuts.

By the Associated Press.

OREGON CITY, Ore., April 16.—Both merchants and unionists claimed victory, but the public appeared to be a certain winner tonight in an economic battle-royal.

The Retail Clerks' Union, affiliate of the American Federation of Labor, angered by the merchants' refusal to sign a closed shop agreement, diverted Saturday shoppers to Portland, 16 miles away, by offering free bus transportation.

REBEL DRIVE FROM CENTER OF CATALONIA FRONT BEGUN

Objective Is to Meet Other Insurgent Forces Pressing on Tortosa and Widen Breach to Sea in Loyal Territory.

ACTION 70 MILES FROM BARCELONA

Aragon Troops Return to Offensive After Resisting Series of Government Assaults Lasting More Than 75 Hours.

By the Associated Press.

HENDAYE, France, April 16.—Spanish insurgents began a fresh offensive today east of Balaguer, in the center of the long, curving Catalonian front.

The Aragon troops started their drive some 70 miles northwest of Barcelona, with the objective of meeting other insurgent forces marching on Tortosa and widening the breach in Government territory.

Government Spain was cut in two yesterday and forces which reached the coast turned to the north for the assault on Tortosa, 95 miles southwest of Barcelona.

Loyalist Assaults Resisted.

Insurgent dispatches said the Aragon troops suddenly returned to offensive warfare after resisting a series of Government assaults lasting more than 75 hours.

The immediate result of the new drive, these advices said, was the shattering of the Government line in several places, although the exact location of the operations was not given.

One report declared the Government troops were "forced to retire from their field base," leaving behind many dead. Two large munition depots were said to have been taken.

Observers said the strategy of the central drive was to strike quickly before Government commanders could reinforce their tired soldiers, who had been struggling day and night to maintain the Western Catalonian defense line.

Slow Drive on Tortosa.

The drive on Tortosa, at the head of the broad delta of the Ebro River, proceeded slowly after the occupation of Vinaroz and surrounding towns.

Gen. Miguel Aranda and Gen. Garcia Valino moved with deliberation, establishing strong positions to prevent flanking attacks against the 25-mile strip held by the rebels on the Government's seaboard.

While one advanced force took positions outside San Carlos de la Rapita, 14 miles southeast of Tortosa, other patrols were cleaning up the southern end of the coastal wedge around Peniscola.

In addition, insurgents were forced to maintain large forces on the San Mateo line, 12 miles inland, to guard against counter-attacks from Government columns based at Albocacer, southwest of San Mateo.

Rebel progress around Tortosa was delayed by strong Government defenses, particularly south of Cherta. Two insurgent armies were attempting to close in on Tortosa from the south and northwest.

Northern Catalonia Action.

Less spectacular than the march to the sea but still persistent was the insurgent advance in Northern Catalonia.

After consolidating positions around Tremp, about 100 miles northwest of Barcelona, Gen. Francisco Franco's mountain forces during the week moved slowly up the Naguera Pallaresa River valley and captured Sort, 15 miles from the border of Andorra.

For several days no reports were received on operations in that region until suddenly the insurgent command announced occupation of the little village of Tor, nearly on the French-Spanish border.

Operating in groups smaller than those used in the southern drives, the insurgents drove Government militiamen and civilians across the border into France or farther eastward into Government territory.

There still remained many pockets in the mountainous terrain

DALADIER PRESSES FOR UNITY WITH BRITAIN AND ITALY

French Premier Calls Cabinet for Wednesday to Get Approval of Proposed Understandings.

ENVOY IS EXPECTED TO GO TO ROME SOON

British-French Talks to Start April 28— Sit-in Strikers Leaving Paris Metal Plants.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 16. — Premier Edouard Daladier called today a Cabinet meeting for Wednesday to obtain final approval of his plan to rebuild France's international front by understandings with Italy and Great Britain.

The broad lines of his scheme are:

1. Closer military and diplomatic co-operation with Britain, made possible by establishment of a stable French Government and adoption of a conservative foreign policy similar to London's.

2. An agreement with Italy restoring the good official relations which existed prior to the tension which developed during the Italian-Ethiopian war and was aggravated by the Spanish civil war.

The Anglo-Italian agreement signed today in Rome has opened the way for a Franco-Italian pact, and Daladier and Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet will go to London at the end of this month for talks on Anglo-French collaboration with Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax.

Ambassador's Appointment.

The Cabinet will decide definitely on the offers to be made to Italy, which will include appointment of an Ambassador to Rome and recognition of the Ethiopian conquest. It was expected generally an envoy extraordinary would be sent to Rome to negotiate an agreement, soon after the Cabinet meeting.

(Diplomatic quarters in Rome reported that Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano had informed France indirectly he was ready to negotiate with the Daladier Government for an agreement similar to the one with Britain.

(France has been without an Ambassador in Rome since the latter part of 1936, when Rene Doynel de Saint-Quentin, now Ambassador to Washington, was named to the post after the retirement of Count Charles de Chambrun. Italy refused to accept Saint-Quentin unless he was sent to Rome with credentials recognizing the Italian conquest of Ethiopia. France refused to do this, Saint-Quentin never took the post, and a year later the Franco-Italian breach was widened when Italy withdrew Ambassador Vittorio Cerruti from Paris.)

Jean Mistler, chairman of the Chamber of Deputies Foreign Affairs Committee, continued to be mentioned most frequently as the prospective envoy for Franco-Italian negotiations and the primary candidate for the ambassadorship.

British Talks to Begin April 28.

Daladier and Bonnet will leave Paris on the night of April 27 for talks opening the next day in London to seal the bond of closer Anglo-French collaboration.

British War Minister Leslie Hore-Belisha is expected to stop off in Paris, en route to London from Malta, on April 27, to confer with Daladier, and may accompany the Premier and his foreign minister to the British capital.

In view of the satisfacttory progress of Daladier's measures to end the strikes of metal workers in the Paris region, today's scheduled conference of the "inner council" of the Premier and five of his ministers was canceled.

The workers' syndicate ordered evacuation of occupied metal plants, and the sit-in strikers began to leave factories. It appeared that most, if not all, plants would be evacuated before tomorrow morning.

Some 160,000 men were involved in the strike movement, one of the most difficult domestic problems inherited by the Daladier Government when it took office last Sunday.

MONEY LENDER IN TROUBLE AGAIN

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 16.—Stanley K. Zalewski, president of the International Credit Corporation with offices here and at St. Louis, was arrested yesterday on 61 charges of practicing law without a license. He was held in default of $12,200 bond.

Magistrate Thomas H. Young said he issued the warrants covering instances of Zalewski practicing in his court after the loan corporation officer had admitted he had no attorney's license. After receiving complaints that Zalewski had been attaching Kentucky property of railroads to enforce garnishment on employes' salary checks, the magistrate said he began an investigation which led to the discovery that Zalewski had no license.

Zalewski, as president of the International Credit Corporation, was named as a defendant with the company in one of the injunction suits filed in the Circuit Court here by the Attorney-General in a campaign against money-lenders exacting usurious interest from small borrowers. Service had been obtained only on two woman employes, and a consent decree was entered restraining them from accepting promissory notes from borrowers and assigning the notes to Zalewski.

A year ago, Zalewski and the credit corporation were enjoined in the Circuit Court from engaging in the unauthorized practice of law in connection with collection of small loans.

Gen. Miaja Says Loyalists Have Recaptured Seashore Town.

MADRID, April 16.—Gen. Jose Miaja, newly named supreme military and civilian commander in all of Government Spain except Catalonia, announced today that Benicarlo had been recaptured.

Benicarlo is four miles southwest of Vinaroz, on the eastern coast, where the insurgents marched to the Mediterranean yesterday.

Miaja spent long hours today instructing civilian and military subordinates in new defense measures.

This afternoon he broadcast a solemn message to the people, stressing his opinion that victory was still possible. It was delivered from his secluded headquarters on the outskirts of Madrid where scores of officials had promised unquestionable obedience to his orders.

"Hold the lines," was Miaja's watchword. At the same time he demanded that secondary troops observe supreme discipline and work to support the troops in the trenches.

beyond anything seen since the war started last July 7.

New field guns hammered at the walls, after cracking Japanese positions on the east, southeast and northeast, and planes rained bombs on the besieged forces.

Chinese infantry systematically attacked Japanese machine-gun nests dotting the hills and countryside surrounding the town.

Japanese reinforcements were reported counter attacking heavily three miles west of Yihsien in an effort to break the Chinese cordon, but were hampered by swift flank attacks.

The exhausted but desperate Japanese defenders finally beat off this furious attack and the Chinese were forced to withdraw to their lines with heavy losses.

Indicative of the desperate struggle at Yihsien, Chinese reported that one hill near the city changed hands five times during the day's fighting. The Japanese finally were ousted with the aid of Chinese planes, which were reported to be more active.

Chinese commanders predicted fall of the city as all its supply lines were cut.

THAYER GETS POWER; CITY DOESN'T WANT IT

By the Associated Press.

THAYER, Mo., April 16.—Electric lights shone again tonight in Thayer's homes and business houses after the Arkansas-Missouri Power Corporation restored service at the order of the State Public Service Commission.

The 2000 residents had been using candles, lamps and lanterns since Thursday morning, when the company cut off electric power because the city had started work on a municipal power plant.

Although the municipal plant will not be completed until July, the city council decided not to avail itself of the resumption of service. Street lights and municipal buildings remained dark, therefore. Many residents also refused service.

The company said it was resuming only "temporarily," pending a hearing before the State Public Service Commission next Wednesday on a "proceedings in abandonment."

After the commission ordered the service resumed Mayor Reef and four members of the City Council adopted resolutions ordering the company not to restore electric service to any city-owned property.

"We don't want the power company service for our street lights or for any city-owned building or other municipal property," said R. H. Williams, president of the Council. "Naturally we have no objections to the company restoring service to homes and private business concerns."

The company turned off lights at 8 a. m. Thursday. Notices posted about town said the company did not feel justified in accepting responsibility for hazardous conditions alleged to have been created through contractors building city-owned distribution lines adjacent to those owned by the company.

NAZI SYMPATHIZERS HELD AS PLOTTERS IN RUMANIA

Hundreds of Iron Guard Adherents of Codreanu Arrested and Arms Are Seized.

By the Associated Press.

BUCHAREST, Rumania, April 17 (Sunday).—The Ministry of the Interior today announced discovery of a nation-wide plot against the Government by the Iron Guard, a political organization inclining toward the Nazis.

The Ministry said that in a surprise police search which continued throughout the night, arms and munitions were found in homes of the lieutenants of Corneliu Zelea Codreanu, party leader.

It also announces the discovery of documents in which it was said Codreanu ordered party members to "arm so as to be ready to march toward Bucharest and to create a Rumania of the Iron Guard legionnaires."

Police were said to have arrested hundreds of Codreanu's sub-leaders, but it was not stated whether the head of the pro-Nazi party was among them.

Under the new Rumanian Constitution, the death penalty may be inflicted on offenders against the law which prohibits possession of arms and revolutionary propaganda against a government.

JAPANESE CABINET CRISIS OVER WAR ACT

Premier Opposes Army and Navy Demands for Sweeping Emergency Control.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, April 16.—The seriousness of the Japanese Cabinet split was indicated today by the continuous stream of political leaders to the villa of Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye.

The Premier remained silent on reports of the Government crisis, but Minister of Justice Suehiko said after a visit with him that Konoye was not planning to resign. Konoye previously was reported as having threatened to quit.

The crisis was precipitated by demands of army and navy leaders for further war-time control. The Premier was reported opposing these demands because he promised Parliament the national mobilization act would not be applied during the Chinese conflict.

The newspaper Asahi asserted that "the future of the present Cabinet is gloomy" unless major reconstruction is carried out and steps are taken to win a quick and final victory in China.

Little War News in Papers.

Newspapers carried almost no war news. The newspaper Chugai said in an editorial that "wild rumors" concerning the situation in China "continue to gain credence" and warned the nation to remain calm.

"We particularly regret that such falsity is difficult to demonstrate," the paper said.

Among the visitors who called on Premier Konoye during the day was Baron Kumao Harada, private secretary of Prince Kimmochi Saionji, who presumably conveyed the elder statesman's advice to Konoye. Other visitors were leaders of the two dominant political parties, Minseito and Seiyukai.

Minister of Education Koichi Kido, who is said to have sided with the Premier, also called.

Foreign Minister Koki Hirota was the only member of the Cabinea who has not visited Konoye since the crisis developed.

The Japanese army, for reasons not stated, is exercising extreme caution to prevent returned soldiers from talking about their experiences in China.

Gag on Returned Soldiers.

It is reported that the men have come back much chastened and a little uncertain about the glories of war. But, owing to the military secrets protection law, plus certain less formal restrictions, they are not openly discussing their sentiments. Certainly no information about reverses, defeats, blunders or unusual casualties is known to have passed the lips of any returned men.

There are drastic restrictions at military hospitals, where the wounded lie. Visitors are permitted, but no one, even a relative, may talk to a patient unless accompanied by a medical officer, who listens in. This, the visitor is told, is to prevent the patient from becoming tired from too much conversation.

Nevertheless, reports have seeped through these obstacles to indicate that, while the returned Japanese soldier is still loyal to the core, he has lost the picnic spirit he had last August.

UNION MAN GETS TWO YEARS, AND 11 MONTHS FOR SABOTAGE

By the Associated Press.

THE DALLES, Ore., April 16.—Dave Rutz, teamsters' union organizer for Eastern Oregon, was sentenced today to imprisonment for two years and 11 months on conviction of sabotaging tractors belonging to a company involved in a labor dispute.

The sentence was the most severe imposed thus far in a campaign against labor terrorism in which more than 100 persons have been arrested.

BRITAIN AND ITALY SIGN AGREEMENT ON DIFFERENCES

Diplomats seek to discern a possible five-Power pact which would bring Germany and Poland back into collaboration with Britain, France and Italy. They have long felt that Mussolini cherished the hope of such a pact and was awaiting a fit moment to advance the idea.

Officials indicate Italy is ready for negotiations with France.

In London, British official spokesmen emphasize the psychological value of the British-Italian accord, which, they say, Chamberlain hopes will be a "stepping stone" to complete restoration of British-Italian harmony and general European appeasement.

Immediately after the accord was signed, Chamberlain informed Mussolini of his hope that, when it actually became effective, it would "dispose of all outstanding points of difference between us."

That the agreement will not come into effect until after the "Spanish question has been settled" was set forth as a condition by the British in a letter written by Lord Perth to Count Ciano. The protocol itself states it will become effective "at a date the two governments will fix in common accord."

Mussolini in his telegram to Chamberlain, declared the agreement put British-Italian relations "on a solid and durable basis." He asserted he was convinced "there can now be opened between the two countries a new period of confidence and friendship. . . ."

Contents and Surprises.

The agreement consists of a protocol with eight annexes, an appended declaration and an exchange of letters. The Egyptian Minister, Mustapaha el Sadek Bey, signed those sections affecting relations with Egypt.

There were two surprises when the accord was published.

First, there was no mention of Palestine despite the expectation in British quarters that Italy virtually would approve in advance the British scheme for partitioning the land into Jewish and Arab states and an area under British mandate.

The terms of the annex relating to the exchange of military information cover Palestine, without mentioning her, while a further annex covers the problem of propaganda.

Second, Italy did not obtain expected recognition by Britain that her Mediterranean interests were "vital" while Britain's only were "essential."

The interests of both countries were established as vital by a reaffirmation of the gentlemen's agreement of Jan. 2, 1937.

Chamberlain and Mussolini Exchange Telegrams of "Satisfaction."

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 16. — These telegrams were exchanged today between Prime Minister Chamberlain and Premier Mussolini immediately after the signing of the British-Italian accord:

Chamberlain to Mussolini:

"I am delighted to learn from Lord Perth of the successful outcome of conversations between our two governments and I would like to say how much I and my colleagues have appreciated the spirit of good will and co-operation which has been applied to our discussions by Your Excellency, Count Ciano and all concerned on the Italian side.

"It is a matter of sincere satisfaction to me as I am sure it is also to Your Excellency that such a comprehensive agreement has been reached between us. I hope that this agreement when it comes into full operation will dispose of all outstanding points of difference between us and I confidently expect that thereafter relations between our two countries will once again be found firmly based on confidence and friendship which so long existed in the past."

Mussolini to Chamberlain:

"I thank you warmly for your message. I indeed am glad that the Anglo-Italian conversations have so happily ended and that the agreement reached gives you, as it does me, full saisfaction both as regards its scope and the spirit underlying it.

"It is a pleasure to me to assure you that I have sincerely appreciated the good will and cordial spirit of understanding which Your Excellency has shown. I have equally appreciated the work done by Lord Perth and by all those who have contributed to realization of the agreement.

"To have settled in so frank and full a fashion the questions outstanding between us places relations between England and Italy on a solid and durable basis.

"I am convinced that there can now be opened between the two countries a new period of confidence and friendship which is what you and I desire and which accords with our traditional relationship."

War Secretary Hore-Belisha Inspects British Defenses at Malta.

VALETTA, Malta, April 16.—Leslie Hore-Belisha, British War Secretary, arrived here today to inspect this Mediterranean defense bulwark. He came by air from Naples and was received with an artillery salute and a guard of honor. En route back to England, he will visit Premier Mussolini.

Hore-Belisha will confer with army officials Monday and inspect the giant guns protecting the shoreline.

The Air Ministry is speeding its 10-year program to give the navy a dependable air defense arm and help keep watch over Britain's Mediterranean lifeline.

One of the main steps now being taken to strengthen the island is the construction of an anti-submarine, torpedo-proof defense boom in Valetta harbor. Moorings already are in place and the boom itself, although not completed, is a great improvement over the one hastily built during the Ethiopian war. It consists of a row of small buoys from which a steel mesh net is suspended, with an electrically controlled gate to permit passage of war and merchant ships.

Official Summary of Accord Signed by Britain and Italy

LONDON, April 16.

Part One—The Protocol.

The protocol records that the Government of the United Kingdom and the Italian Government, being animated by a desire to place relations between their two countries on a solid and lasting basis and to contribute to the general cause of peace and security, decided to undertake conversations with a view to reaching agreement on questions of mutual concern.

It specifies instruments which have been drawn up and annexed to the protocol as a result of these conversations and provides they shall come into force on such a date as the two Governments together shall determine.

It further states that, upon these instruments taking effect, negotiations (wherein the Egyptian Government will be invited to participate insofar as they are concerned) shall be opened with a view to a definitive agreement on the boundaries between the Sudan, Kenya and British Somaliland on one hand and Italian East Africa on the other, and with regard to certain other matters such as trade, affecting relations between those territories.

The instruments annexed to protocol are eight in number.

(1) The Anglo-Italian declaration of Jan. 1, 1937, regarding the Mediterranean is reaffirmed as also are the exchange of notes of Dec. 31, 1936, regarding the status quo in the Mediterranean.

(2) The two parties agree to periodical exchange of information with regard to major prospective administrative movements or redistribution of their respective armed forces in their overseas territories in or bordering on the Mediterranean, Red Sea and the Gulf of Aden as well as in Egypt, Sudan, Italian East Africa, British Somaliland, Kenya, Uganda and the northern part of Tanganyika.

The two parties also agree to notify each other in advance of any decision to provide new naval or air bases in the Mediterranean east of longitude 19 degrees east and in the Red Sea or the approaches thereto.

(3) There is further a comprehensive agreement (consisting of eight articles) with regard to certain areas in the Middle East. The two parties bind themselves to respect the integrity and independence of Saudi Arabia and Yemen and agree that it is in their common interest that no other Power should interfere with the independence and integrity of those countries.

The agreement also deals with certain islands in the Red Sea and clarifies and regularizes the position between Britain and Italy in regard to certain areas in Southern Arabia which have long been under British protection. This applies in particular to the Aden protectorate where certain rights have been guaranteed to Italy.

(4) The declaration by the two Powers provides neither shall employ means of publicity or propaganda at its disposal to injure the interests of the other.

(5) The Italian Government reaffirm to His Majesty's Government their previous assurances they are fully conscious of their obligations toward the United Kingdom in the matter of Lake Tsana, the source of the Blue Nile in Ethiopia. The Egyptian Government are associated with this declaration.

(6) The Italian Government likewise reaffirm assurance which they gave the League of Nations June 29, 1936, to the effect the natives of Italian East Africa should not be compelled to undertake military duties other than local policing and territorial defense.

(7) The Italian Government also give undertaking with regard to the free exercise of religion by British nationals in Italian East Africa and the treatment of British religious bodies in that territory.

(8) Each party reaffirm their intentiton to abide by the convention of Oct. 29, 1888, which guarantees at all times and for all Powers the free use of the Suez Canal. The Egyptian Government are associated with this declaration.

Part Two—Exchange of Letters.

There follow a number of agreements taking the form of exchanges of letters.

Libya: The Italian Government state they have given orders for diminution of Italian forces in Libya and that withdrawals already have begun at the rate of 1000 a week and will continue at not less than this rate until a peacetime strength is reached; this will constitute a reduction by not less than half the forces present in Libya when the conversations opened.

London naval treaty: Italy further signifies her intention of acceding to the London naval treaty of 1936 as soon as instruments annexed to the protocol come into force and in the meantime of acting in conformity with provisions of the treaty.

Last but not least in the exchange of letters, the questions of Spain and Ethiopia:

Spain: The Italian Government confirm their adherence to the United Kingdom formula for proportional evacuation of foreign volunteers from Spain and pledge themselves to apply this evacuation at the moment and on conditions to be determined by the Non-Intervention Committee on the basis of that formula; they undertake that if this evacuation has not been completed by the close of the Spanish civil war, all remaining Italian volunteers will forthwith leave Spanish territory and all Italian war material will simultaneously be withdrawn; and they declare that Italy has no territorial or political aims and seeks no privileged economic position in or with regard to metropolitan Spain, the Balearic Islands, Spanish possessions overseas, or the Spanish zone of Morocco and has no intention of keeping any armed forces in those territories.

In taking note of these assurances regarding Italian policy on the subjct of Spain, His Majesty's Government take occasion to repeat they regard settlement of the Spanish question as the prerequisite of entry into force of the Anglo-Italian agreement.

Ethiopia: His Majesty's Government further state with regard to Ethiopia that, being desirous for removal of such obstacles as may impede the freedom of states members of the League of Nations as regards recognition of Italian sovereignty over that country, they intend to take steps at the forthcoming meeting of the League Council to clarify the situation of member states in that regard.

Part Three.

Finally there is a bon voisinage agreement (wherein Egypt participates in respect of the Sudan) to cover a period between the date of signature of the main agreement and completion of negotiations dealing with specific East African matters referred to in the protocol.

Thus this agreement will provide for co-operation with a view to preventing evasion of anti-slavery laws of the respective territories or enrollment of nationals of one party in native military formations of the other.

The protocol proper referred to in the above official summary contains an agreement that negotiations shall take place soon on commercial relations between Britain, India, British colonies and mandates and Italian East Africa "including the subject of the application of conditions to be established, to the whole of Italian East Africa, of the treaty of commerce and navigation signed in Rome June 15, 1883."

Annex one reaffirms previous Mediterranean agreements.

Annex two provides for reciprocal exchange of information each January on movements of military forces in possessions on the Mediterranean, Red Sea or the Gulf of Aden. It also calls for mutual notification of any new air or naval base plans in that territory.

Saudi Arabia and Yemen.

Annex three guarantees mutual respect of the integrity of Saudi Arabia and Yemen and promises "neither party will seek to obtain a privileged position of political character" in Saudi Arabia or Yemen.

It seeks to shut out any power from those two nations or the former Turkish Islands of the Red Sea.

Both Italy and Britain promise to refrain from seizing or fortifying the former Turkish Islands of the Red Sea which do not belong to Saudi Arabia or Yemen. Britain and Italy also promise to remain aloof from any conflict between Saudi Arabia and Yemen.

Annex three also deals with the Arabian zone east and south of Saudi Arabia and Yemen. In that area Britain promises to refrain from building any except purely defensive fortifications and pledges not to enroll inhabitants in military forces except for local defense and the preservation of order.

Britain will maintain the autonomy of Arab rulers and Italy promises not to try to acquire political influence in the zone. Italian citizens with business interests will be given access to towns and ports of the Aden protectorate as delimited in 1937 in the Aden protectorate order.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA MAKES FRIENDLY GESTURE TO NAZIS

President Benes Grants Amnesty to 1000 Germans Convicted of Political Offenses.

By the Associated Press.

PRAHA, Czechoslovakia, April 16.—President Eduard Benes today held out the hand of reconciliation to Germany and the 3,500,000 Germans within Czechoslovakia's borders.

He reasserted the Czechoslovaks' earnest desire for an understanding with Germany and issues a decree granting amnesty to political offenders. About 1000 Sudeten (South) Germans, convicted of political offenses, it is estimated, will be liberated under the decree promulgated at today's pre-Easter session of Parliament.

The immediate reaction of Germans here was that they wanted to see the practical workings of the amnesty before they rejoiced.

The Germans are the chief beneficiaries. Virtually all political offenders, except those who willfully committed or seriously prepared for acts of treason, or who engaged deliberately in espionage, are to be pardoned.

As a Nazi Views Decree.

Sudeten German Deputy Johann Neuwirth, chairman of the Henlein (Nazi) party's Legal Committee, said he found that amnesties in themselves are mere palliatives, correcting temporarily a situation that had become intolerable but not removing the causes.

The Germans, whose rights Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler has declared he would protect, have been demanding autonomy.

Neuwirth in his comment on the amnesty decree, declared: "The simple fact remains that conditions had become so unbearable that once again an act of mercy by the President had to be resorted to as the last constitutional way out."

"Changes in Our Neighborhood."

President Benes, in his Easter message, acknowledged that "changes have taken place in our neighborhood which vitally affect the entire European, and especially Central European, policy."

"I am not closing my eyes to the seriousness of the situation," he said. "We must undertake everything possible to help keep the peace. We are anxious that nothing be done by us that might increase the international tension between the great Powers. We are sincerely searching for a lasting understanding with all our neighbors. We have special faith in an understanding between ourselves and Germany and this, too, is the spirit of the communications that have come to us from responsible German sources.

"We believe that peace can be preserved only if the various regimes respect each other and if no state interferes directly or indirectly with the affairs of another state. Czechoslovakia will contribute to the maintenance of European peace by a just solution of the nationalities' problem.

"I appeal to our citizens irrespective of party membership—to the Czechs and Slovaks, to the Germans and the Hungarians, to the Ruthenians and the Poles. We all have equal duties, we all can make a great contribution to peace."

WHITNEY INQUIRY BY S E C TURNS TO J. P. MORGAN & CO.

F. D. Bartow to Be Asked About Visit to Morgan's Estate When Rescue of Broker Was Vetoed.

GEORGE WHITNEY, DAVISON CALLED

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—When the Securities and Exchange Commission, at 10 o'clock Monday morning, resumes its investigation into "Richard Whitney et al," it is planned that the first witness will be Francis D. Bartow, a Morgan partner. He is to be succeeded on the stand by two other partners of that house, Henry P. Davison and George Whitney, brother of the convicted broker. Later are to be summoned Howland S. Davis, chairman of the Business Conduct Committee of the New York Stock Exchange; John W. Davis and Edwin S. S. Sunderland of the law firm of Davis, Polk, Wardwell, Gardiner & Reed, counsel to J. P. Morgan & Co., and Roland L. Redmond of Carter, Ledyard & Milburn, attorneys for the Stock Exchange. It is possible, S E C examiners say, that J. P. Morgan may be added to this list of witnesses.

Bartow is to be questioned particularly concerning an interview which he had with Morgan on the afternoon of Sunday, March 6, at the latter's country estate, Matinicock Point, Glen Cove, Long Island. According to evidence before Judge Owen W. Bohan of General Sessions last Monday when he sentenced Richard Whitney to Sing Sing, the broker, on March 5 made a clean breast of his thefts to Bartow, and begged a loan of $280,000 with which to redeem securities unlawfully pledged as collateral for a loan from the Public National Bank & Trust Co.

Decision Against Saving Him.

Bartow declined to act until he consulted counsel. In the absence of George Whitney, who had gone to Florida after learning that the Stock Exchange was about to prefer charges against his brother, Bartow had interviews not only with Davis and Sunderland, but with two further Morgan partners, Arthur M. Anderson and Charles D. Dickey. The results of these conferences Barton proceeded to lay before Morgan at Glen Cove. It was then and there finally determined that J. P. Morgan & Co. would not intervene to save from doom the broker who owed his princely career to a twofold connection with Morgan—the fact that George Whitney was his brother, and that he was the accredited Morgan field marshal on the floor of the exchange.

In his report to Judge Bohan, District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey of New York County is regarded as having slurred over this meeting with the brief item that Bartow "motored out to Long Island, where he presented the situation to his senior partner, J. P. Morgan. Mr. Morgan made no suggestions." The S E C wishes to know precisely what was said and done, and especially what legal advice from Davis and Sunderland was relayed by Bartow to Morgan.

Not a few members of the bar hold that an individual or firm granting a loan to pay Whitney's debts, of whatever nature, could not be accused of wrongdoing, as the effect would be an act of justice in relieving the victims of his thefts. But it also is believed that, in so doing, unless the individual or firm also disclosed the broker's crimes, a charge might be made of accessory after the fact, or compounding a felony.

Unsecured Loan in 1931.

Bartow is to be questioned concerning the earliest known instance of improper conduct in Richard Whitney's career. In 1931, according to evidence on the record, Bartow, a director of the Corn Exchange Bank Trust Co., discovered that Whitney, also a director and a trader in securities, had committed the indiscretion of obtaining from the Corn Exchange Bank an unsecured loan of $300,000. Bartow reported the situation to George Whitney, with the result that J. P. Morgan & Co. made to its chief broker an unsecured loan of $500,000. Of this, $474,000 was still in arrears when Richard Whitney & Co. failed. S E C examiners desire to know whether the facts were disclosed to J. P. Morgan & Co., and whether this firm reported them to the Stock Exchange, of which it is a member.

In December, 1936, according to the record, George Whitney first discovered that his brother's affairs were in "an unwholesome condition." There was an overdue loan of $100,000 from the late George F. Baker, president of the First National Bank; and on the books of Richard Whitney & Co. were three accounts—of W. Deering Howe, De Lancey Kountze and Kenneth B. Schley—consisting of securities which the broker, allegedly with the consent of the owners, had pledged as collateral for loans to his firm and himself. George Whitney presumably considered that these accounts contributed to building up a false picture of his brother's personal resources.

Double-Crossed His Brother.

At any rate, George Whitney regarded the situation as grave enough to warrant his seeking advice from one of his partners, Henry P. Davison. The outcome was that George Whitney lent his brother $650,000, on condition that the Baker loan be paid and the objectionable accounts closed. Richard Whitney paid the loan, but double-crossed his brother by keeping the securities and pledging them for further borrowings.

Davison is to be asked whether the particulars of this incident were made known to J. P. Morgan & Co., or to other partners; and whether, once more, they were reported to the stock exchange. Since Richard Whitney owed his prestige less to his own genius and wealth than his relations with J. P. Morgan & Co., it is considered that the firm was under a particular moral obligation to supervise his affairs.

There is evidence that during the last seven years George Whitney repeatedly intervened to shield his brother from the consequences of unethical or criminal transactions, and that not until last November did he suggest that Richard Whitney & Co. discontinue business. His testimony is expected to show whether J. P. Morgan & Co. was privy to these intercessions, and especially how much it knew about a transaction of last Nov. 24, when the firm handled the mechanics of a deal whereby securities stolen by Whitney from the gratuity fund of the Stock Exchange were transferred from the Corn Exchange Bank & Trust Co., to their owner.

What S E C Wants to Know.

The Commission desires to know what J. P. Morgan proposes to do about the allegation that since 1931 some of its partners have been engaged in saving Richard Whitney from the effects of his improper or felonious acts—George Whitney throughout, Bartow in 1931 and Davison in 1936.

John W. Davis and Sunderland are to be questioned concerning the legal advice they gave to Bartow, which was reported by him to J. P. Morgan. Redmond is to be examined concerning his many roles in the case. He was counsel to the Stock Exchange and also one of the clients who confided securities to Richard Whitney with authority to pledge them as if they were his own. The examiners are also curious to know why Carter, Ledyard & Milburn were replaced as attorneys for the Stock Exchange, for the purposes of this examination, by Dean G. Acheson, former Under-secretary of the Treasury, and how Charles H. Tuttle, former United States Attorney, happened to be brought into the case as counsel for Richard Whitney.

Motive for Change in Policy.

The design in calling Howland S. Davis as a witness is to answer a question posed by District Attorney Dewey—namely, whether Richard Whitney's embezzlements from the exchange's gratuity fund were not the actual motive for "an important change of policy" which was adopted by the Business Conduct Committee last December and put into effect in January. For many years the exchange had sent semiannual questionnaires to its member firms engaged in margin trading. It decided finally to send these queries also to non-margin houses, including Richard Whitney & Co. It has been testified that Whitney escaped ruin for years by falsely representing that his firm had no margin accounts, and that the exchange required no proof of this statement beyond his own word.

The exchange, for the convenience of its auditors, staggers these questionnaires over the year in five groups. Richard Whitney & Co. was first assigned to the May group. Nevertheless, according to the record, Richard Whitney & Co., and that firm alone, was jumped up from the May to the January group, so that his exposure was hastened by four months. Howland Davis is to be questioned as to why the Business Conduct Committee adopted this significant procedure.

HARRY RICHMAN WEDS FORMER FOLLIES GIRL

17 Best Men Attend His Marriage in Florida to Mrs. Hazel Forbes Richmond.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., April 16.—Harry Richman had 17 best men today when he married Hazel Forbes Richmond, former Follies girl.

Among them were William B. Leeds, tinplate heir; Maj. Albert Warner, movie producer; Sailing Baruch, retired broker; Damon Runyon, writer, and Gar Wood, speedboat champion. Seymour Weiss, New Orleans political leader, gave the bride in marriage.

The ceremony was performed under coconut palms on the lawn of Richman's bay-front home, by County Judge W. F. Blanton. The bride's attendants were Mrs. Leeds, Mrs. Harold Weissman of New York and Mrs. Julio Sanchez of Miami.

Some 200 curious women, hoping to get a glimpse of the ceremony, blocked traffic outside the home. A wall blocked the view, but they shouted congratulations to Richman and his bride as they came out later in an automobile.

The pair will leave for New York by train tomorrow to sail April 20 for London, where Richman will open a singing engagement May 2.

Mrs. Richman, who gave her age as 27, inherited a cosmetic fortune from her second husband, Paul Owen Richmond of Marion, O., who died in 1932. She is the daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Forbes of Beverly Hills, Cal. Richman gave his age as 42.

LOSS OF CHICAGO BROKERS RISES TO $1,000,000

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 16.—An estimate that customer losses in the defunct brokerage firm of Hoagland Allum Co., Inc., might exceed $1,000,000, came today from Eugene O'Connor, investigator of the State's Attorney's blue sky division.

W. McNeil Kennedy, regional administrator for the Securities & Exchange Commission, previously had placed the figure at $750,000.

O'Connor's estimate followed questioning of Harold E. Railey, 35-year-old bookkeeper for the firm who appeared at the State's Attorney's office. O'Connor quoted him as saying he knew the company was "in a bad condition" during the last five years. Railey was held in technical custody.

Meanwhile additional complainants appeared. Assistant State's Attorney John Phillips said Louis Blumenthal, an attorney, told him that a client, George W. Smith of Evanston, a director of the Santa Fe Railroad, had been a heavy loser since 1932 in purchasing $300,000 worth of bonds underwritten by the company. Another victim reported by the State's Attorney's office was Herbert F. Wascher of Champaign, Ill., who said he lost between $2000 and $3000 placed with the company between 1922 and 1930.

To Seek Indictments.

Prosecutor Phillips said he would ask for indictments Monday or Tuesday against three officers of the company, George F. Allum, 52, of Wheaton, president; Olaf A. Larsen, 46, vice-president, and Henry A. Engel, 42, secretary-treasurer. They were held after headquarters of the concern were raided Thursday by police.

The partners were charged with embezzlement and held in jail in lieu of $200,000 bond each.

Detectives pressed an inquiry into the death Wednesday of another partner, Russell W. Brown, vice-president, who was found asphyxiated in his garage. They said they also would check the circumstances of the death of William J. Hoagland, former president, in a hotel five years ago.

The partners attributed customers' losses to unfavorable investments and an $80,000 a year overhead expense. The firm maintained lavish quarters in the financial district.

Allum Retells Story.

Assistant State's Attorney Phillips said Allum repeated his story that he had expected to rescue the firm with $671,000 in commissions on sales of rifles, airplanes and sulphur to foreign countries. Investigator Eugene O'Connor, who questioned Allum about these deals, reported he found no evidence of negotiations for such sales.

The warrants resulted from complaints by Joseph V. Moreschi of Chicago, general president of the International Hodcarriers, Building and Common Laborers' Union of America, with headquarters in Quincy, Mass., and Mrs. Mary L. Barnheisel, 76 years old, of Chicago.

Moreschi alleged he lost $41,500 in cash and bonds, plus $35,000 in bonds belonging to the union. Mrs. Barnheisel alleged she lost $25,000.

ARKANSAS WOMEN PRISONERS LASHED, WORKED LONG HOURS

State Agent Says Complaint Two Negroes Made to Roosevelt Is Apparently True.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 16.—A State Labor Department agent reported today that two Negro women prison inmates who complained to President Roosevelt they were ill treated apparently had been lashed and forced to work long hours.

The women—Margaret Porter and Estella Lovett—slipped from the prison bunk house to mail letters to President Roosevelt asserting they were lashed often, forced to work from 2 a. m. until 8:30 p. m. and given inadequate food.

Safety Engineer Wilson Runton submitted a formal report to the commissioner on prison conditions of the Jefferson County prison farm to Commissioner Ed I. McKinley. The investigation began several days ago when the U. S. Department of Labor referred to McKinley the Negroes' complaints to President Roosevelt.

"Charge No. 1 (lashings), it appears, is true," Runton said. Runton quoted the prison superintendent as saying work shifts of up to 18 hours a day had been necessary during the early spring crop planting time, but there were times when the women could rest. He said persons who had been released from the farm "stated that the whippings were severe and that men had been whipped until their clothing had been wet with blood."

$6,000,000 CITY SCHOOL BUILDING PROGRAM URGED

tables at 6012 Pernod avenue; one building to replace the Clinton, 1109 Grattan street, and the Peabody, 1606 South Eighteenth street; new Banneker (Negro) School, 2840 Lucas avenue.

In a report in February, Building Commissioner George W. Sanger listed 47 school buildings more than 40 years old, or more than one-third of those in the system, which, he said, were unsatisfactory for various reasons and contained potential fire hazards.

Of a $3,000,000 school bond issue voted in 1916, $1,135,000 is still outstanding, maturing July 1, 1939, but the sinking fund holds investments of $1,008,000 towards retirement. The only other school bonds are a $2,000,000 issue of 1934, maturing from 1940 to 1954. Board members have insisted that the 85-cent general school tax rate, retained for another four years in a recent election, would not provide enough money for an appreciable building program.

Public Hearings on Proposal for General Survey to Be Held.

Public hearings on the question of a general survey of the public school system will be held by a special committee of the Board of Education. Dates have not been set. The board held a preliminary hearing last Tuesday before creating the committee, which was directed to report next month on time and scope of a survey and the persons who would make it.

Asked whether a favorable recommendation on a survey was likely to be made, Arthur A. Blumeyer, chairman of the committee, said: "I think we're going to have a survey. I have a feeling the people want it, and we ought to give it to them. There is a question in my mind whether we ought to do some linen washing for ourselves first. Our current budget is $750,000 in excess of income and we ought to clean up that situation. We ought to go ahead with a building program also, without awaiting a survey. I look on a survey as more educational than financial in character."

With Blumeyer on the committee are Mrs. Haymer Lowenhaupt, who first proposed the survey last month; John J. Sheahan, James J. Fitzgerald and Dr. Solon Cameron.

WRONG MAN ARRESTED BY AGENTS IN CHURCH

Waiting for Extortionist They Get Treasurer Instead, Service Halted.

Holy Thursday evening services at Bethany Evangelical Lutheran Church, 4122 Natural Bridge avenue, were rudely interrupted last week when Department of Justice agents, lying in wait in the ushers' room for an extortionist, mistakenly arrested the treasurer of the congregation.

Disregarding the protests of the pastor and others that the treasurer, Adolph H. Vogt, had entered the room only because he had not been warned that there was a "plant" there, the agents took him downtown in custody, subsequently released him, but later followed him and his wife to their home at 4664 Penrose street and searched it.

J. Henry Roever, 7204 Normandy place, a member of Bethany congregation, had received a letter earlier in the week, threatening him with bodily harm if he did not place $1000 in a package and leave it in the ushers' room at Bethany Church on Holy Thursday during the evening services.

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents were notified, and in pursuance of arrangements made by them, a decoy package was prepared and left on the table in the room. By arrangement with the pastor, the Rev. Adolph Behnke, ushers and others likely to enter the room during services were notified that they were under no circumstances to go into the room.

Everybody, it appears, got these instructions except Treasurer Vogt. During the course of the service he had occasion to go into the room. Federal agents secreted there saw him approach the table, observe the package there, and move it to one side, before he turned away and began to look for something in one of the cabinets nearby.

At this juncture the agents emerged from their hiding places and arrested the bewildered treasurer. In the commotion which ensued, the church service was interrupted. Pastor Behnke and members of the congregation, learning of their treasurer's plight, insisted that he be released, that he could not possibly be involved in an extortion plant, and that, as a matter of fact, his action in pushing the package aside instead of picking it up and attempting to get away should convince even those who did not know him that he was not in the extortion business.

The agents were obdurate and took Vogt away with them, while members of the congregation remained at the church with Mrs. Vogt. At least one woman became so distressed at the incident that she was taken home ill.

After Vogt had been questioned by the agents downtown, he was returned to the church, rejoined his wife, and went home. When they arrived, they found that the agents had followed them and wanted to look through the house. This they were permitted to do. Apparently satisfied that they were after the wrong man, they finally went away.

ROBBER SHOT AFTER WOMAN EJECTS HIM

A youth brandishing a pocketknife attempted to hold up Aaron Cohen, 50 years old, in Cohen's shoe store at 2248 North Market street, shortly after 10 o'clock last night, and was shot in the right thigh by a night watchman after Mrs. Cohen had ejected him.

The youth pointed the knife-blade at Cohen's heart as he demanded a pair of shoes.

"I was paralyzed with fear," the 50-year-old dealer said later. But Mrs. Cohen, 40 and frail of physique, was not thus affected. She rushed upon the young man from the rear, seized his collar and the seat of his trousers, and shoved him through the front door, which she slammed after him. The youth, after a kick or two on the door, ran away.

The watchman, John Cottrell, who was across the street, called to the fleeing youth to stop, then fired three shots, one of which took effect. Caught a minute later in a house into which he went, the prisoner said he was James Dickerson, 19 years old, of 2242A (rear) Madison street.

At City Hospital, the wounded man was inclined to be boastful and flippant. "I rob banks," he said to an attendant who asked him as to his occupation. Police said they had no previous record relating to him.

Physicians said his wound was not serious. He will be held for consideration of his case by the Circuit Attorney's office. The knife, his only weapon, is of gaudy imitation, pearl-handled type, with blade about three inches long.

QUIET WHITE HOUSE EASTER; EGG ROLLING TOMORROW

President and Wife to Attend Church, Then Prepare for Children's Lawn Party.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—President and Mrs. Roosevelt have arranged for a quiet Easter as a prelude to the traditional egg rolling on the White House lawn Monday. They will attend morning services at St. Thomas Episcopal Church. Mrs. Roosevelt also will attend sunrise services in Arlington Cemetery and place a lily cross on the Unknown Soldier's tomb.

Monday—only day in the year when White House private grounds are open to the public—will find the President and Mrs. Roosevelt host and hostess to a huge throng. Mrs. Roosevelt will make several trips through the south grounds, where thousands of children will begin rolling and tossing bright-colored Easter eggs to band music at 9 a. m. Some time during the day, President Roosevelt is expected to appear on the south portico to greet the crowd. Gates will be thrown open to adults at 3 p. m.

WOMAN HELD ON ARMY CAPTAIN'S COMPLAINT

Postal Inspector Says Warrant For Use of Mails to Extort Will Be Sought.

A 23-year-old divorcee from Jonesboro, Tex., was held for postal authorities last night on complaint of an army captain that she had written him a threatening letter. Postoffice Inspector Rono Keefe said a warrant charging use of the mails to extort would be sought tomorrow.

The woman, who was arrested at Eighteenth street and Washington avenue, admitted, police said that she had written a letter to the officer, Capt. Edward F. Schneider, stationed at Lordsburg, N. M., saying that he "had better make good" checks which she had written against his bank account and signed with his name.

The woman who has been in St. Louis three weeks, told Detective Sergeant Kenneth McGuire, he said, that she met Capt. Schneider three years ago and was engaged to be married to him until he told her he was already married.

The officer sent her money subsequently, and also told her he would not object if she signed his name to an occasional check when she needed money, police quoted her as saying. She said she wrote a $10 check in this manner in Fort Worth, Tex., about a month ago and another for $40 at Dallas. The alleged extortion letter followed, police said, being mailed from St. Louis.

ARMED ROBBER HOLDS UP DRUGSTORE AND TAKES $40

Forces Clerk to Wait on Child, Then Puts Him and Customer in Rear Room.

Isadore Kammer, 1482 Blackstone avenue, a clerk in a drugstore at 1044 Park avenue, was held up by a robber who took about $40 from the cash register after forcing Kammer and a customer to go into a rear room at the store last night.

Kammer told police the robber, after telling him it was a holdup, ordered him to wait on a child who came into the store, but pointed his revolver at the next customer to enter, Robert Sattel, 1015 Rutger street. Kammer remarked to the robber, "You're the same man that visited us a few weeks ago. Why don't you leave us alone? Business is bum."

The store was robbed of about $200 on March 30.

SENATOR CLARK OPENS CAMPAIGN FOR RE-ELECTION

SPEAKER PRAISES RIVERFRONT WORK

Applauds Dickmann's Part in Putting Memorial Project Through—Urges Peace.

Two thousand St. Louis Democrats, including large bodies of City Hall, Federal building and Postoffice employes, attended the opening of United States Senator Bennett Champ Clark's campaign for re-election, at the Thomas Jefferson birthday dinner in three dining rooms at Hotel Jefferson last night.

The dinner was sponsored by the St. Louis Clark-for-Senator campaign committee, headed by Mayor Bernard F. Dickmann. President Roosevelt's picture was the centerpiece in the decorations, with the picture of Jefferson on one side, and that of Senator Clark on the other side. However, the talk in the preliminary speeches was chiefly about Clark, with a little about Jefferson and nothing about Roosevelt, until the Senator, in the middle of his address, named "Jefferson's great Democratic successor, Franklin D. Roosevelt." This brought prolonged applause.

All Quiet on New Deal Front.

The Roosevelt policies were not mentioned, except in relation to neutrality and keep-out-of-war measures. Nothing was said of the New Deal, or of the President's Supreme Court and executive reorganization bills, which Senator Clark opposed.

The latter part of Senator Clark's speech, following a eulogy of Jefferson, was about war and neutrality, and was a warning against propaganda which, the Senator said, was being put forth for a change from the policy established in the present neutrality law.

Threat to World Peace.

Clark urged "an active, aggressive sentiment for backing up the President and Congress in legislation for keeping the United States out of the quarrels of other nations."

"I would not sacrifice the life of one American boy," he said, "to protect all the Standard Oil Co. $200,000,000 investment in China. Let those seeking profits in war-torn countries do so at their own risk. Since a man's profits from the warring countries are his own business, let his risk be his own business too."

Senator Clark said he did not wish to appear an alarmist, and was not a jingo, but that he was compelled to recognize the threat to world peace shown in the fact that 2,500,000 more men are under arms in Europe than there were in 1914, and that armament expenditures exceed those of 1914 by billions of dollars. He continued:

Armament Race.

"I blush to say it, but it is the truth and should be shouted from the housetops and borne in on every lover of his country that in the new race in armament, fraught with so much disaster to the peace of the world, we are by no means free from blame. We have made a fetich of loudly proclaiming our devotion to the cause of religiously denied aggressive designs against any foreign country. It is true that we get less for the taxpayers' money than any other nation in the expenditure for armament—partly due to the fact that we have submitted more docilely to being plundered by shipbuilders and other purveyors of munitions than have other peoples.

"But the unescapable fact remains that we have actually increased our expenditures on Army and Navy in preparation for another and more dreadful war more rapidly than any European or Asiatic country in the period since the World War. In 1914 the total cost of our Army and Navy combined amounted to $348,000,000. For the next fiscal year the appropriations and authorizations will certainly be in excess of two billions and a half and may reach three billions."

Danger of War.

Citing the events preceding outbreak of the World War, the speaker declared that the very preparedness which had been urged in every nation as a defensive measure made war inevitable when once the spark was supplied. He said that, although the demand in the United States to keep the country out of that war was almost universal, and the people elected Woodrow Wilson in 1916 because "he kept us out of war," five months later we were fighting to "save the world for democracy" in the "war to end war."

"I say with all possible earnestness that if we want to avoid another war we must begin at once to formulate a policy based on an understanding of the problem," he asserted. "I frankly confess that I make no pretension to knowing of a policy which can provide an absolute and infallible guaranty against involvement in war. The only sure way to avoid another war is to prevent that war from breaking out.

"I believe that the United States can stay out of the next war if it wants to, and if it understands what is necessary to preserve neutrality.

"Let us profit from our experience and sacrifices in the last war. Let us not again drift into a war costing us the lives of the best and bravest of our youth as well as billions of dollars."

Commends Projected Memorial.

In eulogizing Thomas Jefferson as the author of the Louisiana Purchase of 1803, Senator Clark spoke in commendation of the proposed riverfront Jefferson Memorial National Park, for which he gave credit chiefly to Mayor Dickmann and the President.

The Mayor acted as toastmaster, and read messages from Gov. Stark; James P. Aylward of Kansas City, Democratic National Committeeman and State Chairman; Judge Kimbrough Stone of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals; and a message, orally conveyed by M. Waldo Hatler of Neosho, Mo., to the effect that Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan would be glad to come to Missouri to aid in the Clark campaign. Gov. Stark and Judge Stone indorsed Clark warmly, the Judge adding that "I would like to see him President." Aylward's message was merely one of regret at inability to attend, without personal mention of Clark.

At the Speaker's Table.

John B. Sullivan, president of the Jefferson Club, spoke briefly. Others at the speakers' table, who took bows, were former Gov. Elliott W. Major, whose term was from 1913 to 1917; Mrs. Nat S. Brown, National Committeewoman; Rubey Hulen, former state chairman; Mrs. Clark, and Robert E. Hannegan, chairman of the Democratic City Committee. Congressman C. Arthur Anderson, Tom K. Smith and Samuel W. Fordyce were in the audience.

Mrs. Fred D. Gardner, widow of Gov. Gardner, made a brief introduction of "Dear Bennett," whom she praised for his support of "democratic and constitutional government."

Besides the hotel's Gold Room, in which the main dinner took place, two other dining rooms on the same floor were filled with city and postal employes. Loud speakers carried the addresses to these rooms, but some of those who ate there moved their chairs to the main dining room for the speaking.

Oklahoma Easter Pageant.

By the Associated Press.

LAWTON, Ok., April 16—Southern Oklahoma's highways were burdened tonight by the pilgrimage of thousands moving into the Wichita Mountains near here for the twelfth annual Easter pageant. Fred Larrance, chairman of the pageant board, estimated 150,000 persons would keep a night-long vigil before the first scene in the life and death of Christ flashes upon the stage of the great natural rock amphitheater at 3:30 a. m.

A. F. L. FOR WAGE BILL AS DRAFTED IN HOUSE

Green Proposes Changes, However— Committee Head Seeks Action at This Session

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—The administration's latest effort to put a wage-hour law on the statute books at this session of Congress drew support today from the American Federation of Labor and Chairman O'Connor (Dem.), New York, of the House Rules Committee.

There was no apparent break, however, in strong Southern opposition to the legislation.

William Green, president of the A. F. of L., said in a statement that the federation "accepts and favors" the bill recently approved by the House Labor Committee. He added, however, the federation believed the bill could be improved, and proposed that it require at the outset a minimum wage of 40 cents an hour, a maximum work week of 40 hours instead of starting the standards at 25 cents and 44 hours and stepping them up to the 40-40 level over a three-year period.

O'Connor, who recently led a successful House revolt against the administration's Government reorganization bill, appealed to every member of his Rules Committee to back him in a movement to bring the legislation before the House at this session.

However, Representative Cox (Dem.), Georgia, one of the committee's outspoken critics of the legislation, said the group had not changed its attitude since last year, when a coalition of its Republican and Southern Democratic members blocked the legislation for months.

"It still is my opinion," Cox asserted, "that there will be no House consideration of any wage-hour legislation this year."

Many House members agreed the Rules Committee holds the key to the bill's fate, because proponents have made it plain they would not attempt again to overcome the committee's opposition by forcing the measure to the floor by a House petition. This method was employed successfully last year, but the House ultimately rejected the measure.

Representative McReynolds (Dem.), Tennessee, leader of the Southern bloc which fought the original bill, said the new version would work a "great hardship" on the South. He predicted it would never reach the House floor, but asserted if it did the resultant "disturbance" would make the rebellion against the original bill seem "only a circumstance."

DEPARTMENT STORE SALES OFF

7 Per Cent Less in Week Ending April 9 Than in Period Year Ago.

WASHINGTON, April 16. — The Federal Reserve Board estimated yesterday department store sales in the week ended April 9 were 7 per cent less than in the corresponding week last year.

Considering the fact that trade had the stimulus of Easter buying during the week this year, and that Easter already was past in the corresponding week last year, the board said sales really were about 14 per cent lower. For the four weeks ended April 9, sales averaged 11 per cent below last year.

STRIKE LEADER HIDING AFTER TUPELO BEATING

Mississippi Group Said to Have Used Belts on Back of Union Man.

By the Associated Press.

TUPELO, Miss., April 16. — Charles F. (Jimmy) Cox, 27-year-old strike leader, hid out today, recovering from injuries suffered late yesterday when a band of men stripped him and lashed his back with belts.

Labor leaders asked for an intervention by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Lee County officers also said they were making an inquiry. Several months ago the Tupelo cotton mills were closed after a sit-down strike led by Cox.

Prospects of a Department of Justice inquiry were dim because field agents reported to Washington the incident did not involve a Federal offense.

Cox is a former associate of Ida Sledge, 28, former prominent in Memphis society, but later an International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union organizer, now stationed at Baltimore, who charged last year she twice was escorted out of Tupelo by men who said her presence was "undesirable."

Cox could not be found by reporters, but Sarah Potter, Tupelo C I O representative, quoted him as saying 12 men forced him into an automobile here yesterday afternoon and drove to a spot 20 miles away.

"He told me the men tied a rope around his neck and planned to tie the rope to one of the cars and drag him, but that he talked them out of it," she said. "Then they tore off his shirt and stripped his other clothing from him.

"Cox said they stretched his body over a log and that 11 of the men took off their belts and beat him. They told him their names and asked if he wanted other information since 'we don't care what you know about us, because this is your last ride.' They gave no reason for beating him.

"Whether he broke away or they let him go, I don't know, but somehow he put on his clothes and walked to Pontotoc, Miss., where he telegraphed me he was all right."

Miss Potter said a pending Labor Board hearing in garment factory cases inspired the attack.

OPERATIONS THERE STILL SUSPENDED

No Settlement of Dispute, However — Independent Controversies on Two Public Projects.

American Federation of Labor building workmen will return to large public construction jobs tomorrow, ending a two-weeks strike called by the Building Trades Council in an unsuccessful effort to force the employment of union men at prevailing union wages on the reconstruction of the St. Charles highway bridge.

In announcing the decision of A. F. of L. business agents yesterday to end the strike, John J. Church, secretary of the Building Trades Council, explained "there was no point in continuing the strike since the bridge job has been stopped."

Preparatory work on the $390,000 bridge construction was halted after members of an independent union were stoned by A. F. of L. pickets 10 days ago. Church stated the union men would be called out again on major construction jobs if men not affiliated with the A. F. of L. resume work on the bridge.

Strike Called April 1.

The strike was called April 1 and the majority of the men, estimated by Church at several thousands, have been idle since quitting time that day. A. F. of L. building mechanics do not work on Saturday. Carpenters did not join in the protest until April 5 and emergency crews were permitted to work on jobs endangered by heavy rains.

Settlement does not include the new State Highway Patrol radio station in St. Louis County where union electricians have a grievance. Church said the nature of the grievance was not explained. Electricians will not return to the National Guard Armory because of a dispute with the American District Telegraph Co. of Missouri, which supplies a signal service to city institutions. The continued absence of electricians may force other workmen to suspend operations later.

Jobs to which the men will return include the Armory, Market street at Spring avenue; the $1,000,000 Psychopathic Hospital, Carroll and Grattan streets; United States Marine Hospital in Kirkwood; Fifth District Police Station, Nineteenth and Penrose streets; University City postoffice, 571 Kingsland avenue; Clayton City Hall addition; schools in Kirkwood and St. Charles, and road, sewer and viaduct construction. All are financed in part by PWA grants.

Contractor's Offer Rejected.

Harry Massman of Kansas City, whose firm has the bridge contract, conferred with representatives of the Building Trades Council here last week. He offered to hire A. F. of L. men for skilled work on the bridge, it was reported, but insisted on using laborers from St. Charles and St. Louis County who belong to an independent union. The proposal was rejected by Church, who demanded that only A. F. of L. members be employed.

One result of the strike, Church announced, was the assurance by the State Highway Commission that all future work let by it would specify the prevailing union wage scale of 67½ cents an hour for laborers. The Highway Commission let the contract for the St. Charles bridge work, part of the cost of which is being borne by the Federal Government.

U. S. SPENDING HITS ARKANSAS BOND SAVINGS, SAYS GOVERNOR

By the Associated Press.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 16.—Gov. Bailey foresaw today a sharp reduction in savings to the state in its million-dollar bond tender May 17 because the proposed spending program by the Federal Government had caused a price rise in state bonds.

The Governor said Arkansas bonds rose three points yesterday following President Roosevelt's "fireside chat." He said the President's announcement of a new relief program was the cause.

The state had saved about $3,000,000 through refunding since the passage of the 1934 Refunding Act, retiring bonds of approximately $15,000,000 par value for $12,000,000.

Extradition to Illinois Ordered.

By the Associated Press.

MADISON, Wis., April 16.—Gov. La Follette signed extradition papers today for removal of Jerome Welsch from Racine to Waukegan, Ill., on charges of murder and conspiracy to commit a felony. Welsch is accused of directing the robbery and killing of William Hancock, wealthy farmer near Antioch, Ill., in 1932.

You'll get $1,000.00 every year for life!

ALL YOU DO IS COMPLETE THIS SENTENCE:

"My favorite Libby Food is Libby's .... because................................." (write 30 additional words or less)

YOUR OWN WORDS. No fancy writing, nothing difficult. Just say what you would if you were talking to a friend.

LIKE THIS. You might write, for instance, that your favorite Libby Food is Libby's Peaches because the halves are so wonderfully uniform and their flavor is so gloriously rich and full and delicious. Or that you prefer Libby's Tomato Juice because it tastes exactly like the finest red-ripe salad tomatoes and is an excellent source of Vitamin C. Or, of Libby's Peas, you might say they're your favorite because they have a tenderness and flavor like that of peas picked fresh from the garden.

HURRY! Fill out an entry now. Send another next week, and the next. You can enter as many sentences as you want and of course each one increases your chances of winning. You can win! Just think of it—there are over 3,000 prizes!

READ THESE EASY RULES!

1. Complete the sentence quoted above, using 30 words or less. Use the entry blank or a plain sheet of paper, writing only on one side. Only the one sentence will be considered in each entry.

2. With your entry send labels, or facsimiles thereof, from three different Libby's Foods. Make your selections from Libby's brand Fruits, Vegetables, Tomato Juice, or Red Alaska Salmon. No other Libby labels are eligible.

3. Your entry must be original with you, in your own proper name and over your own signature with complete address and the name and address of the dealer from whom you bought the Libby Foods. He can help you win.

4. Mail your entry to Libby Contest Judges, Dept. S-3, Howard-Clark Bldg., Chicago, Ill. Enter as many sentences as you like, but each one must be submitted on a separate piece of paper with your signature, dealer's name, addresses (Rule 3) and 3 different Libby's labels (Rule 2).

5. All entries must be postmarked before midnight of July 9, 1938. Winners will be notified as soon as possible thereafter.

6. Entries will be judged and graded on sincerity, uniqueness, advertising value, and prizes will be awarded in the order of merit so determined. Penmanship and elaborate entries will not influence judges. Decisions of the judges must be accepted as final. In event of ties, duplicate prizes will be awarded. All entries and the right to use same become the property of Libby, McNeill & Libby.

7. This contest is limited to the United States. It is subject to all national, state and local laws and regulations. Employees of Libby, McNeill & Libby, employees of their advertising agencies, and members of their families, cannot compete.

Think what it would mean to have a check for $1,000.00 coming to you this year and every other year of your life. College for the children; travel; an independent old age.

And this first prize of a yearly income for life is only one of thousands of awards in this Libby contest! Couldn't you have a lot of fun with $2,000.00 spot cash? That's the second prize. There are scores of other cash prizes, and hundreds and hundreds of grocery purchase certificates.

10 PRIZES....... $100 EACH

PURCHASE CERTIFICATES ON GROCERS
—any store, any items

100 PRIZES ... each for $25 WORTH
100 PRIZES .. each for $10 WORTH

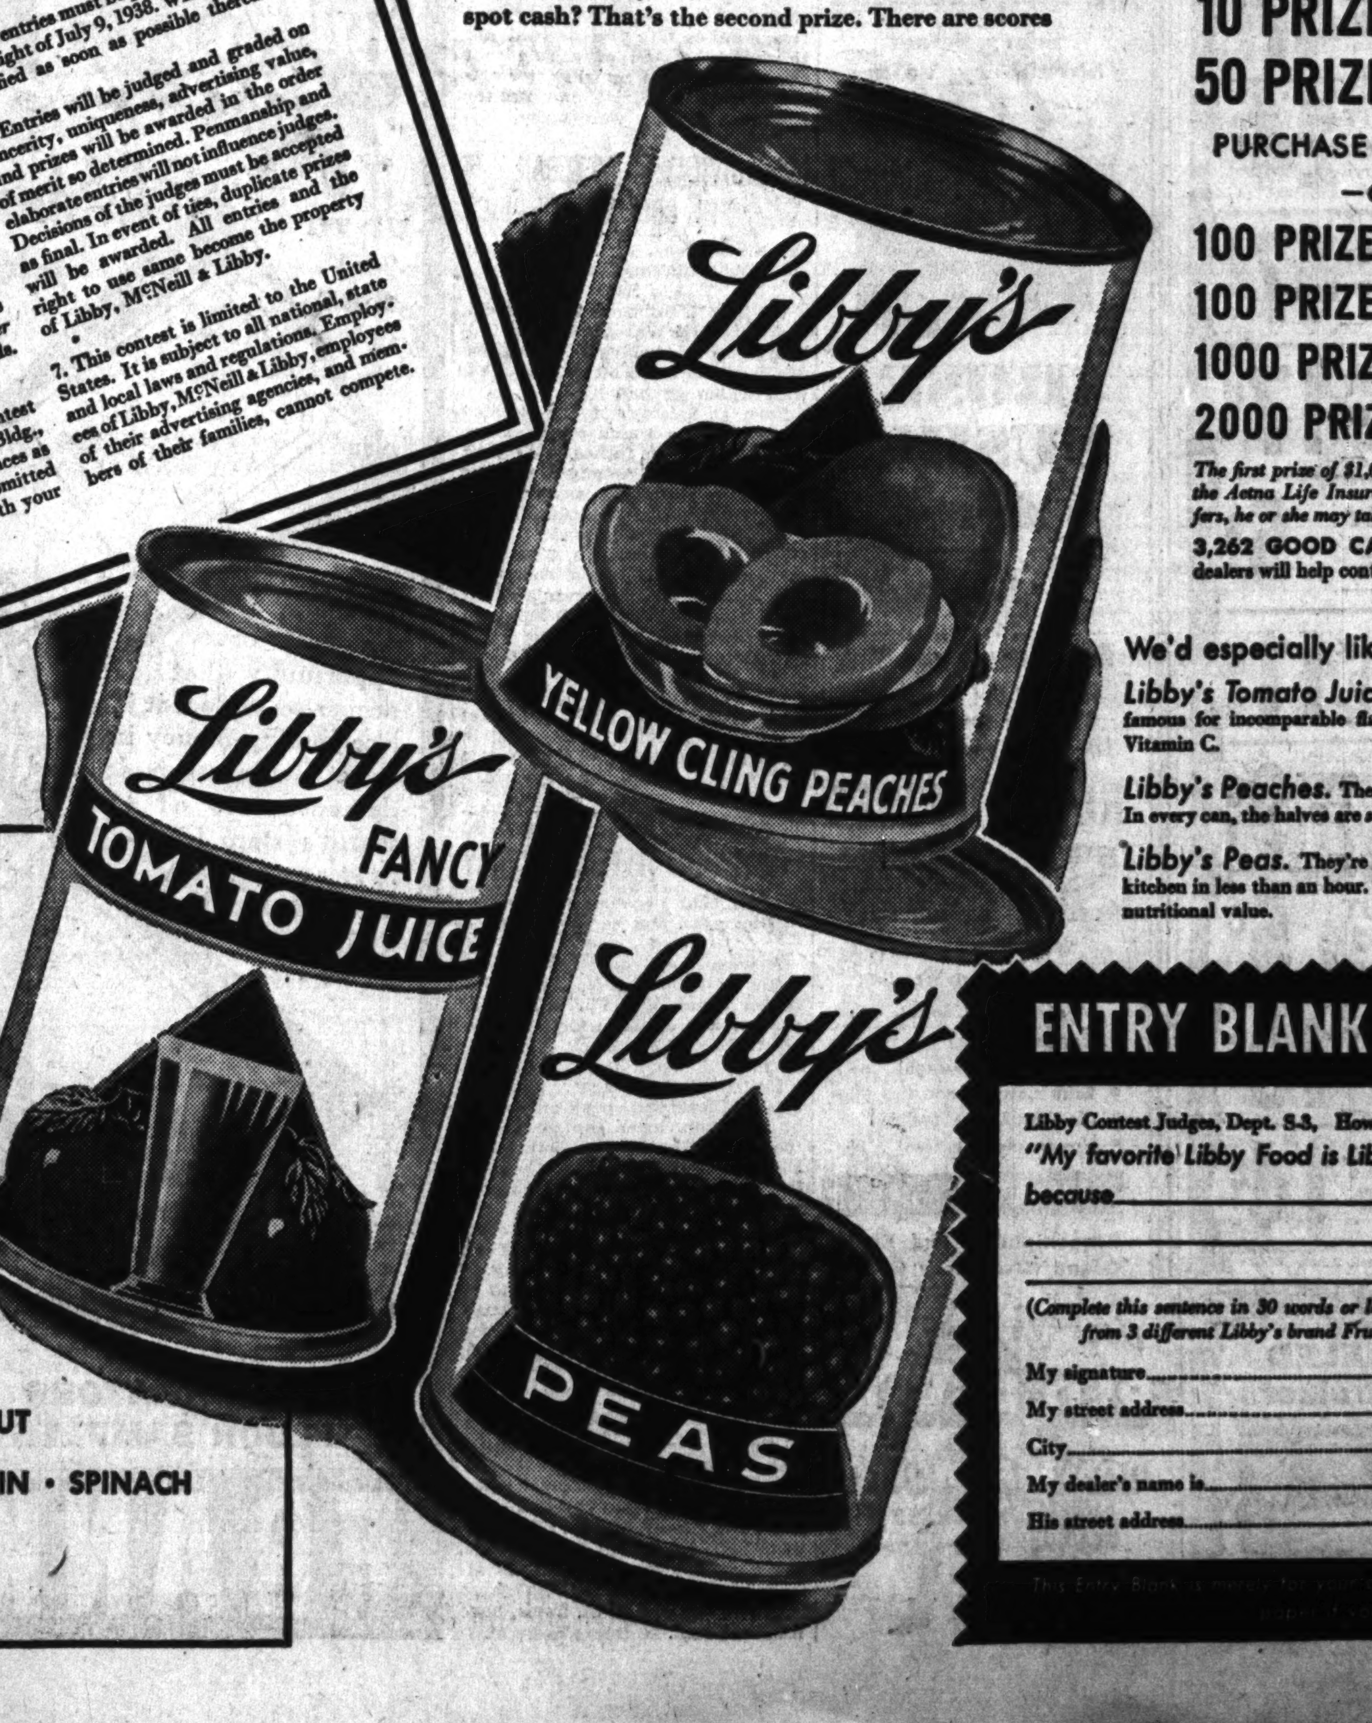
2000 PRIZES .. each for $2 WORTH

The first prize of $1,000 a year for life is in the form of an income policy of the Aetna Life Insurance Company of Hartford, Conn. If the winner prefers, he or she may take $12,000 in a lump sum instead of the life income.

3,262 GOOD CASH PRIZES FOR DEALERS, TOO—because dealers will help contestants win.



We'd especially like to have you try these:

Libby's Tomato Juice. It's made the exclusive gentle press way, famous for incomparable flavor. And Libby's is an excellent source of Vitamin C.

Libby's Peaches. The cream of the California crop, ripely delicious. In every can, the halves are superbly matched for size and shape and color.

Libby's Peas. They're quick-canned! Often they go from gardens to kitchen in less than an hour. That means extra tenderness and flavor; full nutritional value.

LABELS MUST BE FROM ONLY LIBBY'S FRUITS, VEGETABLES, TOMATO JUICE, OR SALMON

Each entry must be accompanied by labels (or facsimiles) from three different Libby's Foods. Why not all of one kind? Frankly, because we want you to get acquainted with Libby products. That's the reason for this contest—so you'll do some sampling right now. Of course, that doesn't mean buying anything extra. You'd be serving vegetables and fruits and tomato juice anyway. Just get Libby's. Here are some of the most popular Libby products:

GIRL KITE-FLYER BEATS 6 BOYS IN 'DOG FIGHT'

40 Entries in Contest Sponsored by Y. M. C. A. and West Side Kiwanis Club.

A kite flown by 14-year-old Jane Ehrhardt, one of three girls who participated in a contest in the parking lot at the rear of Municipal Theater in Forest Park yesterday, was the victor in a "dog fight" in which the kites of six boys were grounded.

Forty entrants in the contest, which was sponsored by the Y. M. C. A. and the West Side Kiwanis Club, displayed the flying qualities of their creations in a high, gusty wind. Several elaborate entries were blown into trees, and others were damaged when hurled to the ground by sudden gusts.

A huge box kite, seven feet wide and almost nine feet long, was the first downed in the "dog fight." However, in previous events it had firsts in two classes and the grand prize of the contest for its maker, Bill Ashby, 15 years old, 5223A Ashland avenue.

The girl's strategy in the battle of crossing strings was largely one of watchful waiting. After five kites had been downed, Miss Ehrhardt tangled kite strings with Frank Hotze, 13, of 760 East Big Bend road. The boy's string snapped, and his kite plunged into a tree.

Hotze and his brothers, Earl, 10, and Edward, 8, were the dominant entrants in all classes, although they were crowded out by Ashby's big cloth-covered kite in the competition for the grand prize. They are the sons of Harry Hotze, leader of a Cub Scout group and a kite enthusiast.

One of Frank Hotze's kites was first in the class for small entries, and third was won by Earl. The smallest kite in the class, two inches high, was entered by Howard Schilf, 4432 Washington boulevard, and won second place.

Charles Heth, 5553 Vernon avenue, made a kite on the grounds and had it in the air in 11 minutes in the "make-and-fly" class. Second and third places went to Edward and Frank Hotze. Frank's dragon kite, made up of a series of seven small green and red kites, was first in the competition for "odd and beautiful" entries. Edward and Earl placed second and third.

Earl Hotze also placed second in the box kite class, which was won by Ashby in a spectacular exhibition of maneuvering to keep the big box afloat. The kite tugged and fought like a hooked tarpon, forcing the boy to a mad pace of reeling and paying out his line. For a reel he used a short stick, turning it end over end to wind in the line.

TARGET SHOOTER WHO KILLED BOY FREED

Accident Verdict Is Returned in Death of Eugene J. Kroeck, 14.

James Lofton, 18 years old, who fired a .22-caliber bullet which killed 14-year-old Eugene J. Kroeck Friday, was exonerated yesterday by a Coroner's jury which returned a verdict of accident.

Eugene, one of the nine children of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Kroeck, 9914 Meadow avenue, Lemay, had remained away from Hancock Junior High School and was fishing with his brother, Richard, 13, from the limb of a tree overhanging the Mississippi River at the foot of Ripa avenue when the bullet struck him in the head.

Lofton, who resides at 9915 Lark avenue, took the witness stand at the inquest conducted by Coroner John O'Connell of St. Louis County at the Fendler undertaking establishment, 744 Lemay Ferry road. He testified that after shooting several times at tin cans he saw a blackbird fly into the tree, fired at it from a distance of about 500 feet and saw the bird fly away. He said he was not aware that the boy, who wore a black cap, was in the tree.

Richard Kroeck testified he and Eugene had shouted warnings when they had heard shots fired in the thickly wooded section about them. When Eugene fell from the limb on being struck, Richard jumped into the shallow water and pulled him ashore.

He explained their absence from school by saying they had arrived five minutes late and decided not to report because of a rule that required them to remain after afternoon dismissal for 15 minutes for each minute they were tardy.

LAST CIVIL WAR VETERAN IN COLLINSVILLE DIES

W. N. Stibbens, 94, was in Army Under Sherman on March to Sea.

William N. Stibbens, 94 years old, the last Civil War veteran in Collinsville, died today of infirmities of age at the home of his son, John, with whom he had lived.

Born at Salem, Ind., he enlisted in 1861 in the Union army at the age of 16 with his father, and served during the war. Among the major actions in which he was engaged was the siege of Vicksburg, the Wilderness campaign under Gen. Grant, Gen. Sherman's march to the sea, and part of the campaign in Missouri. After the war he lived for a time at Richmond, Mo., and later was an Illinois coal miner. He had lived at Collinsville for 20 years.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Tuesday from First Baptist Church, Collinsville, with burial in St. John's Cemetery. Besides his son, three grandchildren survive.

LIVESTOCK MEN CONDEMN C C C'S USE OF FOREIGN MEAT

Urge Government to Buy Domestic Product; Consumption Low in 1937.

CHICAGO, April 16.—Members of the Chicago Livestock Exchange sent a resolution to President Roosevelt today condemning the practice of buying foreign meats for use in the Civilian Conservation Corps camps and other Government agencies, and urging purchase of domestic meats.

Charles R. Rice, president, said, "The United States meat consumption per capita during 1937 was one of the lowest on record. This very adversely affected the income and therefore the prosperity of the American farmer, feeder and stock producer. The objective of increasing as quickly and as much as possible the market for meat will necessarily reflect itself in added prosperity for the livestock industry."

MAN HELD FOR LEVINE EXTORTION ATTEMPT

Pleads Not Guilty, Says Two Others "Engineered Me Into This Thing."

By the Associated Press.

SALT LAKE CITY, April 16. — Secondo Frank Conti, charged with attempting to extort $25,000 from the family of Peter David Levine, 12 years old, missing New Rochelle, N. Y., boy, pleaded not guilty today when arraigned before a United States Commissioner.

Conti, 48, told Commissioner Edward D. Dunn he had read the complaint and wished to plead "not guilty, as this complaint puts it all on me." Enroute to the commissioner's office, Conti said he was "engineered into this thing by two other fellows."

"I don't know the men except by the names of Chuck and Jack," said Conti, a waiter who was employed here in a fashionable restaurant. "They called me from the East and claimed they knew all about it (the kidnaping). I only did what they asked me to do. I met them in Denver."

Bond was set at $5000, which Conti was unable to furnish. His hearing was set for next Wednesday.

Conti was arrested in the business district here Friday afternoon, but announcement of his arrest was not made until today. Federal agents said he had no actual connection with the kidnaping of the Levine boy, who disappeared Feb. 24 at New Rochelle.

Conti was accused of sending a letter to a prominent Denver, Colo., clergyman asking for $25,000. The letter was mailed in Denver. In a second letter sent by airmail to the Rev. Francis H. H. Coffin, at Larchmont, N. Y., the first letter was mentioned and $10,000 was demanded in order to effect the boy's release before Easter, Federal agents said. This sum was to be sent by telegram to a person in Salt Lake City, whose name was not disclosed, with the balance to be paid when the boy returned home.

PAINT-UP, CLEAN-UP, FIX-UP CAMPAIGN STARTS TOMORROW

3000 Children to Parade Tuesday to Call Attention to Annual Drive.

The annual campaign sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce and allied groups to persuade St. Louisans to clean up, paint and renovate their homes and yards will begin tomorrow and continue through April 30.

To call attention to the campaign, 3000 school children, dressed in costumes and carrying banners and signs, will parade through the downtown streets Tuesday morning. The parade will form at Thirteenth and Locust streets, proceed east on Locust to Broadway, south on Broadway to Chestnut street, and east on Chestnut to Fourteenth street, where it will disband.

GAMBLER'S CHANCE IS EVEN OR WORSE BUT HE CAN'T WIN

Illinois U. Mathematician Analyzes Theories of Different Systems of Play.

By the Associated Press.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., April 16.—P. R. Halmos of the University of Illinois told the American Mathematical Society today computations showed the gambler can't win if he plays for long, and chances are that he will break even. His paper, entitled "Invariants of certain stochastic transformations," turned out to be a discussion of the mathematical theory of gambling systems.

No matter how clever or involved the system, the gambler's expectation of winning or losing remains the same, Halmos pointed out. In gambling at Monte Carlo, where the house deducts a fixed percentage, the expectation of winning is negative over a long period. The winner may finish ahead if he leaves after a long run of luck, but if he continues to play he will find he cannot beat the house.

In dice, the probability of throwing 7 or 11 is about 11 to 2 with every throw, no matter what has been the previous throw.

In pitching pennies, the probability of heads or of tails is even, regardless of whether the toss is the first or comes after a long run of heads or of tails.

RANCHER ACCUSED OF KILLING 3 FAILS IN SUICIDE ATTEMPT

By the Associated Press.

LEWISTOWN, Mont., April 16.—Lee Simpson, 50-year-old rancher, held for questioning in the killing of three men, slashed his wrists in a suicide attempt today.

Before he collapsed on his jail bed, he wrote a message in blood on the cell wall, saying:

"The result of a frameup through my wife and——"

The prisoner had asserted, the Sheriff said, that an attempt by his wife and others to steal his ranch impelled him to kill Robert and Gerald McDonald, brothers who worked for him.

The Sheriff said Simpson also confessed killing Deputy Sheriff Arthur Burford of Ryegate during a fight at Simpson's ranch Thursday night, and that after he surrendered yesterday, he turned over a "death list" naming 14 persons beside the McDonald brothers. The intended victims were accused by Simpson of conniving to "steal" his ranch.

The prisoner was expected to recover from the loss of blood.

DRIVER GETS 60 DAYS, FINED

Railroad Engineer's License Suspended Also; In Collison.

Robert B. Robertson, a railroad engineer, 3845A Kennerly avenue, was sentenced to 60 days in the Workhouse, fined $250, and his driver's license was suspended for six months on a charge of careless driving by Police Judge Edward M. Ruddy yesterday.

A car driven by Robertson struck one driven by Sylvester Cook, 6338 Albertine avenue, West Walnut Manor, at Lexington and Fair avenues last March 10, overturning Cook's automobile and slightly injuring Cook and three persons with him. Cook and his three passengers testified Robertson was driving at high speed. Robertson did not testify, but appealed.

LIQUOR LICENSES SUSPENDED

Owners of Two Taverns Charged With Violating Closing Law.

The liquor licenses of Albert P. Finck, 3154 Chippewa street, and Mrs. Eva Bauer, 3926 Olive street, were suspended for four and five days, respectively, by Excise Commissioner Lawrence McDaniel yesterday after hearings which showed the places remained open after Saturday midnight.

Police testified Finck's tavern was open at 2:30 a. m., March 20, with drinks on the tables. McDaniel said he visited the other place a week later and found that beer was being served. Mrs. Bauer pleaded that her customers were slow in leaving.

AUTO FALLS ON ITS OWNER

Man's Leg Injured When He Pulls Car Off Hoist.

Cleveland Deverger, a machinist, 1317 Prairie avenue, suffered an injury of the right leg when he pulled his automobile off a hydraulic hoist at a filling station at 3900 Cottage avenue yesterday afternoon, pinning his leg.

Deverger took the machine in to be greased and while it was on the raised rack he climbed a ladder to get a tool out of the car. He lost his balance and in falling grabbed the car, pulling it off the rack, police reportde. He was taken to City Hospital.

A campaign to enroll 10,000 members in the Women's Field Army of the American Society for the Control of Cancer will be started at a meeting of the organization at 2 p. m. tomorrow at Famous-Barr auditorium.

Floating Gasoline Station.

A large river barge, powered by outboard motors instead of by the customary towing tug, tied up at the foot of Market street yesterday afternoon after a trip down the Missouri and Mississippi rivers from Napoleon, Mo. The Schneider Sales and Service Co., motor boat dealers, bought the barge from the Army Corps of Engineers for use as a floating service station on the Alton Pool, E. J. A. Schneider, officer of the concern, said to Post-Dispatch reporter.

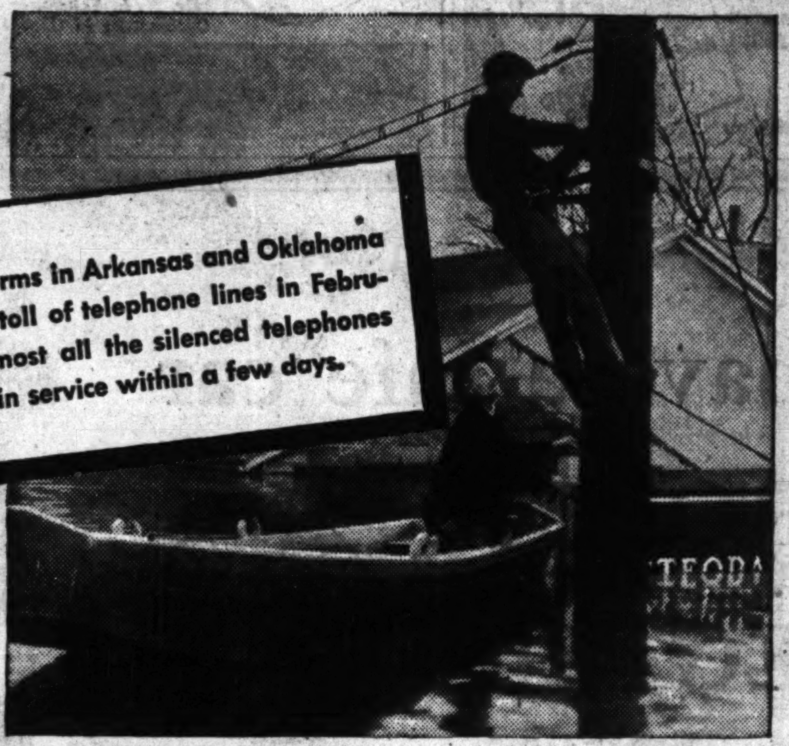
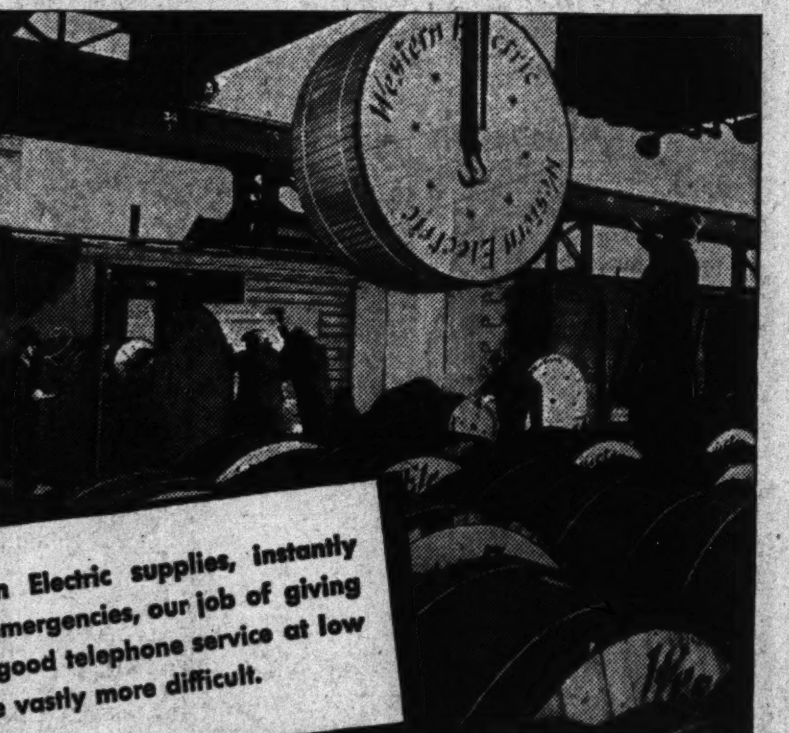
The telephone company depends upon Western Electric . . . Bell System supply unit . . . to pour material into wrecked areas AT ONCE!



Floods and storms in Arkansas and Oklahoma took heavy toll of telephone lines in February. Yet almost all the silenced telephones were back in service within a few days.

One reason: Western Electric warehouses are spotted so no Southwestern Bell town is farther than an overnight jump. From these, needed material poured into the wrecked areas as rapidly as our repair crews arrived.



Without Western Electric supplies, instantly available in emergencies, our job of giving you constant good telephone service at low cost would be vastly more difficult.

One reason for this low cost: Western Electric prices are moderate. Over the last 20 years its earnings have averaged less than 7% . . . in recent years only about half the rate of a representative group of comparable manufacturers.

HORNER CALLS VICTORY A "STEP FORWARD"

Illinois Governor Refers to Success of His Candidates at Polls.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 16.—Gov. Henry Horner, in a radio speech, his first public address since the victory of his candidates in Tuesday's primary election, termed the results tonight "a mighty step forward in civic life." There was nothing in his speech that could be taken as an overture of peace to the Democratic forces of Mayor Edward J. Kelly and National Committeeman Patrick A. Nash—the Chicago machine he threatened to smash at the polls.

"The victory of last Tuesday was not a personal victory," Gov. Horner said. "It was the rank and file of the voters who achieved the result. Let us not call it a victory so much as a mighty step forward in civic life. And so, in other and future civic enterprises, never should the true principles be submerged in factionalism.

"All the candidates, successful or otherwise, for both State and local offices, will, I hope, accept the results only in the generous manner befitting thoroughbred Americans, and with the recognition of the fact that we must gallantly carry our tremendous party responsibilities."

State Program.

He turned then to a discussion of "important and serious problems with which our State is confronted." "We need a new State Constitution to meet the many new problems that have arisin since our present one was adopted nearly three-quarters of a century ago," he said. "Therefore, I shall continue my efforts for the adoption by the State Legislature of a resolution submitting to a referendum of the people the calling of a State constitutional convention."

The Governor said legislation was needed in order that Illinois might avail itself of Federal funds earmarked for Illinois for low-cost housing.

"The subject of unemployment relief is still a serious one with us," he said. "The recession is causing a serious drain on State funds and, unless checked, and that shortly, we must consider the revision of our entire state and local relief setup.

Roosevelt Plan Praised.

"The recession has reached such serious proportions that President Roosevelt on Thursday sent a message to Congress in which he called attention to its grave consequences and proposed a plan to prevent further inroads by it on our economic structure.

"I believe his plan to be workable. His plan will at least in substantial measure ameliorate the economic maladjustment in which we find ourselves.

"Certain critics of our President have already begun to attack his plan, although they offer no better one in its place. While in our great American democracy anyone has the privilege of fairly criticising any acts of government with which he does not agree, yet it is manifestly unfair in these uncertain times for critcism to develop into misrepresentations to the American people.

"May I therefore ask each of you before you form any definite conclusions about the presidential plan to read and study it carefully, without prejudice, and study it with the thought in mind that it is a plan honestly conceived by a heart that beats in sympathy with the under-privileged; a plan wrought by a mind concerned in defeating the recession and aiding fair business—large and small."

Gov. Horner did not mention the subject of a special session of the Legislature in his address and declined to comment on whether he would call one this spring.

10 SENTENCED AT QUINCY FOR MANN ACT VIOLATION

By the Associated Press.

QUINCY, Ill., April 16.—United States District Julk J. Leroy Adair sentenced five men and five women to prison or the workhouse today for violation of the Mann Act. They pleaded guilty or were convicted at a trial two weeks ago.

Those sentenced included: Louella, alias Helen Couch, two years; Roy R. Bowen, two and one-half years; Lillian Shipley, year and a day; Julia June Basford, year and a day; Charles Agard, 18 months; Howard A. Murray, three years; Clarice Burham, year and a day; Phyllis Hatfield, year and a day; Virgil Mayberry, year and a day, and Rex Beshears, 60 days.

Beshears was sentenced to the Quincy workhouse. The others will be taken to Federal penitentiaries.

Tracey C. Wright was sentenced to two years and nine months in prison on a counterfeiting charge.

Sleeps 27 Days.

By the Associated Press.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., April 16.—Little George Kistner surprised his grandmother, Mrs. Myrtle Gaines, today by opening his eyes, yawning twice and beginning to talk. The 4-year-old lad had been asleep for 27 days, a victim of encephalitis contracted after a siege of measles. Doctors said the boy still was weak, but apparently was on the road to recovery.

TOWNSEND ON WAY TO JAIL, CONSULTS AIDS IN CHICAGO

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 16.—Enroute to Washington to begin serving a 30-day jail term for contempt of a House committee, Dr. Francis E. Townsend, old-age pension advocate, interrupted his journey today to confer here with representatives of the Townsend Recovery Plan.

The United States Supreme Court declined early this week to review a lower court decision sentencing Townsend to jail an fining him $100 for walking out of a House of Representatives committee hearing in May, 1936, while being questioned about his $200 a month pension plan.

A presidential pardon, asked for by Senator McAdoo (Dem.), California, and others was Townsend's only remaining hope of evading the jail term. He said he planned to leave tomorrow by plane.

Why didn't somebody TELL me?

WITHIN the next twelve months, some 300,000 motorists are going to buy cars at or about the price of a LaSalle—and still not get a LaSalle.

Many of these, we are convinced, will do this because they do not appreciate how little a LaSalle costs. They assume that LaSalle's price is high—because its quality and reputation are so high.

But this isn't true! As a matter of fact, you can pay more for certain models of eleven other cars than it costs to get a new LaSalle V-8.

If you expect to pay more than $1,000 for your next motor car—go on up and get a LaSalle. You ought to do this because there is really no substitute for Cadillac quality, Cadillac safety and Cadillac prestige.

Why not come in today for a demonstration?

G. O. P. TO CARRY FIGHT TO COUNTRY ON PUMP-PRIMING

Democratic Critics of President in Congress Generally Refuse to Go Along With Them.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—Republican leaders agreed today to carry a fight to the country against further huge pump-priming expenditures by the Federal Government, but Democratic critics of the President refused, in the main, to go along with them.

The Roosevelt opposition within the Democratic party determined, however, to join in a vigorous effort to restrict the President's authority over his proposed $4,500,000,000 program of lending and spending to end the depression.

Some Republicans said they hoped this effort to earmark the purposes for which funds could be used would result in prolonged debate in Congress, during which public opinion might be registered against increased Federal spending.

Administration leaders predicted quick approval of the President's recommendations and went ahead with arrangements for committee hearings Wednesday. Chairman Taylor said he hoped to have the program ready for consideration by the House May 1.

Democrats' Lines of Attack.

Senator Van Nuys (Dem.), Indiana, suggested today the proposed $1,250,000,000 W P A appropriation should be restricted to require expenditure only "on the basis of actual need" among the various states.

A similar view was expressed by Senator Wheeler (Dem.), Montana, who also suggested that $250,000,000 of the proposed public works program should be earmarked for reclamation projects.

Senator Norris (Ind.), Nebraska, predicted the relief measure would be approved substantially in the form outlined by Mr. Roosevelt.

Senator Adams (Dem.), Colorado, a member of the Senate Appropriations Committee, forecast that that committee would give the relief measure prompt consideration if it were passed by the House. Adams probably will be in charge of the bill in the Senate.

Bank Head Expects Quick Action.

Speaker Bankhead predicted there would be little serious opposition in the House to the President's program.

"There will be controversy, of course," he said, "but I believe the House will go along with the President's suggestions. Personally I am very much in sympathy with the proposed expenditures. I regret the necessity for them, of course, but we might just as well face these things frankly."

Bankhead said he saw no reason why the program should unduly delay adjournment, now tentatively set for May 14. He said, however, he knew nothing of President Roosevelt's intentions regarding anti-monopoly legislation or proposals for abolition of tax exemptions on public bonds and salaries. He said he thought the message on monopolistic practices probably would be confined to recommendations for a congressional study of the problem.

Hamilton on Radio Tonight.

The Republican National Committee announced that John Hamilton, its chairman, would speak on the network at 7 p. m. St. Louis time, tomorrow night. He will discuss the question "Where Are We Bound?" This will be his first address over a national network since Nov. 5. There was no advance indication of what Hamilton might say.

"Pump-priming" is the subject of a debate between Senator Vandenberg (Rep.), Michigan, and Senator Hill (Dem.), Alabama, on the radio at 6 p. m. St. Louis time tomorrow.

Without waiting for Congress to provide additional funds, Secretary of the Interior Ickes, the Public Works Administrator, resumed spending under the old P W A program today. He apportioned $3,119,902 in loans and grants to help finance the construction of 58 schools and school additions in 27 states. Ickes said these allotments would be financed under existing legislation from the sale of bonds and other securities.

The Works Progress Administration, it is said, will soon place a "substantial" order in the cotton cloth markets for materials to be used in work-relief sewing rooms.

Governors Discuss Program.

Several Governors were here today for conferences with Government spending and lending agencies.

Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan discussed with Secretary Ickes a $12,000,000 hospital modernization program, and a $1,000,000 State Fair building construction program. With Harry L. Hopkins, the Works Progress Administrator, he talked over the details of transferring from 40,000 to 60,000 persons from direct relief to work relief.

Creation of Three Saints At Vatican Service Today

By the Associated Press.

VATICAN CITY, April 16.—Pope Pius tomorrow formally will give three new saints to Catholics for veneration in the most elaborate Easter services at St. Peter's in years.

Some 40,000 persons are expected to crowd into the great basilica while perhaps four times that many will wait in the square outside for the blessing which the Pope will bestow from the balcony.

Red damask has been hung from the pilasters of St. Peter's and the great throne has been drawn near the altar, protected by tapestries 40 feet long to spare the aged and ailing Pope from drafts.

The Pope will enter on his portable throne. He will be preceded by his trumpeteers, flanked by his guardsmen and followed by Cardinals and lesser prelates.

After preliminary ceremonies, the decree of canonization of the three new saints will be read and the Pope will assent in the Latin for: "We will it."

The three to be venerated publicly for the first time are Andrea Bobola, Polish Jesuit; Salvador da Horta, Spanish lay Franciscan, and Giovanni Leonardi, Italian priest.

A "te deum" will burst from the Sistine choir and the Pope will lead the first prayers to the new saints.

The Easter mass then will be celebrated by Cardinal Pignatelli di Belmonte, dean of the Sacred College.

After the mass, the Pope will be borne to the great hall behind the balcony where a compartment has been set up to permit him to rest in comfort and to allow his physician, Dr. Aminta Milani, to make sure he is able to continue with the ceremonies.

The throne then will be carried out on the balcony and the Pope will give his benediction. Loud speakers will carry his words to those in the square and radio will carry the blessing to Catholics throughout the world.

The colonnades, facade, dome and cupola of St. Peter's will be illuminated tomorrow night in honor of the new saints.

Pilgrims from all parts of the world, with many from the United States, have been attracted here by the Vatican's Easter services.

Today, church bells, which had been silent since Holy Thursday, rang out the end of Lent. Many new priests, including Americans who prepared for the priesthood in Rome, were ordained.

EASTER SERVICES START AT SUNRISE TODAY

Special Celebrations in Churches and Parks Throughout City.

With fair weather and moderate temperature forecast for today several outdoor Easter sunrise services were scheduled by Protestant churches in parks and other places, and special services were planned by both Catholic and Protestant congregations.

Solemn pontifical mass was to be celebrated at St. Louis Cathedral at 11 o'clock, with Archbishop Glennon officiating. Most principal masses of the day were to be held at that time, with low masses beginning at 6 a. m. Easter vespers were scheduled at the Cathedral at 4 p. m., the Very Rev. Nicholas W. Brinkmann, pastor, officiating.

Twenty-two Protestant denominations co-operated in sunrise services to be held at 6:15 a. m. in the Municipal Theater, Forest Park, sponsored by the Metropolitan Church Federation. This service, presented for the twelfth successive year, was the largest of those planned.

The Rev. Dr. Wilbert Dowson, pastor of Grace Methodist Church, was to deliver the sermon, on the subject, "From Gloom to Gladness." The service was to be broadcast from 6:30 to 7 o'clock by the Columbia network, being carried locally by KMOX and KSD. Musical organizations on the program were the New Apollo Club and choirs of Centenary Methodist and Kingshighway Presbyterian churches.

Christian Endeavorers' Program.

St. Louis Christian Endeavorers planned their eleventh annual interdenominational service at 6 a. m. at the Grand boulevard entrance of Tower Grove Park. The Rev. Alex Asher of Boyle Memorial Center was to deliver the sermon, on "The Real Resurrection Power." At Francis Park, the Rev. E. G. Walker of Kingshighway Baptist Church was to speak at a sunrise service, sponsored by District 7 of the Metropolitan Church Federation.

Jefferson Barracks planned its fourth annual sunrise service, with Dr. George A. Campbell, former president of the Metropolitan Church Federation, as principal speaker. The service was planned by Lieutenant-Colonel Walter B. Zimmerman, post chaplain, in conjunction with the Carondelet Ministers' Alliance.

Concordia Service.

Other sunrise services were planned at Concordia Seminary, at 5:30 a. m., with the Rev. Dr. W. A. Maier preaching, and at Ainad Temple, East St. Louis. There, at 6 a. m., Dr. Paul Lamont Thompson, president of Shurtleff College, Alton, was to deliver the sermon, with a chorus of 200 mixed voices from East St. Louis High School singing.

Free Masons and their families will attend an Easter service at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon in the Scottish Rite Cathedral auditorium, 3637 Lindell boulevard. The Rev. Harold L. Reader, pastor of Webster Groves Baptist Church and grand master of Masons in Missouri, will deliver the sermon.

Three divisions of the Knights Templar will parade in full regalia today, the only day in the year when they wear their uniforms. Starting at the Masonic Temple, 3681 Lindell boulevard, at 2 p. m., 300 members will march west to Kingshighway and north to the Second Baptist Church at Kingshighway and Washington boulevard, where a special service will be held at 3 o'clock.

DRIVER, 5 PASSENGERS HURT WHEN SERVICE CAR SKIDS

Machine Goes Over Embankment and Hits Light Standard on Manchester.

The driver of an eastbound Maplewood service car suffered a fracture of the left arm and five of his eight passengers were cut and bruised when the automobile skidded on the wet pavement in front of 5321 Manchester avenue yesterday morning, went over a six-foot embankment and was wrecked against a light standard.

Louis Rombon, 1201 Walton avenue, the driver, told policemen the car went out of control while he was driving in the westbound car tracks, which at that point are on the south side of the street. He and his injured passengers were sent to thir homes after treatment at City Hospital.

CHILD DIES, 18 PERSONS MADE ILL BY SAUSAGE

E. St. Louis Coroner Says Autopsy Reveals Chemical Poison in Frankfurters.

An East St. Louis Negro child, 18 months old, died yesterday after eating frankfurters, and 18 persons have been made ill since last Monday from the same cause, police learned in investigating the death.

The child, Henry Clemons Jr., 1706 Market avenue, was given the frankfurters by his parents, who also had become ill after eating them yesterday without knowing the cause. The parents were treated at St. Mary's Hospital, East St. Louis, and after going home returned several hours later with the child, who was pronounced dead at the hospital.

Henry Clemons, father of the child, told police he had purchased the frankfurters from a food dealer, who said he had distributed about 100 pounds of the frankfurters, partly to other dealers, and had been informed of two other persons having been made ill. He said the frankfurters had been purchased from a Madison County packing house.

Dr. Leo Madden of East St. Louis, Coroner, announced last night that an autopsy revealed a chemical poison in the sausages. He said that further tests would be made to establish the nature of the substance. The sausages, Dr. Madden asserted, did not bear Federal meat inspection marks. Police confiscated five pounds of the meat the dealer had remaining in stock.

Eugene Hobbs, a P W A worker, 1137 Trendley avenue said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that he and his wife and their three children became ill last Monday after eating frankfurters he had purchased from a Washington Park food dealer.

The children, 2, 4 and 5 years old, become violently ill with stomach convulsions, and were treated at St. Mary's Hospital. Recovery of two of the children was aided by the use of oxygen tents. Police are investigating to determine if the frankfurters purchased by Hobbs came from the same packing house as the others.

Nine of the persons made ill by the meat reside in Alton. The Coroner said that children who had eaten the sausages had been made violently ill, but that adults had been less seriously affected.

SISTERS WIN SUIT TO GET $3339 ADDED TO ESTATE

Jury Decides Mrs. Bertha Westerman Wrongfully Left $2800 in Bonds Out of Inventory.

A jury in Circuit Judge Frank B. Coleman's court decided yesterday that Mrs. Bertha Westerman, 3829 De Tonty street, wrongfully failed to list $2800 of Home Owners' Loan Corporation bonds among the assets of the estate of her father, Robert Staehle, 748 South Newstead avenue, who died Feb. 2, 1935. The jury rendered a judgment in favor of the estate for $3339, including interest.

Mrs. Westerman was the executrix named in her father's will and the acton against her was filed by her sisters, Mrs. Lulu Becker and Mrs. Irma Hardwick, beneficiaries. They alleged that although the bonds were their father's property, they were not shown in the inventory, which listed assets valued at $4146.

In defense, Mrs. Westerman said the bonds were a gift to her by her father. She filed a motion for a new trial. The jury's action is similar to a ruling of Probate Judge Glendy B. Arnold, from which the executrix had appealed.

REMINGTON RAND TAKES NLRB ORDER TO SUPREME COURT

Challenges Board's Right to Compel It to Fire Workers and Rehire Strikers.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—Remington-Rand, Inc., challenged before the Supreme Court today the right of the National Labor Relations Board to order reinstatement of employes who participated in a strike in 1936.

The company also contended the board had exceeded its power in ordering collective bargaining negotiations with a joint protective board of the District Council of Office Equipment Workers, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor.

The court was asked to review a decision by the Second United States Circuit Court of Appeals upholding the Labor Board order except for slight modifications.

Remington Rand said the order would mean that nearly 4000 persons would have to be reinstated and an equal number of present employes laid off. The order applied to workers in plants at Tonawanda, North Tonawanda, Ilion and Syracuse, N. Y.; Middletown, Conn., and Marietta and Norwood, O.

DIZZY DEAN TRADED TO CHICAGO FOR THREE PLAYERS

SCHMELING STOPS DUDAS IN 5 ROUNDS

By the Associated Press.

HAMBURG, Germany, April 16.—Max Schmeling, German heavyweight contender, let loose a barrage of rights and lefts to the face and body to score six knockdowns and gain a five-round technical knockout over Steve Dudas of Edgewater, N. J., tonight.

The bout was Schmeling's last "tune-up" for his championship match with Joe Louis in the United States June 22, and left little doubt in the minds of the 23,000 fans who packed Hanseaten Hall that the German is in prime condition. Least doubtful of all was Dudas, still dazed, though not cut, as a result of the battering he received.

Dudas' Reaction.

"Schmeling gave me the hardest licking I ever had," said the American. "I am certain he will knock out Louis if he remains in his present condition."

Max, meanwhile, smiled broadly and announced that he would sail shortly for the United States to begin training for Louis.

The Black Uhlan completely outclassed Dudas, sending him to the canvas six times for counts ranging from three to eight before the American's manager threw in the towel. Schmeling weighed 194½, his rival 195.

Dudas was the aggressor as the first round of what was scheduled as a 15-round bout got under way. He was throwing left and right hooks to the body and face, but Schmeling's sharp uppercuts and stinging rights soon drew the steam from Steve's punches.

A sharp left to the mid-section forced Dudas to the floor for a count of six in the third round, and from then on the American was steadily on the downgrade, although he continued to put up a game fight.

Schmeling set the stage for the finish at the start of the fifth, with a series of smashing right and left uppercuts that had his opponent rubber-legged. A dynamite right to the head sent Steve to his knees for seven. He got to his feet again, went down under another right to the jaw, and the count had gone to eight when the towel came fluttering into the ring from the American's corner.

Schmeling's showing was a vast improvement over his last appearance here Jan. 30, when he outpointed Ben Foord of South Africa by a wide margin and yet disappointed the majority of the experts by failing to put over a knockout. Foord appeared in the semifinal on tonight's card against Walter Neusel, Germany's second-ranking heavyweight, and was disqualified in the eighth round of a 12-round scrap after three warnings for rough tactics and foul blows.

Bout Also Stopped.

Neusel, scoring heavily in the fierce infighting, was ahead on points when the bout was stopped and he was declared the winner.

Schmeling's American manager, Joe Jacobs, was in his corner, while three German officials, Referee Otto Griese and Judges Paul Noack, Max Pippow and H. Eukens, handled the bout. Among the 23,000 spectators were Hamburg's Gov. Kauffmann and numerous prominent German actors and army officers.

Traded, Huh? . . . Well, Chicago, Here I Come

Cards Defeat Browns, 10-7; Medwick's Homer In Ninth Wins Game

Joseph Michael Medwick went hitless on four trips to the plate yesterday afternoon in the opening game of the spring series between the Browns of Gabby Street and the Cardinals of Frankie Frisch at Sportsman's Park. But when Joe went to bat the fifth time, two comrades were on base, the score was tied, 7-7, and Joe broke up the ball game by hitting to the roof of the right field pavilion for a homer, driving in the two men ahead of him and making the final, score, 10 to 7.

It was an interesting struggle as the two St. Louis major league clubs drew curtain on the new season, making their bow before 8019 cash customers who cheered and booed with midseason enthusiasm, all unaware that on that day the trade of Jerome Herman Dean to the Chicago Cubs would be announced.

Each club, much improved over the 1937 model, showed fine batting power, and while the Cardinals made three errors in the field, it was a well-played contest and there was reason for partisans to cheer, no matter which way their baseball affections pointed.

The pitching was good at times and spotty at others, as Manager Frisch used three hurlers and Manager Street sent four men to the firing line. Si Johnson, Guy Bush and young Max Lanier toiled for the Gas House Gang, while Buck Newsom, Les Tietje, Ed Cole and Ed Linke did the curving for the American Leaguers.

Three Hits for Sullivan.

There were heroes in both lineups, with Billy Sullivan, the Browns' new catcher, distinguishing himself as the fighting Browns rallied three times to tie the more highly-regarded Redbirds. Billy, obtained from the Indians in the excellent Hemsley trade, contributed two doubles and a single and drove in two runs to tie the count in the seventh.

The Cardinals showed the batting punch that Manager Frisch has been trying to build up through the training period. In some spots he has sacrificed defensive strength in an effort to present a powerhouse attack, and his batting order was impressive as his sluggers made seven of their 11 hits good for extra bases. There were three home runs, a triple and three doubles.

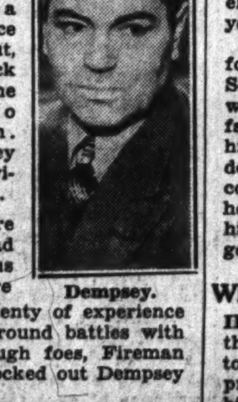
WRAY'S COLUMN

It's All a Big Guess.

"CONDITION will decide this fight," commented Jack Dempsey to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday, when asked to forecast the finish of the Schmeling-Louis title fight next June 22. "If Schmeling hasn't gone back in the last two years, he should win," added the biggest box-office fighter of all time.

Jack is going on the theory that once licked they stay licked. And, as far as heavyweight championship history goes, he is correct. But there are many instances of record in which a fighter, once knocked out, has come back to flatten the man who whipped him. And Dempsey himself is evidence of that.



Dempsey.

In 1917, before Dempsey had become famous but not before he had had plenty of experience in 10 and 20 round battles with rough and tough foes, Fireman Jim Flynn knocked out Dempsey in one round.

A few months later Dempsey, starting the drive which carried him to the championship a year later, returned the compliment in full, knocking out Flynn almost with the first punch of the fight.

Circumstances in this case are reversed, however, because Flynn was the old man then and Dempsey the up-coming young fellow; whereas Schmeling today is in the thirties and two years have elapsed since he fought the eight-years-younger Negro.

Louis has improved since he fought Max; it's your guess if Schmeling has lost anything. But whether Joe has acquired the faculty of keeping his head when hit—the factor that did most to defeat him in their previous encounter, is the big question. If he still suffers a brainstorm when hit, he's doomed. Because he's going to be hit, and hard.

TRACK RECORD FOR SEABISCUIT IN $15,000 RACE

SAN MATEO, Cal., April 16. — Seabiscuit, black bullet of the American turf, sounded his latest smashing challenge today with a convincing victory in the $15,000 added Bay Meadows Handicap. The time for the mile and an eighth was 1:49, a new track record.

Gosum was second and Today, veteran stake star, took third money.

Seabiscuit, given a perfect ride by George Woolf, swept into the lead shortly after passing the mile post. At the finish he was flying along as easily as out for a morning workout. He won by three lengths.

Seabiscuit, coupled with his stable mate Advocator, paid $2.40 to win, $2.20 to place and $2.20 to show. Gosum returned $3.00 and $2.20 and Today, $2.20.

MACOMB, Ill., April 16.—The Macomb Teachers defeated Principia in a dual track meet here today. 82-48, Lyan of Macomb won firsts in the quarter and the half mile; Stocker of Macomb won the high and the broad jump; Lowe of Principia won the 100 and 220 yard dashes to pace the losers.

The Teachers won firsts in the quarter and half mile; high hurdles, two-mile, shot, discus, high jump, broad jump, javelin and tied in the pole vault. The most outstanding performances were Noopers' mile run of 4 minutes 44.6 seconds for Principia and Miller's 10 minutes 44.8 seconds in the two-mile for Macomb. Principia won the relay.

BEAR GOLFERS LOSE TO VANDERBILT TEAM

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 16. — Vanderbilt's golf team scored its second victory in as many days today by trouncing Washington University of St. Louis, 12½ to 5½, at the Richland Club.

With the exception of Bud Alexander, Washington's four-man team shot in the 80s over the par 70 course. Alexander came through with a card reading of 77.

All of Vanderbilt's contestants shot in the upper 70s, with Baker and Tracey scoring a 76 each and Sanders and Maas, 79s.

Summaries:

"How much did the Cardinals receive in cash for the trade?"

"I am not at liberty to answer that."

"How do you estimate the value of the players you received in trade for Dean?"

"Well, I would say that the three of them were worth in the baseball market about $85,000."

"What was Dean's value?"

"Well, at his peak I would say he was just about the most valuable player in baseball."

"Does that include Ruth in his prime?"

"Well now, you're crowding me. Perhaps I was too enthusiastic about Dean."

"Well, then, are we safe in assuming that the cash received by the club represented the difference between $85,000 and the $400,000 value once placed on Dizzy?"

"Unfair! The question is unfair and I'll, of course, not answer. The Dean of today is not the Dean of yesterday, positively. I don't think these questions are regular."

How did he think Dean's departure would affect the club?

"We've the best club in the league, outside of pitchers," Rickey replied.

"Has the loss of Dean started any activity toward a deal for a new pitcher?"

"I couldn't answer that. If I did, it would only put rival clubs on their guard and raise the price of whatever material we sought."

"What was the real reason behind the trading of Dean? Was it his bad arm?"

"Not at all. I don't know that he has a bad arm. If you will remember, back in 1936, I said that no pitcher could make a baseball club. While Dean was with us we were three years without a flag. Even when he's good, one pitcher doesn't make a club. He hasn't pleased us altogether, since."

"Did his friction with Frisch have anything to do with this transfer?"

"No, although we recognize that a pitcher who says he won't pitch for his manager is not an asset to any club. As long ago as 1936 I said that Dean was for sale, but we could not get a purchaser. Last year, our attitude toward Dean was not changed, but the market had disappeared. You can draw your own conclusions from the fact that we sold him this time."

Evidently the Cardinal officials, who have felt that Dean has abused the privileges even of a great player, decided that he doesn't fit into the club's scheme of things and to let somebody else wrangle with his eccentricities.

"We will not only get along without Dean, but with the breaks, we'll have a club they'll have to beat before the pennant race is decided," Rickey concluded.

Which leaves the question of how much cash Dean brought into the club treasury right up to our head clairvoyant. And, being Saturday night, he isn't working.

CARDS GET UNSTATED CASH SUM IN DEAL 'FOR GOOD OF CLUB'

Pitchers Curt Davis and Clyde Shoun and Outfielder Tuck Stainback for Hurler Who Was St. Louis' Greatest Diamond Asset and Was Talk of Country in 1934.

By J. Roy Stockton

Jerome Herman Dean, the greatest one-man baseball asset St. Louis has ever had and the greatest box-office attraction in the history of major league baseball, with the possible exception of Babe Ruth, has been traded to the Chicago Cubs for three unimportant players and cash probably approximating $150,000.

For Dean, the Cardinals received Pitchers Curtis Davis and Clyde Shoun and Outfielder George Tucker Stainback, in addition to the cash.

Sam Breadon, president of the club, making the announcement at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, handed newspaper men typewritten statements containing a quoted paragraph in which Breadon said the deal had been "thoroughly discussed by Mr. Rickey, Frankie Frisch and myself and we agreed that it was for the best interests of the Cardinal club."

Breadon declined to amplify the statement or to name the amount of cash involved. Pressed for an estimate of Dizzy Dean's value, past, present or potential, he declined to express an opinion. He said that in any trades that had been discussed in the past, no tangible offer had ever been made that might indicate Dean's value.

Asked if there was any feeling that Dean might be on the downward grade, Breadon replied that the transaction with the Cubs had included no guarantees, meaning that the Chicago club agreed to accept Dizzy, as is. Last year, it will be remembered, he won only 13 and lost 10 games. He was hit on his great toe dring the all-star game. Subsequently he developed a sore arm and won only one game after July 4.

Won 134 Games, Lost 75.

During his years with the Cardinals Dean won a total of 134 games and lost 75. His greatest year was 1934, when he scored 30 victories and suffered only seven defeats as he and his brother, the famous combination of "Me and Paul" carried the Cardinals down the stretch in a spectacular drive that gave the Gas House Gang the National League pennant. Dizzy and Paul followed with two victories each in the world series with the Detroit Tigers and the triumph, acclaimed the country over, made the two former cotton pickers national sports heroes.

Money poured into the coffers of the Dean boys from all directions. They went on the stage, they made a movie short. They indorsed baseballs, gloves, shoes, caps and other paraphernalia. Their testimonials for sweat shirts, tooth paste, wearing apparel of all kinds and whatnot, netted them thousands of dollars.

Breadon says no offer for Dizzy ever reached tangible form, but it was estimated unofficially that the Cardinals could have sold Dizzy at his peak for more than $200,000. About a year ago Branch Rickey, general manager of the vast Cardinal organization, put a conversational value of $400,000 on Dean, at a time when talk of a Dean trade filled the air.

From his spectacularly high place in the public favor in 1934 and part of 1935, Dizzy slipped by lurches. Escapades at Pittsburgh, St. Paul and Chattanooga lost him friends and the clamor for testimonials diminished. A food company failed to renew one contract that had netted Dizzy $15,000 a year. During the recent spring training, in a conversation about his formerly sizeable extra-curricular earnings, Dizzy admitted that things now were changed.

Dizzy reached his peak salary with the Cardinals when he was paid $25,500 for his 1937 services, his poorest season in games won and lost since he was brought from Houston to blaze a trail of mischievous brilliance across the national baseball picture.

Cubs Now Betting Favorite to Win League Pennant

DIZZY DEAN'S move from the Cardinals to the Cubs had its immediate effect upon the betting odds against the National League contenders. The Cubs are now favored to win the pennant and the Cards are dropped down to fourth place in the book operated by Charles Burke. Before the trade, the clubs stood: New York, Chicago, Cardinals, Pittsburgh.

"Of course, Dizzy still has to prove that his arm is sound," said Burke. "If he does come through with a great game, the Cubs will be regarded as a cinch to win the pennant."

Burke said he thought the price against the Cubs would be about 8 to 5.

Pitcher on Market After 1936 Season; Had Been Proclaimed as "New Man" This Year

While Dizzy was openly placed on the market by Breadon and Rickey during the winter of 1936-37, the announcement of his trade to the Cubs came as a great surprise. He signed his 1938 contract at Winter Haven, Fla., after a three-hour conference with Rickey, a conference that was strangely free from discordant notes. Dizzy during the winter had been singularly quiet and Rickey, announcing that he had signed his ace of aces, proclaimed that he was a new man.

Why, the question therefore arises, was he traded "for the best interests of the Cardinal club?"

While Breadon declined to amplify his statement, it is known that the club for some time has felt that its playing personnel could not function as smoothly and harmoniously as desired with Dean on the roster. There were unofficial hints that the club felt that baseball ambition no longer burned in Dizzy's heart. The club felt that he had amassed so much of the material things of life that he no longer felt the urge to train or to work hard.

Was Ill in Camp, Lost Weight.

Then there was always the question of his arm and whether it would regain its former magic. He reported at spring training this year on time, but contracted a severe cold and missed much of the training work. He pitched, however, against the Yankees, shortly after quitting the confinement of his hotel room, but illness that was diagnozed as sinus infection sent him back to his room and bed for several days. He lost weight and said occasionally that his arm pained him.

"Tickled to Death", Says Charley Grimm

CHICAGO, April 16.—Commenting on the deal that brought Pitcher Dizzy Dean to the Chicago Cubs, Manager Charley Grimm said tonight: "I am tickled to death we got him. I know he will be a help to us."

"It's Between Cubs and Giants Now," Bill Terry Says.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, April 16. — Bill Terry, manager of the New York Giants, said tonight he believed the St. Louis Cardinals made a poor deal when they traded Dizzy Dean to the Chicago Cubs.

"I can't understand it," Terry said. "The Cards dealt themselves right out of the National League pennant race and made it strictly a two-cornered battle between the Giants and the Cubs."

Present indications are that more than 30 newcomers, with a majority in the American League, will make their debuts with new clubs when the major league pennant races get under way this week. The official opening date is Tuesday, but the four Eastern clubs will get a day's jump, since the Yankees are at Boston and the Athletics at Washington for contests tomorrow.

The greatest number of changes will appear in the battlefront of the Browns. Not only will the team begin with a new manager, Gabby Street, who led the Cardinads to two pennants, but six newcomers will be in the lineup at Cleveland. Beau Bell, Sam West and Harlond Clift will be the only holdovers.

George McQuinn from Newark will be at first; Roy Hughes or Don Heffner at second and Ralph Kress at short. In the outfield will be Buster Mills or Mel Mazzera. And the battery will consist of Buck Newsom and Billy Sullivan, a pair who toiled with other big league teams in 1937.

The Cardinals will show one new face, Enos Slaughter, from Columbus, the batting champion of the American Association last season, in right field.

Newcomers likely to make their debut with new clubs, and the clubs they performed with in 1937, are as follows:

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

Browns — McQuinn, Newark; Hughes, Cleveland or Heffner, New York; Kress, Minneapolis; Mills, Boston, or Mazzera, San Antonio; Sullivan, Cleveland; Newsom, Boston.

Cleveland—Keltner, Milwaukee; Hemsley, Browns.

New York—Knickerbocker, Browns; Gordon, Newark.

Boston—Vosmik, Browns.

Washington—Bonura, Chicago.

Cardinals—Slaughter, Columbus.

Pittsburgh—Rizzo, Columbus.

Chicago—Reynolds, Minneapolis.

Boston—West, Missions.

Phillies—Mueller, Houston; Morgan, Louisville.

Thus it will be seen that only one team, the Giants, will begin with only veteran performers in the field. Bill Terry will open the campaign with the lineup he used in the world series last fall providing Burgess Whitehead, regular second sacker, has sufficiently recovered from a recent appendicitis operation. If Whitehead is unable to play, Lou Chiozza, who tried to play third for the club at the start of the 1937 campaign, will open at the pivot station.

With Frank Crosseti still on the ailing list, it is probable that the world champion Yankees will begin with a new second base combination. Joe Gordon, from Newark, will be at second, while Bill Knickerbocker, obtained from the Browns, is scheduled to open the campaign at shortstop. Gordon will try to fill the shoes of Tony Lazzeri, now with the Cubs. In addition, the men of Joe McCarthy will be without the services of Joe DiMaggio, slugging outfielder and the stubbornest "holdout" of the 1938 campaign.

In addition to Knickerbocker, two athletes who performed with the 1937 Browns will be in the lineups of new clubs. Rollie Hemsley is scheduled to start behind the bat for the Indians in the game with the Browns next Tuesday, while Joe Vosmik will be in left field for the Boston Red Sox.

Two St. Louis Boys to Play.

Two St. Louis players who performed in the minors last season are scheduled to make their major league debuts. Emmett Mueller, with the Cardinals' Houston "farm" in 1937, will be at second base and will lead off for the Phillies, while Mark Christman, from Beaumont, is down to open at short for the Tigers, what with Billy Rogell still on the ailing list and Frank Croucher out with a broken leg. Christman is due to move over to third when the other shortstops are again in condition to play.

Several other clubs have had trouble at shortstop this spring. Don Gutteridge, a reformed third sacker, is due to open at the position for the Cardinals, with Durocher on the Dodgers' roster. Luke Appling is lost to the White Sox until June with a fractured ankle, while "Skeeter" Newsome, Connie Mack's regular, was recently "beaned" and according to latest reports is not expected to do a lot of playing during the campaign.

CHICAGO, April 16. — Blasting "Sugar" Cain for four runs in each of the third and fifth innings, the Cubs defeated the White Sox, 10 to 4, before 7780 fans at Wrigley Field today and clinched Chicago's spring baseball supremacy for the National League.

It was the Cubs' ninth victory in 15 games between the two Chicago clubs. A final game will be played at Comiskey Park tomorrow.

Rip Collins' homer with two on was the big blow in the third, while doubles by Coaker Triplett and Billy Herman, singles by Frank Demaree and Bill Jurges and a pass to Collins were the main items in the game-clinching fifth.

A homer by Boze Berger off Curt Davis with two on in the fourth was the most potent of the Sox's six hits off Davis and Bill Lee. The Cubs totaled 13 hits off Cain and Thornton Lee. The game was interrupted 22 minutes by rain in the sixth inning.

DIZZY DEAN TRADED TO THE CUBS

noon, because of the sore arm, Frisch announced a change in his plans. Two Florida newspapers, however, didn't know of the change and published pictures of Dean as the pitcher of the day.

In the clubhouse before the game Frisch told the players he'd give them Monday off if they beat the Yankees. The players, who had seen the photographs of Dean, turned to him and chorused: "You'd better bear down out there today, you big so and so."

It was a strange relationship—that between Dizzy and the other players. They felt that he was a great pitcher, could be a great pitcher whenever he wanted to be, but there was an implication to that chorused warning that he "had better bear down."

The Arm Often "Hurt Turrible."

Dizzy always has been a great drawing card and at the same time a problem child. Front office or manager never knew when he would throw over the traces, or bob up with a sore arm. Time and again he spoke of a sore arm, which he said "hurt just turrible," and then he would go to the hill and turn in a pitching masterpiece. Thus, when and if he ever did have a sore arm the front office, the manager and the rest of the team didn't know whether it was really a wolf or not.

During the waning days of the 1937 season, while Dizzy was nursing a sore arm, Frisch was talking to his men in the clubhouse here one afternoon. It was a pep meeting. After a Frisch statement that was designed to carry some weight, Dizzy volunteered in the unprintable jargon of the clubhouse, that what Frisch was saying was a lot of bunk. The explosion that followed almost rocked the upper ranks of the ball club. Had it not been that Rickey and Breadon were trying to get a few Sunday games out of Dean, a reasonable desire on the part of officials signing the $25,500 checks for the year, Dean probably would have drawn an indefinite suspension that afternoon.

This year, however, relations between Dean and the front office and likewise between Dean and his manager and Dean and the other players seemed to be of the best. The players were downcast indeed when they heard about the trade. The first reaction was that they had been traded out of their pennant chances, for they had been hearing all spring that if Dean could come back and have a great year, they could win the league championship.

Nor does consideration of the playing material received tend to cheer the players or followers of the team. Curt Davis won 10 games and lost five last year, had a 13-13 record in 1936, and Clyde Shoun, the other pitcher obtained, won seven and lost seven in 1937. Tuck Stainback, outfielder, batted .231 last year and scarcely can crowd into the well-manned outfield corps of the Cardinals.

Thus the greatest one-man asset St. Louis baseball has ever had, has been traded without getting any important playing material in exchange. The only inference is that Breadon and Rickey consider it as a corrective trade, a transaction to rid the club of what it considers its troubles, rather than as one to maintain the playing strength of the Cardinal ball club.

A Shock to the Press Box.

First intimation that the Cardinals were to make an important announcement was had when Ed Staples, director of information, climbed breathless to the press box, while the Cardinals and Browns were trying to break a 7-7 tie. Staples, between gasps for breath, told reporters that Sam Breadon wanted to see them in his office at 5 o'clock.

"You'd better come, it's something big," Staples replied, when reminded that a ball game was in progress.

Breadon was a few minutes late, having stopped to see how his club was coming along. In his office he called for a sheaf of printed statements, put on his glasses and said, "I guess this is going to shock you," after which he handed out the printed statements.

After telling of the trade and explaining it with the paragraph mentioned above, the statement rather weakly tried to bolster the transaction by calling attention to the fact that "the Chicago club has had $180,500 tied up in Davis since they purchased him in 1936. They originally paid Philadelphia $125,000 for Klein and Kowalik cost them $7500. They then gave Klein and Kowalik back to Philadelphia and also $50,000 for Davis and Allen. Later they sold Allen to the Browns for $2000."

It is drawing a rather long bow, however, to mention $180,500 in the same breath with any or all of the players the Cardinals obtained from the Cubs for Jerome Herman Dean.

In the Clubhouse.

The Cardinals were an unhappy gang of ball players when they were told of the trade after their victory over the Browns.

Dean said he was "glad to leave to go to Chicago, but I hate to leave the fellows."

"I'll bet they do all right by me there, though," he said, his face brightening. "I'll bet they give me $10,000 more than I'm making here."

Another Cardinal player chimed in: "Yeah, and they'll probably give you a yacht, too, to ride around in on the lake."

Another said, "and lot's of chewing gum."

All the players asked over and over again who the Cardinals got for Dean.

They apparently were surprised that the Cardinals got only two pitchers and an outfielder for the "great one."

One suggested that the Cardinals must have gotten "a lot of cash" in the deal, and Martin commented "you can't play cash on the basefield field."

Then Pepper brightened again.

Martin was asked what Dizzy's arm was like this year.

"Well, he's been sort of in and out, so far," Pepper answered. "He hasn't been pitching his fast ball"; some baseball writers suggested perhaps Dizzy's fast ball was gone.

Martin was almost inconsolable. He drew some consolation from Joe Medwick, who told him "your Mudcats won't have any more competition from Dizzy."

Dean said last night that his orders were to report to the Cubs tomorrow morning and that he would depart for Chicago, shortly after noon today, by automobile.

Shoots Hole-in-One.

Robert Punch, using a five-iron, scored a hole-in-one on the 141-yard No. 17 hole at Forest Park yesterday afternoon. The other members of the foursome in the golf match were his brother, John Punch and Lewis Disbrow and H. Placke.

Coming This Way

Pitcher Curt Davis, aided by Mrs. Davis, prepared last night to come to St. Louis as a result of the trade which makes that right-hander a member of the Cardinals and sends Dizzy Dean to Chicago.

ready broken several records and the expectation for the year is that the annual mutuel betting handle for the country will pass $350,000,000, where last year only $275,000,000 passed through the race track hoppers. Races with $50,000 purses are numerous; they grade on up to $100,000.

Baseball club owners are looking for a bumper crop of gate receipts, topping the greatly improved season of last year. At least two clubs are so confident of better times that they have invested hundreds of thousands of dollars in plant improvements—Detroit and the Chicago Cubs.

There is a possibility that the million dollar gate, which passed out with Dempsey's retirement, may return in the Louis-Schmeling fight.

With the Davis Cup again in America, the swollen tennis receipts of a decade or more ago, are foreseen by the U. S. L. T. A.

Outdoor track interest, if it attains the heights reached by indoor games this year, will also increase receipts handsomely.

All along the line the spending for sports entertainment indicates a surplus.

It works out that way, sometimes. The late Ban Johnson, while president of the American League, once remarked that dull times in business frequently made good times in baseball.

Lest He Forgets.

"THE POT IS CALLING the kettle black," some will say after reading Babe Ruth's condemnation of Joe DiMaggio's holdout.

And of course, Ruth himself was the outstanding holdout of all time. It was an annual affair with him. And how well it worked his $80,000 peak reveals. Babe, one thinks, should not forget his own past, in hopping on the young Yankee star.

But, after all, it is different. When Babe reached the upper brackets he was no sophomore in the major leagues, like DiMaggio. When he attained the $40,000 the Italian is demanding, he was a famous star with a reputation of several years standing.

Moreover he was a known box office attraction and drew thousands all around the circuit. His performance was far superior to DiMaggio's whose .323 batting average and 29 home runs, while remarkable for a first-year man, do not compare with Babe's figures. Nor do they entitle him with Lou Gehrig, who after long years of service, is receiving today only what DiMaggio is demanding after one year's service.

Public sympathies usually go with the baseball player whose years of service are limited and whose occupation may at any moment be cut off permanently through an accident. But in this case the club owner seems entitled to a better break.

And he'll get it, or else—

Less fortunate major league owners feel that the huge salaries paid by the Yanks make it difficult to satisfy their players who are envious of their New York associates. It can be accepted as a certainty that there will be no return to the $80,000 days of Babe Ruth, such as DiMaggio's present demand seems to imply is his goal.

Backing the Browns.

THEY'RE ACTUALLY BACKing the Browns to win the pennant. A local betting commissioner reported today that he had just laid 2500 to 25, 1000 to 25 and 500 to 25, win place and show on Don Barnes' hopes.

"They've been nibbling right along," continued the commissioner, "and I've been forced to cut them to 80 to 1. That's a drop from the original 200 to 1."

It's a long, long time since the Browns have enjoyed such preseason confidence.

Derby Odds Shorten.

THE APPROACH OF Derby day, now only three weeks' distant, is witnessing shortening of the odds against many of the leading contenders. Commissioner James Carroll, who opened Stagehand at the top price of 6 to 1, has been forced by weight of commissions to cut the Santa Anita Handicap winner's price to 3 to 1—a new low.

Menow and Fighting Fox are down to 7 to 1.

Stagehand's fine condition after his arrival at Louisville has kept his price up. Many figured that he would go back in the original betting, but instead money continues to come in on this star of the winter racing season.

War Admiral vs. Seabiscuit.

NOW THAT IT'S SETTLED—the War Admiral-Seabiscuit match—bookmakers are trying to decide on the proper odds. The first prices issued made War Admiral favorite, due to the strong support given the Man o' War colt in the East.

However, the form, except for one factor, favors Seabiscuit on figures at least. War Admiral will have to run faster than he has ever traveled in a race, to win that winner-take-all prize of $100,000.

The course will have only one turn in and that will favor fast time. Furthermore, Seabiscuit is almost as fast an early runner as War Admiral which, like his daddy, tries to make every post a winning one. Belmont is rated in some handicaps as faster than the Santa Anita track. All signs point to better than 2:02 for the mile and one-quarter.

Incidentally the record for this distance is held by Whisk Broom II, which carried 139 pounds over the route in 2:00 flat. The record has always been viewed with suspicion by horsemen.

The factor that may beat Seabiscuit is his tendency to hang at the finish of the mile and one-quarter or a longer route. Three times this has happened within a year or so. Each time when challenged, the opposing horse beat him.

There's one thing about that War Admiral—he'll not weaken when challenged.

League Heads Forecast Fine Season

National League President Points to Cardinals' Crowds in South as Good Omen.

By Ford Frick,
President, National League.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 16.—I feel that 1938 is going to be one of the most momentous years in baseball history.

Maybe it's because this is baseball's hundredth year. When the curtain rings down next October we'll be looking back upon a complete century of our national sports life since Abner Doubleday laid out the first baseball diamond on the Cooperstown, N. Y., commons in the spring of 1839.

Maybe it's because National League clubs in their spring mobilizations have shown such an impressive array of new players in every lineup, the largest influx of strong new talent for many years. In nearly every club's lineup there's at least one newcomer stationed in an important position. This means that there'll be something vitally interesting in the picture of every club as it faces the first "play ball" of the 1938 pennant race.

Every Club a Contender.

I know that a lot of my anticipation of big things in 1938 comes from the way National League clubs have performed in training camp games and along the northbound exhibition trail. Every club in its play has shown earnestness and seriousness of purpose that means another close pennant race and a hard-fought battle for every position all the way down the line.

That's not all of it, though. In winter we fans get to brooding about war and business and the social order and things like that. But by the time mid-April starts the bats swinging and the balls skipping across major league panoramas these wintry broodings seem to do a fast fadeout.

I think 1938 is going to be a great year because it's another test of baseball as the national game, the common meeting-ground of all the schools of thought and guilds in our land. Ever since baseball began it has been fulfilling that function in our national life. In 1938 the challenge is just as serious and important.

I'm happy about it because all the evidence to date is that baseball in 1938 will do its job better than ever before. The first Florida exhibition game—Cardinals vs. Yankees at St. Petersburg—set a new attendance record for St. Petersburg. In most of the training camps the first games set a new record.

National Attitude Better.

This meant to me that the national attitude to baseball is strengthened this year more than ever. A league president is supposed to say each spring that things look great, prospects are brighter than ever, everything points to a banner year.

Ever since I've been a president, that's been the easiest part of the job, because that's the way I have felt every spring. But what with one thing and another and this and that, this year it seems easier to say it than ever before.

FRICK. HARRIDGE.

By William Harridge,
President, American League.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 16.—I am convinced that the 1938 baseball season which opens Monday will afford as keen and wholesome recreation as any year of its history and will attract increased thousands of spectators who enjoy clean, exciting sport.

We of the American League enter this new season, the 100th since the first diamond was laid out at Cooperstown, N. Y., in 1839, confident that baseball this summer will be replete with thrills for the fans and immensely successful in a financial way.

Steadily Growing Interest.

That America is yearly becoming more sports minded must be evident even to the casual observer. The startling increase at all sports events during the past year is but the outward expression of increased popular interest.

I believe that baseball will play an important part in this nationwide increase in competitive sports interest. I feel the American League will do its part, contributing a lineup of generally strengthened teams which should make for close games and an exciting pennant race from start to finish.

With new records in attendance set in numerous exhibition games this spring, I believe that the interest of the fans will be generally increased in every team in the league. The splendid showing this spring of the St. Louis Browns, I am sure, will aid not only the attendance of that team but the attendance of every club in the circuit.

Detroit, Cleveland, Boston and Chicago, I think, will be better than last season, while Washington and Philadelphia also will be stronger. The New York Yankees, who drew so well both at home and on the road in 1937, again will be the focal point of millions of fans.

In addition, this year brings up many new faces in both major leagues and fans always keep close watch on the way in which newcomers attempt to take the places of departed stars who helped make baseball the truly national sport it has come to be.

I look forward with all fans to Monday's cry: "Play ball!"

Cubs Release Hurler Parmelee

CHICAGO, April 16.—Leroy Parmelee, right-handed pitcher who came to the Chicago Cubs a year ago from the St. Louis Cardinals, was sent outright today to Minneapolis of the American Association.

The action completes a transaction begun by the Cubs last year when they acquired Outfielder Carl Reynolds from Minneapolis for cash and a player to be delivered this spring.

CITY LEAGUE BASEBALL GAMES POSTPONED

The City High School League baseball tripleheader scheduled yesterday for the Public Schools Stadium was postponed because of rain and wet grounds.

The games will be played the first three school days of this week at the stadium, starting at 3:30 o'clock. Beaumont will meet Roosevelt, Monday; Cleveland will play Central Tuesday, and Blewett will oppose McKinley Wednesday.

C. of C. Baseball Dinner Tomorrow.

The Chamber of Commerce will sponsor a baseball dinner to be given tomorrow night at Hotel Chase. William Harridge, president of the American League; the presidents of the two St. Louis clubs and of the Pittsburgh club, and Managers Frankie Frisch of the Cardinals, Gabby Street of the Browns and Pie Traynor of the Pirates, will speak. More than 700 reservations had been received up to yesterday.

PRINCIPIA ATHLETE WINS FIVE EVENTS IN TRACK MEET

Laret Stars Against John Burroughs Team; University City Wins

Phil Laret of Principia Academy was the outstanding athlete of several high school track meets held yesterday morning and afternoon in the St. Louis district. Laret won five events for Principia in its meet with John Burroughs at Taylor Field.

Burroughs won the meet, 60 points to 53.

The issue was in doubt until the running of the 880-yard relay which was won by Burroughs.

Laret, who ordinarily competes in the 100-yard dash and both hurdle events, won these races. Then, as Vandermoore Van Utt, regular dash man, was out with an injured leg, Laret was pressed into service and he also won the 220-yard dash. In addition he captured the high jump.

He Came Back as Champion

Len Harvey, at the age of 30, has achieved a comeback as a champion—his joy here is over his defeat of Jock McAvoy for the British light-heavyweight championship and the Lonsdale belt, at London, April 7. Both are English fighters.

Medwick's Homer With Two On in Ninth Beats Browns

pointment of 1937, made an impressive 1938 debut as he hit a home run to drive in the first run of the game, doubled to drive in two runs in the eighth and handled his catching assignment with apparent smoothness.

Gutteridge and Medwick were the other Redbirds to hit for the circuit, while Don Padgett contributed a triple and a double and Stuart Martin's one safety was a two-bagger.

Owen's four-bagger, a drive into the left field seats, opened the third inning and in the same frame Stuart Martin's double and a single by Enos Slaughter made the score 2 to 0. The Browns came back and tied the score in the fourth on Clift's four-bagger into the left field seats, Kress's single and Medwick's fumble and McQuinn's double to left.

Tietje replaced Newsom to start the sixth and the Cardinals went ahead. Slaughter walked and was forced by Medwick, who scored on Padgett's triple to left center. Pepper Martin's single scored Padgett.

Gutteridge's home run in the seventh, a tremendous drive to left center clearing the 400-foot mark, added a run to the Cardinal lead, only to have the Browns rally gamely in their seventh to tie it up again. Heffner, leading off for the Americans, was safe on Stu Martin's high throw and Roy Hughes, batting for Tietje, singled to center. Mazzera sacrificed neatly and Sullivan's third hit, a single to center, sent two men home.

Padgett doubled with two out in the eighth and Cole walked Pepper Martin intentionally, only to have Owen upset the strategy with a line double down the left field chalk mark, scoring the two men.

However, the Browns had one more rally left. Clift walked to start their eighth and was forced by Kress. McQuinn was safe on a fumble by Pepper Martin and Heffner doubled to center, scoring Kress and putting McQuinn on third. Allen, batting for Cole, was intentionally passed, but Harshany, batting for Mazzera against the left-handed Lanier, dropped a single in short right to score McQuinn with the tying run. Heffner also tried to score on the play but was out at the plate, Stuart Martin to Owen.

Gutteridge opened the ninth with a single to left and while Stuart Martin was batting, the Browns thought a snap throw by Linke had caught Gutteridge off first. Stuart then drew a pass and after Slaughter flied out, Medwick hit his important homer to the pavilion roof.

The Browns threatened in their ninth, with singles by Bell and Clift, after West had fanned, but Kress lined to Stuart Martin, who stepped on second to double Bell off the bag and end the contest.

SPRING SERIES NOTES

HILDEBRAND and Knott for the Browns and Krist, Henshaw and McGee for the Cardinals will be the pitchers this afternoon in the second game of the series. Manager Frisch said McGee would be his starter.

The opening game attracted a disappointingly small crowd of 8019 customers.

The new score board, in process of completion, flashed only balls, strikes and outs. It also showed batteries and score by innings. It is expected to be ready for full operation by Tuesday.

The Cardinals announced that Bill Walker, southpaw from East St. Louis, had been transferred from Rochester to Sacramento.

Art Garibaldi, Cardinal third baseman, has been sent to the Columbus club of the American Association, it was announced last night.

U. S. CUP SOCCER SERIES OPENS IN CHICAGO TODAY

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, April 16. — Banking heavily on the magic toe of Jimmy McDermott, center forward, the Sparta soccer club of this city has high hopes of defeating St. Mary Celtic of Brooklyn in the first game of the national cup final series here tomorrow. The second and concluding game will be played at New York a week from tomorrow, total goals to determine the winner of the United States soccer championship.

Tomorrow's game will mark the fourth time in the history of the national challenge cup competition that Chicago has put a team in the final. St. Louis has had the honor many times of representing the Western division, but only the Canadian Club (1925) and the Bricklayers (1928 and 1931) have won the Western title for Chicago. In each case, the club was defeated by the Eastern champions.

Three brothers, John, Dave and Willie McEwan, are the scoring stars of the Celtics, who have an all-star lineup, largely Scottish.

SPARTA CHICAGO.	Pos.	CELTICS BROOKLYN
Silvosky	Goal	Othen
Scott	R. F.	Kelso

STAR HARVARD SWIMMER TO QUIT

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., April 16.—Harvard's undefeated swimming team was given a setback today when its ace free-styler, William E. (Billy) Kendal of Australia, announced he would sever his college relations at the end of his sophomore year in June.

Kendall said he was going into the employ of a Chicago firm.

He said he hoped, by keeping in condition, to represent his native land again in the 1940 Olympics.

SPORT SALAD

Streamlining.

It has been proposed to shorten the game by having a substitute run for the catcher if and when he gets on base. A better way would be to have a stand-in to catch foul flies back of the plate, so he wouldn't have to waste so much time throwing off his mask and putting it on again.

And how about doing something about the batters who are continually stepping out of the box rubbing dust on their hands and taking time out to knock imaginary dirt out of their spikes with bat handles?

True, the pitchers sometimes retard action by dilatory tactics on the mound, but they usually even it up by striking out.

A lot of time is also wasted in changing sides. If a leopard put his mind to it he could almost change his spots while they are changing sides. Thumbs would be turned down on the snail derby.

Rumors of War.

Avery Brundage says that only war would keep the 1940 Olympic games from being held. Indicating that Avery does not know that war is liable to break out between China and Japan any minute.

WHILE there may be no war,
perhaps,
An idea we have gained,
That 'twixt the Chinese and the Japs
Relations are quite strained.

TRES BON IS WINNER OF POINT-TO-POINT RACE IN MARYLAND

MONKTON, Md., April 16.—Tres Bon, owned by Manton B. Metcalfe Jr., and ridden by P. D. Reid, won the thirtieth running of the My Lady's Manor point-to-point race here today, opening the Maryland steeplechase season.

Blockade, owned by Mrs. Read Beard and ridden by F. Colwill, was second in the three-mile event over timber, and Inshore, owned by J. W. Y. Martin and ridden by C. R. White, was third.

Two of the eight starters fell at the thirteenth jump. There were no immediate reports of injuries.

HUSKIES RECORD CLEAN SWEEP OF COAST REGATTA

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, Wash., April 16.—The University of Washington made a clean sweep of all three crew races with the University of California here today.

The varsity won its three-mile thriller by about a length in the unofficial time of 15:49, against the course record of 15:46.4.

The junior varsity oarsmen defeated their Bear rivals by about half a length in 16:04.2—10 seconds faster than the Jayvee course record for the three miles.

The freshmen won the opening thriller by about a length and a half in the record-equalling time of 10:40.2 for two miles.

Stagehand Passes The Chief in a Derby Workout

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 16.—Stagehand spotted The Chief, his stablemate, two lengths and overtook him at the three-quarter mark today in a workout for the Kentucky Derby.

The No. 1 Derby favorite was clocked in 1:14 2-5 for the distance, while The Chief was caught at two-fifths of a second slower. They finished out seven-eighths of a mile in 1:28 3-5. Stagehand was timed in :24 2-5 for the quarter and :50 for the half.

The workout went according to a pre-arranged plan of Trainer Earl Sande, who wanted The Chief to break in front and Stagehand to catch him if he could.

It was the most ambitious workout for Maxwell Howard's team since their arrival here Monday from California. A large crowd saw the prep.

Invincible and Gangplank, two other Derby eligibles, also worked out, the former being clocked in 1:18 for three-quarters and Gangplank in 1:46 for the mile.

20,000 FANS SEE OPENING AT JAMAICA

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 16.—Snark, five-year-old son of Boojum from the Wheatley Stable, today whipped seven other high ranking sprinters in the $7500 Paumonok Handicap as the thoroughbreds returned to New York with nearly 20,000 fans packing Jamaica.

Closing with a great burst of speed in the stretch, Snark reached the finish four lengths in front of Mrs. G. H. Emick's Rollin Home. He was the 16 to 5 favorite. Rollin Home, sensation of the Florida season, was another length and a half in front of Walter Carter's Clodion, which nosed out Felix Spatola's Wise Prince in a photo finish for third portion of the purse.

Johnny Longden who previously had won the third with Wheatley's Stormscud, sent Snark over the three-quarters of a mile in 1:11 3-5 under top weight of 132 pounds to earn the purse of $6450.

A sixteen and a half minute delay at the post caused largely by Grey Gold running away for more than a mile, was no help to the heavily weighted Snark. When the break finally did come Paul Keester sent Rollin Home out in front.

Rollin Home had a length advantage over Drudgery coming out of the backstretch but by then Snark really started to run. He picked up ground so fast that by the time they reached the head of the home stretch he was in front and running straight and fast for the judges.

The Wheatley colt, world record-holder at six and a half furlongs, pulled steadily away while Rollin Home held on to take second money in front of the fast closing Clodion and Wise Prince.

Stormscud, a Preakness eligible from the Wheatley Stable, returned to the races in fine form when he reeled off six furlongs in the third number to whip five other three-year-olds. Johnny Longden broke the son of Hard Tack, a 7 to 2 shot, in front and kept him there all the way. Mrs. Parker Corning's Thanksgiving, 6 to 5 choice and also eligible for the Preakness as well as the Kentucky Derby, forced all the pace but never was able to collar the Wheatley colt. A half length separated the pair at the finish with the Paragon Stable's Family Friend ten lengths back in third place.

William Ziegler's El Chico, a first time starter, ran away and hid from seven other two-year-olds in the five furlongs of the $2500 Youthful Stakes. Made the 11 to 5 favorite on the basis of fine workouts, the chestnut son of John P. Grier took the lead at the start and never relinquished the advantage to take the purse of $3400.

Rugby Game Today.

The Central A. C. will oppose the County Y. M. C. A. at 2:15 o'clock this afternoon on the drill grounds in Forest Park, in a Missouri Rugby Football Union League game. Another game between the Ramblers and the Washington University Medics has been postponed until a later date.

Totsch Steals Home; Billikens Split Twin Bill

St. Louis University's baseball team divided a doubleheader with Illinois College's Blueboys yesterday afternoon at Forest Park, losing the first game, 6 to 4, and winning the second, 1 to 0, when Carl Totsch stole home with the only run. This gave the Billikens a .500 percentage with Illinois opponents during the week. Thursday the Billikens split a twin bill with Illinois Normal. Tomorrow they oppose Illinois Wesleyan in a single game at Forest Park.

Two southpaws were credited with victory yesterday, though the losing pitchers, right-handers in both instances, pitched good ball, losing because of errors or mental blunders. Cliff Amidie, diminutive left-hander, who opened for the Blueboys, kept the Billikens hitless until the seventh inning, when three hits and three runs were tallied by the local collegians.

NEW YORK, April 16.—To avoid conflict with the $100,000 match race at Belmont Park Nov. 30 between Samuel D. Riddle's War Admiral and Charles S. Howard's Seabiscuit, the Westchester Racing Association changed the dates of two of its important stake events. The Suburban Handicap, originally scheduled for May 30, was moved up to May 28, and the Coaching Club American Oaks shifted to June 2.

SUN EGRET IS BADLY BEATEN IN HAVRE RACE

By the Associated Press.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., April 16.—Masked General, the 4-year-old chestnut gelding which tossed the scare of the year into the great War Admiral last fall, left the famed Sun Egret far behind today and raced to victory over a fast track in the $5000 Harford Handicap before 15,000 fans.

Sun Egret, A. C. Compton's ace Kentucky Derby candidate, was trying for his sixth victory of the year and ran seventh in the 11-horse field. He had won at Bowie in the mud in his two previous Maryland starts this spring.

The finish was a close photo between three horses, with Masked General a head in front of Howard Bruce's Jay Jay to take the winner's purse of $4900 and pay $21.30 for $2. L. E. Ogle's Clocks was a neck back of Jay Jay.

It was Masked General's first start since the Pimlico Special, when he faced the redoubtable War Admiral, then blazing the trail which made him the year's 3-year-old champion. The Brandywine Stable's gelding led War Admiral going into the head of the stretch then—but bolted to the outside there and lost his chance to be the only horse besting the Admiral last year.

In today's six-furlong feature, Masked General broke fourth, moved to third at the half-way mark and entered the stretch in third. Under intermittent lashes from Jockey J. Wagner, he moved ahead steadily in the stretch and won going away.

Sun Egret, the odds-on favorite at $3.20 to $2, got off poorly, breaking eighth. He was rushed ahead inside and moved to second at the half, holding that position to the stretch. He tired badly and finished a neck back of Finance, about three lengths behind the winner.

ST. LOUIS BOARD OF EQUALIZATION FINALLY ADJOURNS

$8,000,000 SHAVED FROM SELECTED LIST

Letter Explains One Per Cent Reduction Ordered by State Could Not Be Applied to All.

After having been in session for four weeks, the St. Louis Board of Equalization finally adjourned yesterday, having heard 436 property owners' appeals from assessments by the Assessor, and having sustained 82, providing for a total reduction of $264,850.

Completion of the work left the real estate assessment in St. Louis at $888,012,472. During the course of the hearings the board also applied a 1 per cent assessment cut ordered by the State Board of Equalization, distributing the approximately $8,000,000 involved among selected parcels of property deemed to be assessed at disproportionately high figures.

This application of the cut drew criticism from the Real Estate Exchange, which contended the cut should be applied as a blanket reduction. In a letter to the Exchange yesterday, however, the City Board pointed out that the State Board had specifically ordered that the cut be applied to selected parcels of property and that it should not be applied as a blanket reduction, so that the City Board had no choice but to follow instructions.

Cuts of $5000 or More.

Cuts of $5000 or more were made on assessments on property under the one per cent reduction, as follows:

State Finance Commissioner R. W. Holt, a total of $73,000 on the buildings of five closed banks, as follows: Laclede Trust Co., $6000; West St. Louis Trust Co., $17,000; Grant State Bank, $15,000; Shaw

PROPOSALS FOR TAX RELIEF RESTUDIED

Suggestions for Lightening the Burden Carried by Realty Reviewed at Chicago Meeting.

A review of the whole question of real estate taxation looking to a strengthened movement in the various states for such modernization of the tax structure as will give effective real estate tax adjustment was made by the committee on real estate taxation of the National Association of Real Estate Boards at a meeting in Chicago recently closed and attended by representatives of member boards of the association and of state real estate associations from Maryland to California and from Minnesota to Texas.

Reiterates Major Objectives.

The conference, an experience meeting of the states represented, restudied in detail the proposals for State action for real estate tax relief suggested by the National Association in 1933, major elements of which have been adopted in a number of states, and formulated a proposed restatement of major objectives for immediate vigorous action reiterating the association's stand for: (1) an overall limit on the tax rate which may be levied against real estate; (2) valuation of real estate for tax purposes primarily on the basis of its productivity; (3) the drawing of school costs from a wider tax base; and (4) state control of local tax levies and bond issues, under proper safeguards.

The committee's proposals, aimed to strengthen the whole movement for tax modernization, are expected to be brought before the board of directors of the association at their coming meeting in Richmond, Va., May 5, a meeting that will immediately precede the Central Atlantic regional conference of realtors there.

"When you put a ceiling on the real estate tax rate by an overall limitation you have taken a very decisive step to spread the tax base, and you relieve by 23 per cent to 25 per cent the share which the farmers and home owners of the land, together with owners of other types of real property, are now paying beyond their rightful obligation," Myers Y. Cooper, Cincinnati, former Governor of Ohio, president of the Cincinnati Real Estate Board and chairman of the committee, said in putting before the meeting Ohio's experience with the 1 per cent limit on the real estate tax rate, which has been made a provision of the State's constitution.

"Nine states, following this general program, have fixed such a limit on the tax rate. This is one of the most effective ways of making the taxpayer's dollar look and act in public service exactly like it looks and acts in private enterprise.

MARCH BUILDING VOLUME LARGER THAN IN FEBRUARY

Permits Issued in 215 Cities Involved Estimated Cost of $76,598,907, Reflecting Expanding F H A Loans.

A general rise in the volume of building permits throughout the country was registered during March, reflecting to a large degree the reported expansion of F H A mortgage loans to record levels during that month.

Permits issued at 215 cities of the United States for March involved an estimated cost of $76,598,907, an increase of 41.8 per cent over the two-year low of $54,010,213 in February, according to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. The gain, however, was somewhat less than the usually expected seasonal rise of about 52 per cent for this period, which left the March total still 36.8 per cent under the $121,118,706 recorded in the comparative 1937 month. This was almost identical with the drop of 37.0 per cent shown in the year-to-year comparison for February.

March permits for New York aggregated $11,419,827, or 87.7 per cent higher than the February figure of $6,085,752, but 68.2 per cent less than the March, 1937, amount of $35,871,602.

Volume Outside New York.

Permits values for the 214 cities outside of New York increased 36.0 per cent from February to March, the respective totals being $47,924,461 and $65,179,080. Last month's figure compared with $85,247,104 in March a year ago, or a decline of 23.5 per cent.

While the year-to-year drop in permit values during March was more or less shared in by all the geographical groups, it is equally interesting to note that, with the single exception of the South Atlantic states, all sections of the country displayed rather heavy increases in March as compared with the preceding month.

Groups	March 1938	March 1937
New England	$ 5,552,875	$ 5,757,395

Although permit valuations during February and March dropped rather sharply from those of a year ago, the aggregate for the first quarter of 1938 was fractionally higher than for the first three months of 1937. This was due to the heavy increase reported last January. During that month the volume of permits was unduly swelled by the filing of a great number of permits in New York before a new building code was put into effect there late in January.

Permits for the first three months of 1938 for the 215 cities totaled $277,475,245, as compared with $275,460,360 last year, or a rise of 0.7 per cent. New York's aggregate for the first quarter was $123,577,619, or a gain of 56.2 per cent over the $79,117,384 a year ago. For the 214 cities outside of New York the total was $153,897,626 as against $196,342,976 for the like 1937 period, or a loss of 21.6 per cent.

Geographical Groups.

ARCHITECTS GET PROPOSALS FOR U. S. REBUILDING

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW ORLEANS, April 16.—Definite proposals for releasing the pent-up resources of the United States construction industries through a vast program for rebuilding America will be laid before the American Institute of Architects at its seventieth convention opening here Tuesday and continuing through Friday.

Committees representing the nation's architects, builders, materials manufacturers, and the allied arts have completed studies of building costs, W. P. A. projects, housing and city planning, architectural education, and many other problems vitally affecting the public and the profession of architecture.

600 to Attend.

Representatives of the Federal Government will address the convention, which will be attended by more than 600 delegates from the Institute's 70 chapters throughout the country. Under the auspices of the Institute's Committee on Housing, 10 regional meetings mobilizing 12,000 architects to co-operate with the Government in stimulating small home building, slum clearance, and low-cost housing have been held within the last month in addition to many local meetings.

The Housing Committee, it was announced, has asked every regional and city planning commission in the United States to take steps to remove the barriers to the development of a slum clearance and a private industry building program. The Housing Act, and the programs of the Federal Housing Administration and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board will, it is declared, "greatly encourage both public aud private housing without conflict."

"But," it is pointed out, "these advantages are available only in those parts of American cities which are found eligible."

Serious Situation.

A most serious situation exists in nearly every city regarding privately promoted housing because in many areas no mortgage insurance can now be obtained, according to the committee. "These areas are not properly eligible, because of wrong zoning, no zoning, lack of a real property inventory or a land use survey, insufficient or no neighborhood conveniences, such as parks, playgrounds, churches and amusements—deteriorated neighborhoods, lack of proper streets and transportation; bad assessments and tax situations in some districts.

"In the field of slum clearance and better housing for the underprivileged, involving public aid, studies should be made now. This must be kept distinct, in the public mind, from the general volume of housing to be privately financed, which it is so important to undertake immediately in order to revive building and prosperity.

"Determination of need and make-ready problems are planning functions. They are distinct from the administration of slum clearance housing projects, which can be organized with Government aid only after the need for them is fully shown. A separate 'Housing Authority' is required to manage and build a low-cost housing project, if Government aid is to be obtained."

Producers' Council.

The Producers' Council, national organization of leading manufacturers of building material and equipment, will hold its fifteenth annual meeting in conjunction with the architects' convention. The Association of the Collegiate Schools of Architecture and the National Council of Architectural Registration Boards will also meet on Monday, April 18.

Wednesday's sessions will open with the report of the Committee on Housing by Walter R. McCornack of Cleveland, chairman of the committe. The report will describe the major activities of the committee in co-operating closely with the Government agencies in Washington and with national organizations engaged in the housing field.

Following the Housing report, the architects will be addressed by A. C. Shire, acting director of the Technical Division of the United States Housing Authority; Miles Lanier Colean, deputy administrator of the Federal Housing Administration; Ormond E. Loomis, assistant to the chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank board, and Coleman Woodbury, director of the National Association of Housing Officials.

Seminar on Housing.

A joint seminar on housing and luncheon of the institute and the Producers' Council will be held Wednesday at 1 o'clock. The principal speaker will be E. O. Shreve, vice-president of General Electric, Schenectady, N. Y. Russell G. Creviston of the Crane Co., Chicago, president of the council, will preside.

Nominations of officers, including president, vice-president, secretary, and treasurer, will be made Wednesday noon. Regional directors for three years will also be nominated for the Western Mountain district, the Great Lakes district and the Middle Atlantic district. The polls will open at 10 a. m. on Thursday and close at 8 p. m.

Nominations of regional directors by petition have been received at the Octagon, Washington (D. C.) headquarters of the institute, as follows: Claire W. Ditchy of Detroit, for the Great Lakes district; Miller I. Kast of Harrisburg and Charles Z. Klauder and Edmund R. Purves of Philadelphia, for the Middle Atlantic district; Robert K. Fuller of Denver for the Western Mountain district.

Many other subjects affecting architecture will be dealt with at the convention, including allied arts, structural service, public information, preservation of historic buildings, registration laws, civic design, construction industry relations, professional organization of architects, and the development of the national capital. More than a score of committee reports dealing with progress in these and other fields will be submitted.

Architectural honors will be awarded at the annual banquet of the institute Friday evening, concluding event of the convention. Saturday will be spent in visiting New Orleans and Natchez.

Producers' council members will register with the Institute beginning at 3 p. m. Monday. Sessions on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday mornings will be presided over by Creviston. Election of officers will take place Tuesday morning, nominations being as follows:

Russell G. Creviston of the Crane Co., Chicago, president; F. J. Plimpton of Vermont Marble Co., New York, first vice-president; Paul F. Keatinge of the Universal Atlas Cement Co., Chicago, second vice-president; Orion O. Oaks of the American Radiator Co., New York, secretary; John J. Matson of the General Electric Co., Schenectady, treasurer.

Reports will be presented by President Creviston, managing director Marshall Adams, treasurer Matson, and committee chairmen. The annual dinner will be held on Tuesday evening.

BUILDING IN 37 STATES SHOWS MONTHLY GAIN

Construction Contracts in March 91 Pct. Over February, Dodge Corp. Reports.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 16.—Showing a greater than usual seasonal increase, construction contracts in the 37 states east of the Rocky Mountains rose 91 per cent in March over the February volume, the F. W. Dodge Corporation, building statisticians, reported today.

With this boost the figures closely approached the level of March, 1937.

Total for the month was $226,918,000 for all classes of construction against $118,945,000 in February and $231,246,000 in March, 1937.

Residential building, amounting to $79,396,000, was 98 per cent ahead of the previous month. The volume was down 12 per cent from March last year, but in contrast, the survey pointed out, January residential contracts were 54 per cent under the same month last year and February 36 per cent behind.

"Increased F H A mortgage applications and numerous planned large-scale housing projects," said the survey, "have not yet been reflected in the contract record, and these factors give promise of continued rises in contract volume in later months."

Non-residential building involved $87,823,000, a gain of 81 per cent over February. Public works and utilities with a total of $59,699,000, rose 96 per cent over the February figures.

The survey said both public and private actual construction during March increased beyond the usual seasonal proportions. Public activity amounted to $94,597,000 against $51,054,000 for February, while private construction totaled $132,321,000 against a February total of $67,891,000.

ASSETS OF FEDERAL INSTITUTION INCREASE

WASHINGTON, April 16.—Assets of $112,936,085.81—an increase of nearly $13,000,000 above its original capitalization by act of Congress in 1934—was shown today in the financial statement of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation for the nine-month period between July 1, 1937, and March 31 of this year.

This rapid increase in the corporation's assets has been brought about through earnings on investments, and premiums paid by the 1952 savings and loan associations which it now insures. The corporation insures the safety of share investments in thrift and home financing institutions up to $5000 for each investor.

The statement further revealed that the Insurance Corporation during the nine-month period operated on only 3.7 per cent of its total income, expenses being $142,608.36 and income from premiums, admission fees and interest on investment capital and reserves, $3,828,860.58. The total expenses of the period did not equal the income of $185,973.59 from the invested reserves.

Of the total net income for the period, $2,230,000 was allocated to a special reserve for contingencies.

"We've Looked Everywhere"

You've heard that one yourself. It comes from the distraught family trying to find a desirable home to rent. The chances are, they'll keep on looking everywhere; the desirable single family residences for rent in St. Louis are scarcer'n hen's teeth.

But luckily their problem does have a right answer. It's St. Louis Hills. Once they've looked in St. Louis Hills, the distraught family need look no farther. Not that St. Louis Hills has homes for rent, of course. But in St. Louis Hills it is so easy to find a home not only suitable but highly desirable that many people who come to rent, remain to buy. They find it fairly easy to do. Mortgage money is hunting for just such security as a St. Louis Hills home offers, so that you'll find it easy enough to finance yours with a reasonable down payment and the balance out of income.

See for yourself: Stop by the Willmore office at some convenient time; or if you prefer a definite appointment at your home or place of business, call FLanders 8100 and a Willmore representative will send in his car on the day and at the hour you specify.

"Only Small Down Payment"

That's the message from many used car dealers who are making special inducements at this time to reduce their stocks of used cars.

Or if the old car can be traded in it may not only take care of the down payment but cover a substantial part of the balance.

Many of the cars now on the market are later model trade-ins, affording opportunities for securing a better Used Car on very satisfactory terms.

The Von Versen properties, 13 parcels of real estate seized by the Government during the World War under the Trading With the Enemy Act, will be offered for sale by public auction April 26 at the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange.

Twenty per cent of the net proceeds will go to the Government and 80 per cent to the five children of the Baroness Maximillian von Versen, who was Miss Alice Clemens of St. Louis, daughter of James Clemens Jr. and granddaughter of John Mullanphy. Owner of the properties by inheritance, most of which were part of the Mullanphy holdings in North St. Louis, Miss Clemens married a young German army officer in Berlin, Baron von Versen.

Their children are Friederich, William, Maximillian and Lotte von Versen and Mrs. George von Arnim, all of Germany, excepting Lotte von Versen, who has made her home recently in France. Mrs. von Arnim's son, Baron George von Arnim of Berlin, visited in St. Louis last summer.

The properties, mostly in North St. Louis, between Jefferson avenue and the river, are unimproved excepting one parcel at 600 North Third street, under lease and occupied by a bus and trolley terminal at the western end of Eads Bridge. An undivided one-fifth interest in this parcel will be offered for sale. The only parcel not in St. Louis is a 29½-acre tract near Affton, St. Louis County.

The first street north of Delmar boulevard was named for the Von Versen family. But during the war it was renamed Enright avenue for one of the first American soldiers killed in the war, as Berlin avenue was renamed Pershing avenue in honor of the American General. The first street north on Enright was named Clemens for the Clemens family, of which Mark Twain (Samuel L. Clemens) was a member.

A representative of the Mercantile-Commerce Bank & Trust Co., agent here for the Alien Property Custodian, declined to estimate the value of the properties. However, Harry L. Cornet Jr., a real estate dealer, representing some of the Von Versen heirs, said the properties had declined greatly in value since they were seized, more than 20 years ago. Dwellings on the properties, many of them once old mansions, have fallen into decay and have been razed.

Harry D. McCabe, a real estate dealer, has been appointed agent to sell the property for the Attorney-General, successor in interest to the Alien Property Custodian. Several years ago a parcel of St. Louis real estate seized by the Government during the World War was sold here.

IN FRONT of the bicycle shop in which Orville Wright and his brother, the late Wilbur Wright, built the first heavier than air flying machine to operate successfully. The shop and the Wright home brought here from Dayton, O., and added to Ford's Early American Village. Orville Wright attended the dedication of the buildings yesterday.

MAN DIES, SHOT IN BRAWL AT HOME OF BARTENDER

Frank Douglas, pickpocket and holdup man, who was shot and wounded Thursday night in a brawl with Lloyd Stone, a bartender, in Stone's living quarters at 1505A Franklin avenue, died last night at City Hospital. He was shot three times in the chest.

Douglas, known to police as "Kelly of Madison," did not make a statement to police, although he told reporters he did not know who had shot him and insisted that he did not know Stone.

Stone, in a written statement to police, said he shot Douglas after the latter had beaten Mrs. Stone and cut her leg with a pocket knife with which he then advanced on the bartender. The same account was given by Mrs. Stone. Arrested on charges of assault to kill, Stone later was released on $2500 bond.

Douglas, 44 years old, was known as an associate of Percy Michael Fitzgerald, who is serving a life term for the kidnaping of August Luer, Alton banker and meat packer, in 1933. He was arrested for questioning in the abduction, but was released. He had served Workhouse sentences for petty larceny and grand larceny.

CALHOUN COUNTY MARKERS SHOW APPLE BLOSSOM TRAIL

Sunday Motorists in Illinois to Be Directed Along Route Where Blooms Abound.

A trail has been marked over Calhoun County (Ill.) roads passing some of the most attractive apple orchards in that region, where blossoms were expected to be in their prime today. The Hardin Lions' Club placed the markers, leading out of that town, the county seat. Hardin may be reached on pavement by U. S. Highway No. 67 from Alton to Jerseyville and State Route No. 38.

Dogwood and redbud also are blooming in the county. H. T. Bach, business manager of the Calhoun Apple Exchange, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday that, if the sun shines today, the apple blossoms will be at their maximum beauty, but that most of them will be gone within a week. Recent cold weather damaged only trees in low places and will not reduce the crop materially, he added.

IOWA CITY, Ia., April 16.—Normal W. De Witt of Victoria College, University of Victoria, Toronto, Canada, was elected president of the Classical Association of the Middle West and South at its thirty-fourth annual meeting here today. Louisville, Ky., was chosen as the site of the 1939 convention.

WRIGHT HOME AND SHOP IN FORD VILLAGE DEDICATED

DETROIT, April 16.—The Wright home and the bicycle shop where the Wright brothers built the first practical heavier-than-air flying machine were dedicated in the Ford Greenfield Village in Dearborn today. The buildings were brought here from Dayton, O.

Orville Wright attended the dedication ceremonies. His brother, Wilbur, with whom he made the first successful plane flight near Kitty Hawk, N. C., Dec. 17, 1903, is dead.

Henry Ford and his son, Edsel, were hosts at a reception to Orville Wright.

The celebration was concluded with a banquet tonight. Speeches were made by Dr. George W. Lewis, director of aeronautical research for the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics; Col. F. P. Lahm of New York, first army officer trained in flying by the Wright brothers; Walter R. Brookins of Los Angeles, first civilian they taught to fly, and Griffith Brewer of London, first Englishman to fly as a passenger.

WIDOW WINS $7087 AWARD IN SUIT OVER INSURANCE

Central States Life Co. Refused to Pay Policy on Ground Premium Was in Default.

A verdict for $7087 in favor of Mrs. Rosa LeGrand of Kelso, Mo., against the Central States Life Insurance Co. was returned yesterday by a jury in Circuit Judge Joseph J. Ward's court. It is based on a $5000 life policy carried by her husband, Frank LeGrand, who died in 1934. The verdict includes interest and a fee of $1000 for Mrs. LeGrand's legal expenses.

The insurance company refused payment on the ground that at the time of LeGrand's death a loan indebtedness of $1490 existed against the policy and further he had defaulted in payment of the 1933 premium, so that the net reserve value of the policy was insufficient to continue it in force as term insurance. Mrs. LeGrand, however, averred that the reserve was greater than the amount claimed by the company, thereby leaving a net balance more than sufficient to pay the premium which was in default.

SOCIAL SECURITY TAX RULING

Employers Who Believe They Are Exempt May Sue.

NEW ORLEANS, April 16.—The United States Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals ruled today employers who believe they are exempt from Social Security taxes must pay the levies, but may sue to get their money back.

The opinion was given on a Georgia case in which turpentine processors sought to prevent the Collector of Internal Revenue from collecting the tax.

ODDITIES IN CAREER OF COL. E. H. R. GREEN

Revealed by 3,000,000 Words of Testimony in 4-State Fight to Tax Estate.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 16.—The stout right leg of Col. Edward H. R. Green, son of Hetty Green, the financier, was buried in a grave at Bellows Falls, Vt., 46 years before he followed it in death . . . (devotion to New England).

The Colonel had a box at the Polo Grounds, was a musical comedy first-nighter, gave $5 gold pieces to policemen in Fifth avenue every Christmas, had a hotel suite here and a special office chair to hold his 315-pound bulk . . . (loyalty to New York).

All traffic lights in Miami were green to the Colonel; he carried a special star on his car and double-parked it with immunity . . . (affection for Florida).

He once saved a Texas bank from a run, interested himself in the boll weevil, looked for oil and ran a railroad, kept a spare cork leg in a room for years, organized a brass band, a baseball team and was proud of his honorary colonelcy . . . (devotion to Texas).

These are some of the oddities picked at random from the 3,000,000 words of testimony taken so far in the fight of Massachusetts, New York, Florida and Texas for the right to tax the Colonel's $40,000,000 estate.

The seemingly interminable contest, held before the roving court of John Spaulding Flannery, Commissioner of the United States Supreme Court, is now drawing to an end in Miami, and what has been read above are some of the reasons advanced by the four claimants to prove their points.

Memories and Mysteries.

It's a strange record, full of biographical details, fantastic, mirthful, dull; full of vainglorious hopes and mad antics—the memories of men and women who knew Col. Green as one who loved, without special favor, the mysteries of astronomy and air-conditioning, the joys of riches, baseball and children, the intellectual maunderings of bad as well as good philosophers, science, brass bands, yachting, philately, numismtics, whaling and politics.

The record further shows that he had, at various times, 11 wards, young women whom he educated because he liked them and their parents.

Often he would spend an afternoon browsing among his 30 trunks of coins and stamps. Of an evening, at Round Hill, his South Dartmouth (Mass.) estate, he would distribute nickels and the gathering would play slot machines. He was called the spark plug of hometown entertainments in Texas. He turned up in Terrell and before another day had passed the town had a new baseball team and a brass band.

He led a mule into the Texas river bottoms and slugged it on the head with a club, thinking to drill for oil where the mule expired. He did, but he found no oil. He sat at the throttle of a locomotive on the Texas Midland Railroad. He sat in his private car, No. 999, gazing at the stars through his own telescope. He meditated on the infinity of the night, and in his study pondered the subtleties of philosophers.

Owned Plane and Dirigible.

Col. Green spent thousands on the Round Hill estate, and kept a large supply of Turkish towels at hand to place around the inside of the windows when northeast storms blew the rain in. He owned an airplane, but never rode in it. He bought a dirigible and enjoyed the rides. He experimented with fog-dispelling and synthetic jewelry. He carried around a pocketful of diamonds, jiggling them as other men let coins slip through their fingers.

Green crossed his legs on a desk in Texas, spat on the floor, and said anybody with a thousand dollars could be a Colonel. He brought the first automobile to Texas and paid out $1500 in damage suits, raced the car through a shower of peaches and tomatoes and raised chickens, sent friends good whisky and rum, and chatted with workmen.

The Colonel owned the world's costliest yacht in 1917. It had a crew of 72, and it sank in shallow water. He enshrined an old whaling schooner, collected rare old books and documents and paintings. He liked vaudeville and horse-play. He paid big sums for storing automobiles he rarely used, and he was always on the go, moving from Massachusetts to Texas to Florida to New York and back to Massachusetts. He was a man of good humor and generosity and curiosity.

TAXICAB DRIVER ACCUSED OF INTIMIDATING WITNESS

Ralph Smith, a taxicab driver, was arrested yesterday by city detectives on the request of Henry G. Morris, Assistant United States District Attorney, who said a warrant would be sought tomorrow charging Smith with intimidating a witness in a Mann Act case.

Morris told reporters that Smith had threatened Mrs. Louise Smith, principal Government witness in the case against Rowe Gotcher, which is scheduled to go to trial in Federal Court tomorrow morning. Smith, 28 years old, was arrested in a hotel in the 3300 block of Olive street.

Mrs. Smith, 22, who resides at 4121 Olive street, also was taken into custody as a precautionary measure. The Smiths are not related.

NEW DOUBLES LEADER IN THE A. B. C. TOURNEY

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 16.—Don Johnson and Fonnie Snyder of Indianapolis, took first place in the two-man team event at the American Bowling Congress today with a score of 1337.

By the slim margin of two pins, they ousted Fred Mounts and Harry Wheeler, also of Indianapolis, from the top of the division.

The No. 4 and No. 7 pins almost kept the pair from taking the leadership. In the last frame of his last game, Snyder left the two pins standing. But he bumped them off the drives with his next ball for a spare that gave them first place.

Johnson and Snyder are not members of the same five-man club. The former bowled with the Barbasols of Indianapolis last night, while Snyder was in action for the Commercial Art Service team.

It was a big second game that put them over the mark. After a mediocre opening, during which Snyder tumbled 200 pins and Johnson 177, then Johnson scored 258 while Snyder almost kept pace with hi mwith a 253 total. Their combined 511 score was second highest single game of the tournament. Both dropped off slightly in the windup, Snyder getting 235 and Johnson 214.

Mitzi Weinstein Rolls 643.

Mitzi Weinstein topped the Silver Seals of St. Louis in the minor events, totaling 643 on games of 187, 244, 212. Ambrose Nathe clicked with games of 203-210-222 for a 635 total.

SIX SCHOOLS TO SEEK TITLE IN TENNIS LEAGUE

By Davison Obear.

The Suburban High School tennis group will open its series of round robin matches on May 2, according to the schedule announced by C. "Stub" Muhl, University City High School coach. Last year bad weather prevented completion of the schedule, but the coaches of the various teams hope for a better break this year.

Six county high schools will have teams in this year's competition. The teams are Webster Groves, Maplewood, Normandy, Kirkwood, Clayton and University City. Wellston, Ritenour and St. Charles will not have teams this year.

All of the matches will be played on Monday afternoons except those on May 31, which will be on Tuesday. This is due to the fact that Monday, May 30, is Decoration day. The six schools will play three matches on each afternoon.

According to the plan of competition, each dual match will consist of three singles and two doubles matches. Each individual match will count one point in the competition. Each shool must use at least five players and may use a full complement of seven players.

May 9—Webster vs. Normandy, Maplewood vs. University City, Kirkwood vs. Clayton.

Bears' Baseball Team Loses, 6-4, To Illinois Normal

Their defense faltering throughout, the Washington University Bears lost their second straight ball game, yesterday afternoon, 6-4, to the Illinois Normal Red Birds.

The Bears drew first blood in the first frame, Charley Gilles, third man up with two down, doubled to deep center and scored when Lynn Saunders singled to right. The Bruins added two more in the third on singles by Cummins, Skubiz and Saunders.

In the fifth, the Bears went haywire as Second Baseman Johnny Skubiz fumbled a double-play ball to fill the sacks with one down. On the next play, Skubiz fumbled again, allowing Kavanagh, who had walked, to score. McReynolds, the next batter, hit a long looper to left and Iggy Uhlemeyer fell down trying to make a one-hand catch. Two runs crossed the plate. Huey got Garnero on a pop-up to Gilles, but Hainline singled to center to push across the fourth run of the inning.

An error by First Baseman Saunders and another by Third Sacker Pfeiffer in the seventh permitted the Red Birds to tally another.

The Bear hurlers were in good form, permitting only five hits, in comparison with 12 given by Kavanagh, the Normal hurler. All five of the victors' hits came off Huey. Devine and Janes, each hurling a frame, held the visitors hitless.

APPROXIMATELY 1200 SHELL dealers attended a meeting, banquet and stage show, held recently by the Shell Petroleum Corporation at the Jefferson Hotel at which the principal speakers were C. W. Manville, central division manager; Purdom C. Thomas, division sales manager, and R. L. Sanner, division merchandising manager.

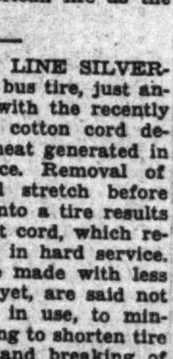
C. W. Manville.

Manville explained the company's sales campaign, saying that it was built around the dealers as much as around the products, and that the basis of both advertising and merchandising plans was continual improvement of dealer service and selling methods. Thomas traced the growth of retail merchandising from the days of a few scattered curb pumps to the several hundred thousand gasoline and oil stations of today. Shell, he said, recognizing the fact that the good dealer thrived on the increasing competition, recently added a retail merchandising department. Sanner discussed the plans for increased publicity and advertising for Shell's touring service as well as the use of novel posters, advertising themes and dealer tie-ins in the new gasoline and motor oil campaign.

P. C. Thomas.

A feature was the interruption of Thomas' talk by a "Charlie MacLubescroll" act, in which a dummy 12 feet tall, with a greatly enlarged lubescroll, a patented Shell device, for a body, played a part. Thomas held a small dummy, and there was a realistic conversation between the two dummies, in which their arms, eyes and heads were manipulated for humorous as well as effective sales talk effects. A talking slide film, called "The One-Two , Punch," showed "Kayo McSlug," representing the Shell dealer, pitted in a ring against "Dead Pan O'Leary" and overcoming him with the one-two punch of advertising and merchandising. The film was concluded with the introduction of Sanner as the dealers' coach and second in their fight for business. A full-length moving picture shown under the title, "Alias Jimmy Whitaker," produced by the Shell Corporation in Hollywood, drove home a definite merchandising lesson.

A MEETING OF MEMBERS IN St. Louis and vicinity of members of the Plymouth Salesmen's League, composed of retail salesmen of Plymouth cars for Dodge, Chrysler and De Soto dealers will be held tomorrow morning and afternoon at the Coronado Hotel.



H. G. Moock

The principal speaker will be Harry G. Moock, vice-president in in charge of sales for the Plymouth Motor Corporation.

Moock said in Detroit yesterday that his talk at the meeting would be titled "As One Salesman to Another," and that he expected a definite spring acceleration in the buying of autos, which he declared were now as necessary to American life as the coffee pot.

A NEW FIRST LINE SILVERTOWN truck and bus tire, just announced, is built with the recently introduced hi-flex cotton cord designed to reduce heat generated in high speed service. Removal of so-called artificial stretch before the cord is built into a tire results in a more compact cord, which retains its elasticity in hard service. The new tires are made with less overall thickness, yet, are said not to grow or bulge in use, to minimize strains tending to shorten tire life and to withstand breaking of shoulders and sidewalls. In addition to hi-flex, the tires incorporate ply-flex construction, which distributes stresses through the fabric to prevent development of local weak spots, and ply-lock, which protects the short plies from tearing loose above the tire beads.

THE FOLLOWING OFFICERS were elected at the annual meeting of the Pontiac St. Louis Dealers' Association Wednesday night at the Coronado Hotel: President, M. W. Freund of the Freund Pontiac Co.; vice-president, Christ Christen of the Christ Christen Pontiac Co., and secretary-treasurer, W. C. King of the North Side Pontiac Co. Some of Today's Easter Hat Creations As Worn by Fashionable St. Louis Women

A—A dashing version of grandmother's poke bonnet has joined the Easter parade. Mrs. Joseph Agatstein's model is of black taffeta and ties demurely under the chin. A ruffle of white Valenciennes lace under the edge of the brim contributes a picturesque accent. ● B—A heart-shaped Watteau hat of black felt adds old-fashioned flower clusters and a veil, and is most becoming to its new owner, Miss Lucy Callahan. ●C—Poppies that are realistic both in size and color are perched at the front of Miss Betty Jane Rosenthal's new Easter hat. The crown is high but devoid of a top while the mushroom brim frames the face becomingly. There are ribbons tied under the chin. The straw is black leghorn. ● D—A saucy little toque of black antelope chosen by Miss Alice Jane Meyer has a disc of rough wheat colored straw completely obscuring the view of one eye. ● E—Three butterflies in variegated hues, each different from the other, have alighted on the extremely broad-brimmed hat of Mrs. Robert Meeker. The hat is of black felt and its high crown is built in tiers. ● F—The cartwheel is again a favorite, especially when it combines a rough and smooth straw such as this model worn by Miss Betty Gross. A bunch of lilacs forms a decoration that is typical of the flower trend of the season.

Crazy! That's the Keynote of Women's Spring Headgear, and They Like It!

By Sylvia Stiles

A WOMAN once chose her Easter bonnet because of the springtime. The imperativeness of having a new hat for the Easter parade overshadowed any specific appeal of feathers, flowers or ribbons.

Now a woman chooses her Easter bonnet for any one of a hundred different reasons, each sufficient to cause a riot. Perhaps she buys it because she is convinced that the world never has seen anything like this special millinery concoction and she knows that whether she wears it to church in the morning or to tea in the afternoon everyone who sees her will forget the sermon or the sugar. The hat's resemblance to a bowl of flowers, to a bird's nest, to a gaily painted egg, to a beehive or to a market basket may have been important as a deciding factor.

Youth likes to sing of "crazy rhythm" and the tempo has been set to suit it but the crazy hats have it all over the music masters when it comes to marking the staccato notes of Our Time. There's a new madness about the choice of headgear which makes a woman forget that she once wanted her husband to like her hats and enables her to turn a deaf ear to the ridicule of masculine critics. She doesn't care whether her new sailor is becoming when she knows that it is smart and she is equally unconscious of the silly expression which a peach basket bonnet may give to her moon-shaped face.

Fortunately for any woman who has let the fluttering veils and daring fashions go to her head, the designers of millinery modes offer a saving grace. They have decreed that variety not only is the spice of the season's styles but the flattering feature of the Easter parade. While a hat may be freakish in the eyes of the men it need not be unbecoming and if it doesn't make the wearer look pretty as well as chic, then there is something wrong with her buying technique.

To assemble sufficient crazy hats that are varied in style and also flattering to modern faces, the designers have flipped the pages of history. A survey of the Easter modes is convincing that they have gathered the extreme ideas through the ages and bedecked them with a 1938 fashion flair. There are large hats and small ones, high ones and flat ones. Color, shape and fabric have been employed with a lavish hand.

The preferences of St. Louis women illustrate the diversity of styles and the happy fact that a hat that is extreme in its style also can be most becoming. These selections prove, too, that millinery is important in expressing one's moods and individuality. Dashing capelines that are swathed with multicolored veiling suit the woman who likes exotic themes. Poke bonnets that are trimmed with flowers or laces are worn by those who look well in the picturesque type of costumes. Flower turbans add a graceful, feminine aspect to a spring ensemble and are as becoming to young girls as they are to matrons. Saucy sailors add a perky note to tailleurs and become frivolous when adorned with floral wreaths or feathers. Turbans and toques dash into the new season with visor fronts or towering peaks.

No size, color or fabric of Easter hats can be regarded as the one that leads in fashion importance or popularity. The designers flaunt cartwheels in our faces and then sneak up behind our backs with such bewitching pillboxes that a choice of either extreme is impossible. At the moment there is a flutter of interest in the flower turbans to indicate that women are thinking in terms of pretty hats as well as silly ones. Height of crowns is another matter that is left to the decision of the wearer.

Trimming is the one feature of the Easter hats on which all designers and all wearers are agreed. A plain hat is certain to be regarded as of last year's vintage. Even the felt saucer that is worn with street clothes has its bright veil or its flutter of ribbon. All sorts of oddities are appealing as evidenced by butterflies, upstanding eagle quills, vivid cabbage roses, valenciennes lace ruffles and dagger-like hatpins that are a part of the millinery picture.

THE WORLD AS WOMEN SEE IT

THIS NEW YORK

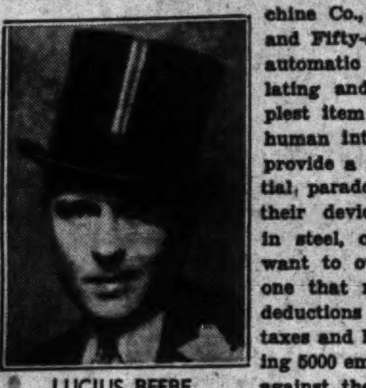
NEW YORK, April 16.

PROBABLY the most fascinating shop windows in New York, even including Bill Oakie's jobs for Marcus and the fabulous clothes at Saks Fifth Avenue, are those of the International Business Machine Co., in their new office at Madison and Fifty-seventh. The firm manufactures automatic bookkeeping, accounting, calculating and recording machinery, the simplest item of which is so superior to the human intelligence which devised it as to provide a really splendid problem in essential paradox for the metaphysicians. All their devices are so beautifully finished in steel, chromium and enamel that you want to own them for yourself, even the one that makes out pay-roll checks with deductions for personal phone calls, state taxes and lunch-room books for a firm having 5000 employes. Pressing our nose firmly against the show window the other morning, the notion fairly surged into our mind: why not a newspaper paragrapher's columning machine? There are plot machines for playwrights and novelists, so why not one that will relieve Louis Sobol and Danny Walker and Maury Paul and ourself of all necessity for imaginative labor?



LUCIUS BEEBE

All it will require will be an inclusive magazine of names, for Maury, for example: Beth Leary, Mrs. Farley, Laura Corrigan, Ogden Goelet, the Ottavio Prochets and -ls- M-xw-ell, the Joshua Cosdens and Clifton Webb, and a cross-reference supply of accustomed phrases: "Longuyland," "oodles of ducats," "impressionable young lovlies," "Jewels Glaenzer" and "green-eyed monster." There would be a number of geographical adjustments for Palm Beach, the Surf Club, Bellevue Avenue, St. Thomas' Church, the Iridium Room and the Colony, and also topical stops for weddings, annulments, Reno-vations and kissnest delinquencies. All Maury would have to do would be to adjust the machine when Sunday's copy is due and out would come his column, fresh, original, no two ever alike. The only drawback to the whole arrangement would be that newspaper proprietors might also hear of the invention and, by the simple device of purchasing a few on the installment plan, quite do away with Maury and Louis and ourself.

● A HALF-HOUR of madness, which for the rest of the day unnerved the city staff of one of the town's dailies, took place a few mornings ago, when the day side took over the desk and started to work. There are nearly 20 phones, of one sort or another, apportioned between the city editor and his three assistants on the desk, and from the very beginning it was apparent something was radically wrong. Bells started to ring and editors, picking up the handsets, found them dead, while other executives, snatching supposedly free phones to put in outgoing calls, found themselves talking with exasperated strangers. The bells jangled with rapid acceleration, but nobody seemed able to make any sense with the phones. An air of panic became discernible. What to do? What went on? Send a boy upstairs to the chief operator! But nothing seemed to abate the tumult, terror and noisy frustration which mounted throughout half an hour to a crescendo of screaming dementia. At this point a hastily summoned repairman from the phone company arrived, unscrambled the desk wires, disarranged by a careless charwoman, put the right handsets back on the right cradles and bade the staff be about its business. The shop, however, hasn't been the same since.

● THE MANHATTAN PENTHOUSE, which, in an era of prohibition and a boom market, expressed the ultimate index of success, now seems something out of the wistful and glamourous past. There are, of course, still penthouses, and people live in them just as they always have (there have been penthouses in New York since the days of the Dutch rule), but there doesn't attach to them the flavorsome implication of elegance and worldliness that clung to the favored '20s. Only a decade ago, to live on the roof, with the soot gently raining down on your beach furniture and the night peopled by the strange jungle life that went on among the elevator skylights, was reserved for the princes and profiteers of the market and the saloon business. Today it's nothing but another apartment. Hardly a fictitious murder baffled the sleuths of Center Street but the body was found, apparently having been drowned in a bath of creme de menthe and stuffed into the internal economy of a grandfather clock—in a penthouse. Love flourished on the roofs as it does among the shad at the Aquarium. Today it may still so flourish in a world of ventilators and blowers and fire escapes, but it lacks the exotic cachet it possessed when Dan Moriarity was the town's first citizen and Jimmy Walker was its Mayor. Somebody, perhaps Stanley Walker, who recorded the gaudy trivialia of "The Night Club Era," should do the penthouse era up brown while there are still survivors of some of the more epic encounters among the Bacardi bottles along the Park Avenue rooms and the books of Pease & Elliman still bear the records of $40,000 rentals.

Part Played By Wife of Band Leader

Mrs. Paul Whiteman Handles All Business Affairs of Her Famous Husband.

By Alice Hughes

NEW YORK, April 16.

AS I've said often before, it's always interesting to look behind the man in the limelight and see the woman who very often operates it. At least she sees that he has his vitamins and his proper shuteye. In this case I've been studying Mrs. Paul Whiteman, wife of the large maestro who for 20 years has been famed in the world of modern music. It was he who first brought jazz into the concert halls, and who made George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" the most talked-of music of its time.

Now Mrs. Whiteman was a great girl on her own at one time, and she needed no roly-poly band leader to crack the newspapers. As Margaret Livingston she was one of the leading moving picture actresses of her era with a figure that set young men to dreaming. Her art reached a high point in an Edward G. Robinson film, when that gentle, art-collecting gunman gave her a resounding kick.

But Margaret Livingston, as such, is no more. She is now Mrs. Paul Whiteman exclusively, and as such handles his business affairs, which are far from picayune. In the past two decades he has done a gross business of nearly $20,000,000—not alfalfa in any trade. At one time he grossed as much as $35,000 a week. She not only presides over the apartment in which Ooom Paul lives like one of the better Rajahs, but also keeps an eye on the big family of 30 people who make up his professional company. She knows their heart troubles, she's instantly aware of an ill baby in a musicker's family, and is in many ways the confidante and adviser of them all.

Even so, Mrs. Whiteman is anything but a career woman in the usual sense. She does it neither for money nor glory. She feels it is a big part of her job as Paul's wife, and she performs it elegantly. She is not only an after-dinner wife, she is a daytime spouse, too. It's routine with her, that's all. And to think that once she was a well-known, highly-paid and widely admired movie actress. Well, as they say, it takes all kinds to make Hollywood. I think Margaret is one of the nicer kind.

ALMOST OVERNIGHT the sidewalk life of our hopeful city comes to life in mid-April. The old women who sell flowers appear from somewhere, specializing in bachelors' buttons and carnations for the male lapels. Passing Jack Dempsey's famed restaurant at Fiftieth street and Broadway the other day I was surprised to see one of the plate-glass windows busted clean in—not the one which holds the magnums of vintage champagnes, but the one which displays the fresh vegetables! Could anyone have been so hungry as to smash this huge window just to grab a gay head of cabbage? I can't believe it. That MUST have been an accident!

DON'T GET me wrong—I don't frequent such places. But a few days ago a business date lured me into the cocktail lounge at 70 Park avenue, and I heard Hank, the gentlemanly bartender, say "Three Hemingways!" Curious, I asked him what the tipple was he labeled thus, and he said "Martinis." When I asked why, he answered, simply, "Death in the afternoon." I was answered . . .

I HOPE the bustling city of Pueblo, Colo., is properly swelling with just pride. One of its fairest daughters, Elizabeth Watson Deuel, has just been given the Public Service Fellowship of $1400 by our Barnard College. She won it for social service work in Utah . . .

GLORIA MORGAN VANDERBILT finally gave her uppity spring fashion opening at her shop, and it brought out the upper crust en masse, and very high stuff it was, too. Even the mannequins were azure-blooded, and Miss Polly Busch chose and introduced the youngsters in the little numbahs created by Gloria and her twin sister Thelma, the Lady Furness that was, though she still employs the title. A great pair, those girls. It was Thelma, you remember, who introduced the Duchess of Windsor to her present husband, and both the twins speak somewhat foreign-like, as they were brought up abroad. And mighty darned few citizens remember that when she was a girl married to a Mr. Converse. D. W. Griffith had some idea of making a movie actress of her. I remember her appearing in one quaint old silent film, anyway . . .

GIRLS! KEEP THE UPPER HAND!

KEEP a lily, white upper hand—if you don't, you'll never keep a man. It's not a question of tricks and flimsy deceptions. It doesn't mean that you must make a man frantic with jealousy in order to hold him. In the end, it's simply a matter of keeping your balance. If you can't control yourself, you'll never control a situation.

First of all, toss out the alibi that you've always been unlucky in love and always will be. Maybe you have been a fool in the past, but so has everyone else, at some time or other. All the women you know have lost the upper hand at some stage in their lives. They've all swallowed the bitter potion of neglect, and begged for a man's favors.

It's not so much Fate as your own faults that place you on the losing side. Our advice is to think back over your past and make a merciless analysis of your worst mistakes. As you read on, check carefully and see where you're guilty.

For instance, it's fatal to lean too far forward when you first meet a man. That's more a matter of self-respect than coquetry. The more advances you make, the less he has to make; and it's your own fault if a man in that situation treats you high-handedly. You asked for it.

If you like him, by all means show it. But don't go flinging yourself helter-skelter in his direction.

One charming man told us he was mad about a girl, and seeing her almost every night. His firm was sending him on a business trip, and he dreaded even a month away from her. Ten days before he had to leave, the girl said: "As long as you're going away for a whole month, I want you to be with me every single evening."

Our friend told us he felt restless from that minute on. He said: "Her saying that made it seem like a duty instead of a voluntary pleasure. If she'd only kept quiet, I'd have been on her doorstep every spare minute until I left town. But she reached out too far, and that ruined everything."

Never think you can keep a man by hanging on fiercely. Make him want to stay, instead of asking him to stay.

The odd thing is that even the smartest women have a tendency to lose every shred of pride, when emotions are involved. Don't do it. Time and again you'll have to grab for a mental muzzle quickly, to keep from saying too much, or groveling at a man's feet.

—o-o—

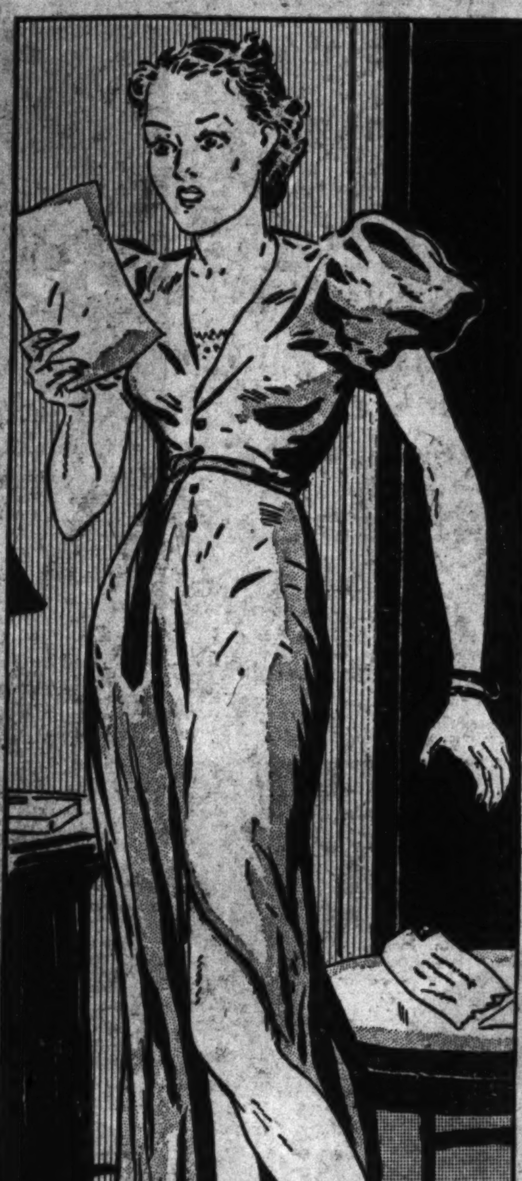
FOR instance, if a man has hurt you, don't disintegrate into a tearful accuser, or look at him with the eyes of a wounded doe. Hang on to your pride hard. If you can't trust yourself, walk away in a telling silence. It's far more effective than cringing or crying. Give yourself time to calm down and think things out. If you've been treated very badly, stiffen your backbone and let the man be the one to make amends.

If he's more thoughtless than brutal, treat him casually, with an amused air of not knowing him too well. He'll get the idea quickly enough, and hurry to re-establish himself.

One attractive woman told us her man broke three dates in a row, without even telephoning ahead. Instead of acting like a screaming fishwife or the wronged woman, she quietly packed her bags and went away for two weeks.

He wrote, and she didn't answer. He called her long distance, and she left word that she wasn't in. She said later: "It wasn't that I was playing a role, to capture his interest. He'd hurt me so badly that I honestly didn't know if I wanted to seem him again. But at the end of 10 days, he appeared at my retreat, and wouldn't leave until I'd taken him back."

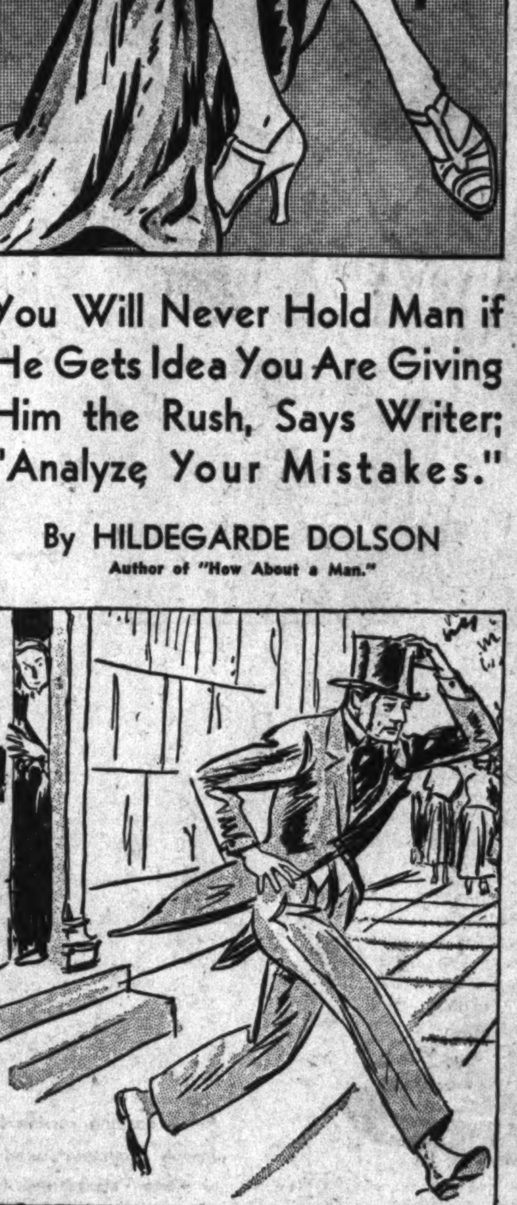
Often you'll want to forgive too easily, to overlook too much, and yield at every turn. Stop and reflect that no woman can afford to fling her pride in the dust. It's essential to make allowances, but you needn't be spineless about it.



You Will Never Hold Man if He Gets Idea You Are Giving Him the Rush, Says Writer; "Analyze Your Mistakes."

By HILDEGARDE DOLSON

Author of "How About a Man."



If you act like a door-mat, you can't blame a man for walking all over you. If you let him break your spirit, count on his breaking your heart.

Being too possessive is another dangerous pastime. Never make the error of flinging sweet words at a man constantly, just because you care for him. The words become sickening with repetition, and instead of bringing you equally endearing responses, you may be met with an impatient snarl.

The same holds true of affectionate gestures. Women who pat and paw a man constantly in public run the risk of boring him to distraction. A very beautiful fashion model told us she'd been cooing and clinging for six months. Suddenly a man got fed up with it, and told her so in no uncertain terms. She said: "At first I sniveled and moaned, because he didn't appreciate my love. Then I suddenly remembered that any man who'd ever acted too gooey toward me had always disgusted me in no time. And I realized that men feel exactly the same way."

This business of flaunting your undying devotion is far better used sparingly. Give yourself a chance to be adored as well as adoring, and your telephone will ring a lot oftener.

Telephones, by the way, can be the modern woman's instrument of torture. Don't ever persist in staying in night after night, on the chance that your favorite man will call. You'll have only yourself to blame if he ends up by taking you carelessly for granted.

Get it through your head that no one man can fill up your life completely, and start finding more things to think about.

One man gave us our cue by saying: "If a woman has plenty of interests, I feel flattered because she gives me a large share of her time. And the very fact that she's interested in something besides me makes her more fun to talk to, more stimulating to be with. Any girl whose life is a blank except for one man eventually gets on his nerves by being too demanding. She has only herself to blame if he gets tired of her in a hurry."

Friends are almost as important as work, in helping you keep your balance. Your mind gets stagnant if you see only one person. You lose all sense of perspective, and that's the first step in losing a man.

SEE other women and talk about something more than your current loves.

Also, never forget that another man is the best antidote for hurt pride. We do not mean two-timing. If your man is faithful, we strongly advise your being likewise. If he flits off to ports unknown, then you're justified in doing a bit of flitting on your own. However, any female who spends all her time thinking up ways to make a man jealous will find she's launched a boomerang. You can be nice to other men, and you should be. Don't let any man make you stay shut in alone with him every time you're together. He may think he wants that effect of "just us two alone on a desert island," but it's the man who gets tired of it first. See to it that you go out together, and spend at least some of your evenings with other people. Don't weaken when a man protests, and says he'd rather spend every minute alone with you.

Even the deepest love affair needs sustenance from the outside, and the stimulation of other contacts. Then neither of you will become satiated. Instead, you'll both appreciate your evenings alone all the more.

One writer told us he'd gone through a number of unimportant love affairs. He said: "Each of those women fed me on a steady diet of emotional orgies. They insisted that we talk about ourselves exclusively. Each woman acted as though she owned me, and resented the presence of other people, or the time I gave to writing. The result was that every affair burned itself out in short order. Now I've met a girl who has just the opposite effect. Because she's terribly interested in her own work, she understands and respects the way I feel about writing.

"We do talk about ourselves, but we discuss a thousand other things too. Sometimes we disagree violently, but that makes it all the more exciting. And instead of resenting my friends, she enjoys most of them as much as I do. Don't get the idea that it's a pretty little communion of spirits. We're both intensely physical, yet we have so much besides that, I feel stimulated every time I'm with her, and even the most beautiful women seem dull, in comparison."

Roll that over in your mind.

Suede Accessories

VIVIDLY toned accessories made of suede are illustrative of the novelty that is being applied to spring fashions. Three matching accessories are advocated if one's choice inclines toward gaiety because this assures exact expression of the dyer's art. Shoes, gloves and bolero are the popular trio, although gloves, bag and footwear or bag, belt and gloves may be the three that harmonize so perfectly.

Berry tones are being featured in the smooth finished leather styles this year. Strawberry, gooseberry and wineberry indicate the trend. Certain colorful bird tones also have served as the inspiration for leather tones. Oriole orange, black hawk and water thrush are three to consider. Gold nugget, nutmeg, cocoa and sugar are spicy hues that also are to be found in suede, while cadet blue, clipper blue, Kelly green and the pastels supply their color interest.

SHEER FROCKS IN VOGUE

SHEER frocks are appearing on the fashion horizon early this season, are more elaborate than usual and indicate that they are of decided style importance for afternoon as well as for evening occasions. New printed patterns share attention with the plain shades so that there is great variety of color, design and interpretation of popular trends.

The daytime favorite, judging by the early demand in St. Louis shops, is of navy or black net and usually is allied with a printed crepe. A redingote model, reserved in past years to summer weather, is of interest now. Typical of the trend is a frock of navy net bordered with a print combining navy, green and white. The slip is of the matching print.

Another sheer frock for daytime wear also indorses the redingote theme but is made entirely of a transparent print. Two different versions are seen. One uses the same patterned material for underslip and coat while the other employs companion prints. An example of the latter is the combination of a navy sheer fabric dotted with white for the slip and a white material dotted with navy for the full-length fitted coat.

Some type of jacket is noted in practically all of the sheer costumes designed for daytime wear. When the redingote idea is missing, then there is some short jacket or cape wrap to stress the vogue of a complete ensemble. There is much interest in a cape ensemble of a plain colored sheer material trimmed with a two-tone print. Applique designs that follow the flower or leaf motif of the patterned material adorn both dress and cape. The alliance of a printed cape or jacket with a solid colored dark sheer dress is another trend that is becoming popular.

Among sheer evening fashions there are printed and plain nets, chiffons of many colors and starched laces to illustrate the diversity of the fabrics and the wide scope of designers' preferences. Practically all of these dresses that are made of the thin materials follow the wide-skirted silhouette and have covered shoulders.

Tomorrow You'll Wear—

Sailor hats with tailored suits. Many more of the bamboo straw type will be worn by women who previously demanded felt.

Cardigan necklines in both spectator sport, knitted and afternoon dresses of the basic type. This is the neckline that gives the effect of being buttoned high, with a bit of V-line to reveal the throat. It is a high-cut effect particularly flattering to women.

Hoop skirts. As many as seven hoops are used under the more exaggerated skirts of evening dresses.

Ostrich muffs, and capes, and more ostrich trimming. England is said to be behind this promotion of ostrich, in an effort to distribute the products of her ostrich farms. So look for hats and boas and more ostrich fans.

Oh, no; what you really have, if you go to movies at all, is doubleitis, from sitting four or five or six hours hand running in a movie theater watching a couple of full-length features. Probably Class B or C features, at that, or even lower down in the alphabetical list, enough to set anyone twitching.

Well, anyway, that is the contention of the Anti-Movie Double-Feature League of America, which started about a year ago when two men wandered out of the dusk of a Nutley (N. J.) theater with headaches and decided the time had come for organized action on the part of helpless afflicted movie goers. "We want singles!" became the battle cry, as the organization spread to a dozen states when word got around that the Nutley chapter had picketed the house in which its organizers suffered, and ended double features.

Pickets were placed, more polls were taken—there have been scores of them since twins were born—and in various cities and towns and villages youths paraded the streets in placards that urged fellow citizens to boycott the scourge. Let there be one good feature, with perhaps a short and newsreel to fill in, demands the league; "quality rather than quantity," arguing that long-looking hours are bad for the health, keep children confined to the indoors, cause mental indigestion by an unbalanced diet on the film bill of fare, and bring about mass production of punk pictures.

"Maybe," answers the majority of the movie industry, "but what are we to do about it? If parents can't keep their youngsters from going to a five or six-hour show, how can they keep them from sitting through a single feature half a dozen times? And if the public at large feels that way about it, why do double and triple-feature shows keep packing the house? And what about all those who will be thrown out of work with fewer features being produced? There won't be enough extra shorts needed to take up the slack."

Where, at the present time, the matter seems to stand, even though polls continue to be taken, and continue to show results unfavorable to double features. Most of the country's 18,500 movie houses retain double and triple bills, along with gift nights for women, and in extreme cases bingo games as added attractions. Exhibitors throw up their hands when polls are mentioned and protest that if they did cut out doubles, unless their competitors did the same they would be ruined; that John Public and family is likely to vote one way and then act the opposite. Some few tried out the singles and shorts idea. Whether because of the polls and League efforts or because better business beckoned, one theater group in New York suburbs has dropped twin billings entirely, and another tried it out in some of its houses, both without any decrease in patronage. A new theater in Chicago opened up with only singles and shorts, and fills the house.

Producers in general concede the results of the polls, but evade the issue by passing it on to exhibitors. Double features have been a gold mine for independent outfits that turn them out in large numbers, at comparatively small expense. They would have rough sledding if forced, by single billings, to compete with big names. Samuel Goldwyn, on the other hand, has announced that he is anxious to see an end of double features, will back the campaign against them, and expects to make all his pictures so long that exhibitors will be unable to show them on the same bill with others.

David O. Selznick feels the same way, and Twentieth Century-Fox has come out with posters advocating singles. It has further shown its attitude by stipulating that no other feature should be on the same bill with its "In Old Chicago."

Incidentally, in Chicago the anti-double feature campaign became such a moot question that the Parent-Teachers' Association took up the anti standard and carried it into the City Hall. Although all the members have not been in full harmony on whether to base the fight on double features undermining the health, or on the ground that poor pictures, unfit for children, result, a delegation appealed to Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, Board of Health president, and asked him in behalf of the public health, to do something. He was able to assure them that the City Council was considering the matter of an anti-double feature ordinance.

HALF a dozen picture houses in Chicago even offer triple features, with some announcing gifts for children as an additional attraction for juvenile trade. It has been found that children are little concerned about health or high standards, but want all they can get for their dime. A theater in St. Louis tried the idea of drawing the youngsters with a "continuous five-hour show" starting at 10 a. m. Young patrons were invited to bring their lunch, and there was free parking space for bicycles. It was howling good fun for the youngsters, but apparently not too happy an arrangement for the theater, as the plan was dropped a couple of weeks ago.

With few exceptions local theaters run "two big features" which in neighborhood houses especially give the small fry a full afternoon on Saturday and Sunday, or both. They depart in groups and singly as soon as the lunch is gulped down, and no more is seen of them until the evening meal. In front rows of cavernous depths they spend around five hours whooping over a hero, weeping over tragedy, yelling their enthusiasm across isles, and frequently changing seats because of discomfort.

Children and poorly paid workers form a majority of those who favor double features, the polls have indicated. The twin bills, while given a hearty and so far permanent impetus by the depression, is traceable originally to shows in New England mill towns, where the mill workers, with small incomes, demanded the maximum for their meager entertainment budget and were not at all concerned whether they saw a super colossal epic or not.

Then along in the early thirties when the depression got into full swing, movie box offices began to feel hard times and exhibitors over the entire country tried first price-cutting and then doubling the quantity. Some that held back found they couldn't keep up with the competition and except for some first-run houses that had the pick of better films, the plan shortly became firmly entrenched.

From the beginning, though, everyone did not approve, and for several years the polls have been cropping up about the country. Every ballot favored the single and shorts against double features, except one taken in St. Louis, which supported doubles. Back in 1935 an association of independent producers in Wisconsin and upper Michigan canvassed movie goers, and four out of five favored single features. The vote on both sides totaled 45,000.

When Warner Brothers polled some 725,800 of the population on the subject the same proportion of four to one favored a single feature with short subejcts to an interminable feature program. At which, for a reason never made clear, Warner Brothers proceeded to introduce double features in the houses they operate, where previously only singles were shown.

The magazine Forum also undertook to find out how John Public feels about the matter, and in a canvass that took in an estimated 1 per cent of the whole population, doubles were defeated three to one. Innumerable noses were counted in towns, regions and states, by various groups, and always doubles lost out; in Chicago, what might be termed a "class" vote by organization members gave singles eight to one vote for doubles.

A POLL of that sort has always been able to get a lot of response, indicating at least interest, if disinclination for action, by partisans. Perhaps lack of action has been merely lack of organization, for chapters of the Anti-Movie Double-Feature League have started up now in Pennsylvania, California, Alabama, Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, Virginia, West Virginia, Kansas, Wisconsin and Ohio.

Again, just a few weeks ago the Magazine Cue, which gives weekly reports on various forms of entertainment in and about New York, printed a letter from a subscriber who felt the urge to get into print his personal feelings about the demoralizing effects of double features. That started the deluge; letters and more letters, telegrams and telephone calls poured into the offices of Cue, venting the spleen of outraged thousands against twin features. The outcome was another poll, results so far unknown.

It probably doesn't matter. Indications are that each community will have to settle the matter for itself. The National Board of Review has indicated it feels the controversy is none of its affair, although voicing disapproval of the combination of films rated for family entertainment with those for adults only.

THE PRO AND CON OF IT

FOR DOUBLE FEATURES

DESPITE polls, the mass audience wants doubles, the selective audience wants singles, and the mass audience pays most admissions.

Tastes vary in communities and sections of the country. Double features are most favored on the Pacific Coast and in the East, while the Midwest takes to singles.

When movie goers show their preference in material form, by ceasing to pack the house at double features, and single bill houses show the best business, exhibitors will give them what they want.

AGAINST THEM

If one picture is good, the other is sure to be poor, and spoil the pleasure in the first one.

Children always sit through a whole show, and if allowed to attend a film suitable for them, are sure to see one not suitable.

That two features get monotonous, and there is more fun in the variety given by a single, shorts, and news reels.

Why Music Is Essential Part Of School Life

"Children Need Music Because It Is the Language of the Spirit."

By Angelo Patri

THE school band is an essential part of school life. Children need music because it is the language of the spirit, and their spirits need the communication and the expression that it affords. Singing together stimulates them profoundly, sets them up with a sense of fitness and a desire to do something to show how good they feel. Any teacher knows that a tired class will fail in a test. Given a few minutes of relaxation, a change of air, and a chance to sing, or march to music, to listen to it, they will attack their task with vigor and success. Music is a tonic to the body and the spirit.

Healthy children move rhythmically. Tired children will move abruptly, jerkily, in broken rhythm, which expresses irritability always. The very best way to calm irritated nerves, to replace fatigue with fitness is to rest in an atmosphere filled with the rhythm and melody of music. Music will help nervous children, brighten dull ones, refresh weary ones and delight the eager ones. It must have a place in the school day.

CERTAIN KINDS of music are more effective for certain kinds of children than for others. The band that has drums and fifes—don't shudder—is ideal for the gangling lads who are not doing so well in lessons and behavior. You see, their bodies are growing fast and their mental operations are slowed down in consequence. Their nerves are strained to the breaking point, which comes oftenest in the silent assembly, the formal classrooms. Give these boys a chance to whang a drum or shriek on a fife—every day—and they will be much easier to live with; and what is more, they will do better work and grow more harmoniously.

The brasses and woods are a step higher. They are more difficult and require steadier hands and heads than do the drums. The sturdier, more settled in growth among the boys and girls do well with them. Blowing hard is good for growing children, and blowing toward some musical ideal is just about perfect for them. The tensions of the classrooms are a severe strain on the pre-adolescent, but the band lesson soothes and relieves all strain and sends the children away rested and content with the world. As a mental hygiene agent the band is priceless.

THEN COMES the school orchestra. Here are gathered the real musicians. They take their music seriously. The drums and the tooters are graduated to the orchestra, when and IF they have the gift. Here are the sensitive violinists, the temperatmental harpists, the soulful 'celloist and the fiery pianist. Here, too, is the orchestra leader, quivering to his finger tips, demanding, driving, pulling these musicians toward tonal perfection and divinity of expression. A good school orchestra is to the school what a good doctor, and a fine clergyman, and a skilled mental hygienist are to a community—present helps when help is needed most, towers of strength when strength is needed, stimulants to greater, nobler effort when the spirit falters and the flesh is weak.

When children are dull, or unhappy, or troublesome, strike up the band, and, better still, let them play in it. There is an instrument for every one of them, and a place.

Bloused Silhouette Fashion in St. Louis

THE bloused silhouette that has been heralded so extensively has arrived with a representative collection of dresses and coats. One shirtwaist frock on display in St. Louis has a net blouse foundation to hold the waistline fullness in place. The dress is made of a sheer navy fabric and is trimmed with a vivid green printed crepe. The gaily colored material forms a wide sash that ties at the side.

Coats which display the bloused treatment usually confine this to the back while the front is left plain and fitted. If you are interested in a coat of this type look for one that has a detachable collar of white pique and a skirt section with definite hemline fullness.

Novel belts are embroidered, appliqued or stitched in odd patterns and colors.

Bright Colors in Fashion Picture

WITH the Mexican tours, South American travel and our own Western ranches growing in fashion importance, we find the present style picture dotted here and there with the bright colors of the Indian West, and the accessory group offers numerous ways to make your sports suit ranch-conscious.

Whether you stay home or go West, however, it's smart to be colorful in the country and in your spectator ensembles. Casual is the word for it. Casual hats with big brims and colorful bands tied around the crown or draped in careless fashion around the neck.

Wood bead bracelets in the Indian reds, greens, yellows and clay colors are massed on the arm ensembled with a necklace or lapel gadget. Big, thin silk handkerchiefs in vivid colors are used for neckerchiefs. The smart woman wears bright satin blouses in shocking pink or green. And those who ride at the ranch resorts wear sombreros, beaded jackets, pony vests and other handsome appointments. Of course, the average traveler will not go to the extremes of the natives, but any woman may wear some colorful accessories.

Dark Brown in Vogue

Now that the lighter and brighter tones of brown have had their fling, there is a decided trend toward dark brown. Many women have been demanding the deep shade in accessories but have had difficulty in obtaining it in the shops. Reports indicate that there has been such an interest in this hue, that it now is available in bags and footwear as well as millinery. Costumes of dark brown usually feature the vogue of prints and often there is the addition of a second color such as green or yellow.

Distinctive Features Of Evening Dresses

SKIRTS that measure from eight to 10 yards at the hemline and bodices that are cut very low are distinctive features of the newest evening gowns. These two style points are apparent regardless of whether the dress is made of sheer or heavy material or the choice of a color.

Lace, chiffon, net, taffeta, satin and grosgrain are among the materials extensively used for the wide-skirted evening frocks. Off-the-shoulder necklines are characteristic of many bodices which have fluted trimming and shoulder straps so narrow that they are scarcely discernible. Black and white are seen more frequently than the bright colors, either used alone or together.

Smart Spring Frocks

Pin dots, stripes and multicolored printed rayon jerseys are going into some smart frocks for late spring wear. The vogue is similar to that which took the country by storm last summer, but there is greater diversity in the designs, colors and styling of the dresses. Pin dotted motifs that display contrasts of light and dark look new and different, while the broken striped patterns and the paisley prints create dresses that are attractive with many different accessories.

Yellow Petticoats

Yellow petticoats and slips are being worn with navy costumes. Taffeta is the fabric that is featured most extensively although lace-trimmed crepe models are being shown for use with afternoon dresses of sheer texture. The vogue of yellow which is definitely one of the springtime extends to pajamas and gowns, also. Flower tones are advocated.

MY OPINION

Martha Carr

Dear Martha Carr:

I HAVE a problem that has been on my mind for the last four years. I have four children—a boy 18 and a girl 16, a boy 9 and a girl 7. I have a W P A job, Mrs. Carr, and you know they don't pay much. My boy makes small pay and he gives me all he makes.

The girl makes a little here and there, but she spends all she makes on herself. I don't think it is right; but she thinks I am a mean father, just because I say something about it. I try to treat them all the same, and she thinks she is bigger than she is. She wants to wear a veil and all kinds of fancy clothes. And I do not think it is right for her to be on the go all the time. Of course, I don't want her to be a wallflower. She don't smoke or drink yet, and that is a whole lot. But if she starts running around like she wants to do, God knows what will happen. I would like to see her be a good little girl.

Hoping I hear from you and thanking you.

JUST A BIG FIVE.

While you are right to be watchful both of your boy and girl, you must try to think back when you were that age, and I am sure you will feel that some pleasures and outings are necessary for young people.

The boy is fine to be so kind and generous, but he should take a little pleasure, too, and you should suggest that he spend just a little for his own happiness; this will make him better satisfied. Evidently, the girl has a different disposition—probably none too anxious to work steadily—which she should do. And if she procures some work, she should contribute to the family a part of what she makes.

You are, naturally, more uneasy about her and, since she is not of age, in legal matters (that is, she cannot decide for herself yet, whether she will stay at home or live elsewhere), she must abide by your wishes in serious things. You could, of course, put her in a girls' home for wild, incorrigible girls, houses of correction, but I am sure you will not care to do this unless she disobeys you beyond reason.

The best thing to do is get her interested in some kind of normal pleasure, where she will not want to run nights and wear styles that are not good taste in your circumstances. If she would join one of the local clubs for girls, where there are directors who understand them (perhaps your church has such a club), she might be told, kindly, what is and is not good for her. And if you would like suggestions, go to the Board of Children's Guardians, in the Civil Courts Building.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

● WILL YOU KINDLY PRINT different things that a young man should do when he takes a girl out (like opening doors of the car, etc.)? I've been going with a young man and he doesn't know these things and I thought if you would print them, I could cut it out and send it to him, as I don't know any other way to tell him. Or should I have one of my friends tell him? Please answer as soon as possible as I am very anxious to correct this. It embarrasses me at all times and places. Thanking you, I am

WONDERING HOW TO TELL HIM.

I am afraid I have not the space to print the code necessary for a young man who has no training whatever in these matters. And, should I do so and you would cut out and send it to him, anonymously, it would scarcely be either kind or in good taste. Probably he would take the suggestions from some other man very well; especially if the subject was introduced in a clever and impersonal way in a small group.

Of course, you could see just how he feels and whether or not he might resent suggestions. Finally, someone might suggest consulting a writer on these subjects, who, by general consent, is given the authority to instruct and be of help in such matters. Books of this kind may be found at the Public Libraries and those in charge there know writers of unquestioned authority.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

● MY 18-YEAR-OLD DAUGHTER seems to have lost her head over a man 34 years old. I have pleaded with her to give him up, as I say he is too old for her; but it seems the more I say to her about his not being suitable for her, the more she thinks of him. I am afraid she will marry him. Won't you please help me with what you have to say? Thank you.

WORRIED MOTHER.

You would be wise to discontinue speaking to her for awhile, about your objections. And if you have friends, the mothers of other girls, for instance, who will, with their daughters, enter into a conspiracy to interest her in several younger men, this might work the cure. However, while 16 years is, ordinarily, too much difference, some girls mature younger than others. And, again, the man may be younger than his years in many ways. Probably the best you can do now is to persuade her to wait until she is several years older to decide, as she is too young now to marry anyone or to know her own mind.

Dear Mrs. Carr.

● I HAVE BEEN A WIDOW for the past 18 months. Should I take off my wedding ring? Some of my friends think so, but I can't bring myself to it. I do not intend to marry again. ANOTHER READER.

A widow continues to wear her engagement and wedding rings indefinitely—all her life if she cares to, unless she expects to remarry, when she removes both, after she is engaged.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

CAN YOU TELL ME if there is, here in Missouri, a State home for incurables? I am writing you in behalf of a friend who lives in the country.

The incurable is, in this case, a child, a girl now 9 years old. Owing to an injury to the brain at birth, this child has always been a hopeless imbecile. Until now the mother and grandmother have cared for this child, who is pitiful. But due to grief and strain the mother's mind has become impaired and she is in a sanitarium. The grandmother, on the verge of collapse, must be relieved of the child, so I am hoping some of your readers or you can tell me where this pitiful specimen of humanity can be placed. I will be looking for your answer, and thank you.

M. L.

I am sorry you have not known of the Missouri State Eleemosynary Board, which cares for children in need of special services and for the mentally ill. Write W. Ed Jamison, president of the State of Missouri Eleemosynary Board, Jefferson City, Mo.

Tomatoes Add Color, Flavor To Your Meals

TOMATO soup and tomato juice can give such a lift to the menu that we should use them as often as we can use them cleverly. We need them for color, for flavor and for the minerals and vitamins they provide. When other sources of vitamin C are expensive, as they are in between seasons, tomato juice is an excellent standby.

Here is an interesting set of recipes which have tomato juice or tomato soup as the reason for their being. Let one of them give color and flavor to the dinner you are planning.

HOT TOMATO JUICE

Two tablespoons chives.
Three cups tomato juice.
One teaspoon salt.
Dash of pepper.
One teaspoon sugar.
One drop tabasco sauce.
Two tablespoons lemon juice.

Let chives stand in tomato juice for half an hour. Strain and add salt, pepper and sugar. Heat just to boiling. Add tabasco sauce and lemon juice. Serve hot. Approximate yield: Six portions.

CREAM CHEESE TOMATO SOUP

Two packages (three ounces each) cream cheese.
Two tablespoons flour.
Four cups tomato juice.
One-half teaspoon salt.
Pepper.

Soften cheese and blend in flour. Add tomato juice slowly, blending carefully. Heat almost to boiling and season to taste. Approximate yield: Four to six portions.

RUM TUM DITTY

One-half pound American cheese, grated.
One-fourth teaspoon dry mustard.
One egg, slightly beaten.
Six slices toast.

Heat soup and cheese over hot water and stir until cheese is melted. Add mustard. Add to egg slowly, mixing well. Serve hot on toast points. Approximate yield: Four portions.

SAUCE FOR FISH

One large onion, minced.
Two tablespoons butter.
Three tablespoons flour.
One can condensed tomato soup.
One-half cup water.
One cup chopped, green olives.
One teaspoon minced parsley.

Saute onion in butter. Blend in flour and add tomato soup and water. Add olives and parsley and cook over low heat five minutes. stirring occasionally. Approximate yield: Two cups sauce.

SPICE MUFFINS

One and three-fourths cup sifted flour.
Two teaspoons baking powder.
One-half teaspoon baking soda.
One teaspoon cinnamon.
One-half teaspoon nutmeg.
One-fourth teaspoon cloves.
Three tablespoons shortening, melted.
Three-fourths cup sugar.
One egg, well beaten.
One can condensed tomato soup.

Mix and sift flour, baking powder, baking soda and spices together. Combine shortening, sugar, egg and soup. Add dry ingredients, mixing until almost smooth. Turn into greased muffin pans and bake in hot oven (400 degrees) 20 to 25 minutes. Approximate yield: Two dozen small muffins.

Highlights of Trip Through Southeast, the Birthplace of American Architecture

By Josephine Walter

CONDUCTOR OF "LET ME SUGGEST," COLUMN ON INTERIOR DECORATION IN THE SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH.

IF, dear reader, I sound more like a travel bureau than a writer on interior decoration this week, please bear with me, for I have just taken one of the most glorious trips in America up the east coast from South Carolina to Virginia—and am just bursting to tell about it. And, as it is a trip that more and more people seem to be taking, as attested by the fact that it is almost impossible to get a hotel room unless you have reservations weeks in advance, I would like to give as many helpful hints as possible to those planning this trip.

ONE OF THE BEAUTIFUL WROUGHT-IRON GATES IN CHARLESTON.

There is no doubt that more and more persons are becoming house and garden conscious, and a trip to that part of the country, which is practically the birthplace of American architecture, both interior and exterior, and which has probably some of the finest gardens in America, cannot help but prove an inspiration to all who go and see. And, let me give a little tip to you wives who have certain plans for things they would like to do around the house or yard. By all means inveigle your husbands into this trip, by fair means or foul, for they will become so enthusiastic that you'll probably have a hard time stopping them from tearing down the old homestead and putting up a little Tidewater Virginia number.

I'm not going into anything so detailed as the route to take, if for no other reason than because, with my ideas of geography, you might land in South Dakota instead of South Carolina. So, if you will climb on my magic carpet with me, we will whisk through the air and merely stop at those places that are of decorative or horticultural interest along the way.

In going from St. Louis southeast, by all means pause in Asheville, N. C., to see the Vanderbilt estate, called Biltmore. It is a handsome, elaborate place and, although you wouldn't get any idea on how to furnish your own little cottage, it has many rare and beautiful furnishings and is well worth a visit.

Just about 25 miles before you reach Charleston is Summerville, a charming, sleepy little town where practically every house has such an intriguing garden that you aren't able to resist peeking over the fence. Then, too, between here and Charleston are two of the most famous gardens in the State—Magnolia and Middleton. Both of these places are historic old plantations with magnificant gardens of which the chief glories are the azaleas and magnolias, although many other types of flowers and shrubs are also to be seen. The interesting thing is that the two have the same type of growth and are yet entirely different in mood, Middleton being quite formal in feeling while Magnolia represents a naturalistic treatment.

The beauties of Charleston are unending and I cannot begin to list all the places of interest to see. The whole city has an old world atmosphere and architects and landscape gardeners come from all over the country to study the buildings and gardens of this beautiful city.

On the way from Asheville to Charleston, S. C., and well worth at least a short stop, is Aiken, which boasts, among other things, more than over 100 polo fields. As this is one of the swankiest resorts in America it is a pleasure just to drive around and see the many beautiful estates even if you can't get into them. Then, too the town itself is very quaint and gives you your first real feeling of being in the historic Southland.

Of particular interest are the classic details of the exteriors and the magnificent wrought iron grillework which is to be seen on every hand.

On the way up the coast from Charleston, and just outside of Georgetown, are the Brookgreen gardens, which again are unique. Developed by Archer Huntington, they contain the largest collection of sculpture in America. The gardens are filled with formal walks and beautiful brick walls against which are displayed the pieces of sculpture at focal points of interest.

Finally, we arrive at Williamsburg, the fabulous city that John D. Rockefeller has completely rebuilt. So much had been written about this town and this project that there is very little for me to add.

Near Williamsburg are Yorktown and Jamestown, filled not only with places of beauty and historic interest, but actually the birthplace of our country, places that every American should see. Between Yorktown and Williamsburg is Carter Hall, one of the most magnificent plantations in Virginia and, to me, the highlight of the entire trip.

But don't think your trip is over when you have finished Williamsburg. Between Williamsburg and Richmond are the famous James River plantations, which line the bank of this river on both sides. There is Shirley and Berkeley and Westover on one side of the river and Eastover, Brandon and Upper Brandon on the other, each more beautiful than the last.

Richmond, too, has many estates well worth stopping to see and from there one must pause at Fredericksburg, if only long enough to see Kenmore, which was the home of George Washington's sister.

One may continue on north to Mount Vernon and Alexandria and start back by way of Charlottesville and see Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson.

And here I am, way past my allotted space, having just touched on the highlights of such a trip, and having to leave out many intensely interesting places. I might all that, though many people plan their trip to coincide with Garden week, don't worry if you have to go at some other time. Although some of the houses are only open during this time, many of them are open most of the year, for a fee, and no matter what time you see the gardens, in the spring and summer, there are great numbers of flowers and trees in bloom. And I believe that whoever coined the phrase "See America First" must have had the Southeast strongly in mind when he did so.

RECTOR'S RECIPES FOR HORS D'OEUVRES

By George Rector

HORS D'OEUVRES is hard to pronounce and would trip many a crack speller in a spelling contest. The word or words are French, of course, meaning in our language, appetizers. In Sweden they are called smorgasbord. In the old days, before they plastered signs in front of places reading "cocktail bar," it was "saloon" and instead of hors d'oeuvers they had free lunch.

The greatest assortment of hours d'oeuvres, hot and cold, I ever saw was in a little restaurant at Cape Ferrat, near Nice, on the Mediterranean. The name of the place was Caramello's. By actual count, there were 60, such as canapes, stuffed eggs and tomatoes, various salads, small fishes, meat balls and ever so many other varieties. They really did look so appetizing that I wanted to sample each and every one, but got my fill on the twenty-first.

Serving hors d'oeuvres today is more popular than ever. I have noticed in the food stores they have many ready to fill puff paste miniature croustades that come in boxes and you also will find a number of various pastes that are already prepared that come in tubes, such as anchovy paste, shrimp paste, etc.

In Rector's we had perhaps 20 to 30 different hors d'oeuvres and I shall be pleased to pass on to you the recipes for some of these tasty snacks. Now here's a nice combination. You can serve it on small rounds of toast, cut an inch and one-half in diameter, or in some of those prepared puff paste creations that can be purchased in the stores.

To one small package of cream cheese, add three tablespoons of grated carrots and one tablespoon of horseradish, but be sure to squeeze out the vinegar or preferably use the freshly grated horseradish. Now moisten and mix thoroughly with one tablespoon of mayonnaise. Season with a few grains of cayenne pepper and a light pinch of salt. When the mixture is perfectly smooth, place it in a pastry bag and force it through onto the small rounds of toast.

Devilled stuffed eggs are popular, too, and they also are easy to prepare. Remove the yolks from six hard cooked eggs which have been cut lengthwise, cream the yolks with one tablespoon of anchovy paste, one-half teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce and two or three tablespoons of mayonnaise. Season only with a light pinch of cayenne pepper. When this mixture has been creamed to a smooth paste, place in a pastry bag and fill up the egg whites. Decorate the top of each egg piece with several capers.

Cheese puffs are tasty and simple to prepare. Mix together one-quarter cup of soft white bread crumbs, one-half teaspoon paprika, a little salt and a light pinch of cayenne pepper. Separate one egg and to the yolk add one teaspoon of Worcestershire sause and beat until mixed. Then add it to the seasoned bread crumb mixture. Now add one cupful of grated American cheese and fold in the egg white stiffly beaten. Mix all these ingredients thoroughly and form in small balls. This quantity will make about 10 balls. Roll these small balls in fine dry bread crumbs and fry in deep fat until they take on a nice golden brown. Drain in absorbent paper. Insert a wooden pick in each of these cheese balls and there you are! Cheese puffs also are delicious to serve with the salad course.

THE OTHER DAY I received a letter from a friend of mine in London who raved about a little snack that he had in Boulestin's restaurant. It's called anchoiade and naturally calls for anchovies. Chop fine two dozen medium sized anchovies, one-quarter cup of chopped walnuts, one tablespoon of finely chopped parsley and one small button of garlic grated. Moisten with a tablespoon of olive oil and mix thoroughly. Now spread this mixture on small rounds of buttered toast. This combination goes well as a sandwich spread and remember, picnic days are not far away.

What is more delicious than a bowl of fresh shrimps served with a special sauce? To be sure the shrimps are boiled in salted water. Remove the shells and also the little black streaks running down the back of two pounds of shrimps. Now for the sauce. To one cup of mayonnaise, add the following finely chopped: One tablespoon of stuffed olives, one tablespoon of green peppers, one teaspoon of chives and one teaspoon of lemon juice. Mix the shrimps in this sauce.

Many of the old gourmets that patronized Rector's used to combine Roquefort cheese and cream cheese. Force through a sieve one-quarter pound of Roquefort cheese and to it add one small package of cream cheese, one tablespoon of horseradish, from which squeeze out the vinegar, one teaspoon of paprika, one teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce and four tablespoons of dry sherry. Cream together the two cheeses and mix in well the other ingredients.

This cheese mixture can be spread on potato chips, on crackers or on small rounds of toast. I think you will find it more appetizing to the eye if this mixture is put in a pastry bag and forced through in a decorative way on small, thin rounds of toast.

We had a waiter in Rector's, an Italian named Giolito, who not only was a fine waiter but knew a good deal about the kitchen. He served me some hard cooked eggs one evening that made a hit. I mean the sauce that went with them, and this is how he did it: Slice lengthwise four hard cooked eggs. Place on top of a slice of tomato one-half of a pimiento and on top of the pimiento the egg. Now on top of each egg place two anchovies crosswise. The sauce was made by adding to one-half cup of catsup, three tablespoons of olive oil, one small button of garlic grated, and one tablespoon of finely chopped parsley, all mixed together, of course, and then poured over the eggs.

To Housewives Who Cook for Obese Persons

Physician Gives Recipes Which Will Help in Reducing Process.

By

Logan Clendening, M. D.

THE housewife who is catering to a member of the household on a reducing diet will need to use some ingenuity. The obese person always has indulged himself; that is why he is obese. For articles of diet and menus which he will miss, I suggest the following substitution recipes:

Soy Bean Bread—One cup soy bean flour, one teaspoon salt, two teaspoons baking powder, one tablespoon shortening, two-thirds cup water, four egg yolks, four egg whites. Combine the flour, salt, baking powder, fat, water and egg yolks. Fold into this the egg whites which previously have been beaten stiff. Pour into greased loaf tin and bake in a moderate oven 30 to 40 minutes.

Rhubarb Pie—Make crust, using Golden Spread instead of butter. Filling: Cut up rhubarb and cook without water. Thicken by boiling one and one-half cups of the cooked rhubarb with the yolks of two eggs. Stir constantly, remove from fire and add two grains crushed saccharin. Bake in crust one-half hour.

Cantaloupe balls and pitted red cherries or peeled grapes.

Honeydew melon, chilled and served with quarter of lime and a sprinkling of powdered ginger.

Whole or half fresh peaches peeled and sprinkled with lemon juice to prevent turning black. Served with crushed fresh raspberries.

Pie Crusts—May be made of cellu, a cellulose substance with no food value.

For those with a tasty tongue I suggest eggs russe and filet of sole sara.

Eggs Russe—Hard poach the eggs. When cold carefully remove the yolks. Cream with enough mineral oil to make a moderately thick paste, add caviar and replace in the white. Arrange a bed of lettuce, on which lay slices of tomato; place the eggs on the tomato and mask with mineral oil mayonnaise.

Filet of Sole Sara (au vin blanc) —(Filets of whitefish may be substituted.) Boil the bones and heads of the fish three to four hours. Season with salt and pepper and strain through muslin. Melt one tablespoon of Golden Spread, add one tablespoon flour and blend. Add the strained liquor from the bones (about three-fourths of a cup) and one-half cup of any ordinary white wine, simmer for a few minutes and pour over the broiled fish. Add a few capers, if desired. This sauce also can be used on boiled fish.

Breakfast—Half a washed canned pear (fresh, if in season), one egg, one slice gluten toast and Golden Spread, cup black coffee.

Dinner—Tomato soup, one serving spare ribs and sauerkraut, lettuce and cucumber salad with mineral oil dressing, a sugar-free gelatin dessert, black coffee.

The flower-topped tweeds in the fashion picture lean to the soft, deep shades rather than the lighter pastels. Jackets, for example, in cornflower blue over navy skirts; deep rose over brown; hydrangea over wine.

ON THE FLICKER FRONT

By H. H. Niemeyer

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., April 16.

IT looks as though income tax trouble might keep Charles Laughton out of American pictures for some time, which will be just too bad, for Laughton is one of the very best screen stars England ever sent to this country. Laughton, whose Hollywood salary reached top figures, devised, or had devised for him, a scheme whereby he became a corporation or something of the sort with all of his earnings being paid into the organization which, in turn, paid the canny Charles a pretty small drawing account which he turned in on his Government report as annual income.

There was nothing underhand about the idea. The actual earnings were duly reported but since they went to an English holding company Laughton contended that he should not be taxed on them. It seems the thing had been worked successfuly by some eminent American financiers who became Bahama corporations.

This week, however, the Income Tax Department in Washington, having weighed, and brushed aside, our claim to an allowance of $4 for depreciation of an ancient car which we use in visiting studios, figuring, no doubt, that it had got through depreciating several years ago, will take up Laughton's case. The department demands $104,000, or thereabouts, in additional taxes from the English star and if it refuses to accept the actor's incorporation plan Laughton may decide to remain in the tight little island over the sea where he returned some time ago. Movie salaries—except Gracie Field's—are a lot smaller in England than in Hollywood but an English actor, who works in the United States but retains his English nationality, has to pay an income tax to his home country as well as to America. After this double indemnity is deducted his earnings here are less than he would get if he remained in London. The little matter of wider scope in the field of Art may appeal to some British players of note but, after all, business is business.

It must not be imagined that visiting British stars are the only ones who have some explaining to do in Washington. Most of the American boys and girls who have reached the top salary brackets by way of the films are in the same boat and several such cases will also be heard by the Tax Department along with Laughton's. Most of them claim that living up to their cinema reputations as glamor folk is expensive in the little matter of dress and have sought extensive allowances for "wardrobe."

—o-o—

●TAKE ADOLPHE MENJOU, for instance. He has long been touted by the publicity departments as the best dressed man in America. Certainly he is a "swell dresser on and off," and if he doesn't actually believe that ballyhoo himself he at least sees no reason why it should not have some cash value. There is something like a $10,000 difference of opinion between Menjou and the Tax Department at the moment based on the question of clothes allowance. And then there is William Powell, another immaculate star who claims that good suits are part of an actor's tools of trade. An expensive residence is another necessity for keeping up appearances. Powell's salary has reached such a figure that he finds he will make more money, net, by earning less and moving down into the lower taxable brackets. That is why you are not seeing Powell in as many pictures as you used to. About two or three a year is all he cares to make now.

Powell, too, has advanced the opinion that since a movie star's career is limited to a few years, some sort of an adjustment should be made, making allowances for the seasons to come when he will be earning a smaller salary or maybe none at all. So far such an idea has not reached an actual claiming stage but it has brought up the matter again of how long a star, pulling down a star's wage, can remain at the top.

●UNFORTUNATELY for Powell and the others who share his viewpoint, movie statistics no longer bear out their statements. In the gone and forgotten silent days of the films when glamor was about all the cinema folk had to offer the cash customers, what Bill says was true. The fickle public tired quickly and demanded newer and prettier faces or newer and handsomer men. Now they want actors who can act and as long as they can do that—and get satisfying plays—they can remain at the top.

Five years, for a long time, was considered the limit to a movie star's career. Among the big stars of today most of them have been big stars for about 10 years and are still hitting the high spots. A lot have gone far beyond that mark with no indication that they are slipping. Take Wallace Beery, who will soon round out 25 years in pictures, and Laurel and Hardy, believe it or not, who have been well-known comedians for over 20 years. William Powell, himself, has been going strong for 17 years and Norma Shearer has been in pictures for 18 years, with the last 16 as an actual, high-salaried star. Joan Crawford and Myrna Loy have not always been the stars they are today, but they have been before the cameras more than a dozen years.

NO, A MOVIE STAR'S life, as a star, is no longer measured by years. As long as they are supplied with good screen stories they will continue to be in demand. They overlook Powell's statement as to the year limit out here in Hollywood and say, pretty truthfully, "a star is as good as his last picture." Marlene Dietrich and Dick Powell and a good many other fine actors who have suffered from poor vehicles, will back up that statement. They know, however, that a good play will work wonders, so when you read about Bette Davis being in trouble with her studio because she refuses to play a part assigned to her—she is under suspension at Warners now as is Dick Powell—do not put it down to a fit of temperament. An actor in a game as fickle as the movie business knows what it means to have a part which fails to please the public which pays the bills. Perhaps little Miss Davis' judgment about what may be a good or a bad part might be bad. Not as good, maybe, as that of the studio bosses. But, still, it is her judgment—and her career which is at stake.

So- You Want to Gain!

By ALICE WADE ROBINSON

NOTED BEAUTY NEWS AUTHORITY

GO TO BED WITH THE CHICKENS.

A HAPPY, joyous—but relaxing Easter to you! That's our greeting to women who wish to put on weight. Now that Lent's 40 days have ticked off, seriously start to capture your worth in weight. That means your correct weight for age and height. How to compute it? Like this: Doctors agree that the safest weight for an adult over 30 is the physically fit person's weight at 30 itself. This—no matter whether one is 31 or 58.

Let's take the weight at 30 for a healthy woman who is 4 feet 8 inches tall. It's 112 pounds. For every inch over that up to 5 feet 2 inches, add two pounds in weight. Above that add four pounds for each extra inch. Thus, a woman 4 feet 11 inches tall should weigh 118 pounds; a woman 5 feet 6 inches tall should weigh 140 pounds.

If you're not any better at mental arithmetic than I am, get paper and pencil. Figure out scientifically exactly what your goal for weight should be. These weights, as you know, are approximate. If you tip the scales a pound or two either way, don't worry. You'll be close enough to the ideal weight for health and beauty fitness.

So far so good. You know now what weight to aim for. The point is how to get it. It's harder—no doubt about it—to put on a pound of flesh than to take it off. But it can be done. It is being done every day by thousands of former "beanpoles" the country over. Get your mental attitude adjusted, though. That's most important. Build up a picture in your mind's eye of the symmetrically-molded you you expect to present to the world in August — that's four months for your miracle — except that it won't be miraculous at all.

We have given you four months for your weight-gaining project because we mean to slow you down. Most lean folk burn up their energy in pell-mell rushings. We say they "live on their nerves." And they do; too many thin adults have an insufficient coating of flesh over the nerve ends. They are constantly "on edge." Their tempers "flare up suddenly."

They eat in a rush. Naturally, their digestive tracts go on strike. No matter how well-balanced a meal, it cannot properly be digested if the eater bolts and runs. Many lean adults are actually malnutrition victims—merely because their temperament interferes with right digestion.

If you're one of those, change now. Slow down, relax, make haste gently. Take time for everything. Talk slower. Walk slower. What if you can "get more work done in a day than anyone else in three"? Who cares—in the long run—unless you have a care for yourself?

So much then for a more leisurely pace. Now for relaxation. Lie down after eating whenever you can. You want your special, fattening foods to stick to the ribs. Let them do their best by you. That's their job since it's pounds you're after. And—get to bed with the chickens during this trial period. Quiet, relaxed sleep in an airy room is a home-sanatorium recipe. It's a help in covering your bones, in filling out hollows, in erasing the gauntness that makes you look older than you are.

As for food, how we envy you! You'll thrive on these palate-satisfiers; cereals with cream, bread and butter, luscious, thick gravies and sauces, gobs of mayonnaise, creamy milk, large Idaho potatoes baked and smothered in butter, steamed vegetables served with buttery cream sauce, the choicest cuts of juicy roasts, rich fish masterpieces, fruit juices, ice creams, whipped cream desserts—plus cookies and milk mornings and as bedtime snacks. All these, and "seconds" for the asking.

Food helps, as you've guessed by now. Begin on your new weight-gaining life by enjoying to the full your first after-Lenten feast. Then lie down—or sit down—relax! That will coax the pounds to stay, and help you to have a happy Easter day.

Bake in hot oven (400 degrees) 10 minutes; reduce heat to moderate (350 degrees) and bake 20 minutes longer. Cool, cut a slice from the top and fill with custard and frost with thin confectioners' icing. Make a swirling tail with melted chocolate and eyes and ears of shredded almonds. Approximate yield, 18 dormouse puffs.

'If You Have Courage, You Can Live Again'

Columnist Tells How Persons Can Bring Lives Back Into Focus.

By Elsie Robinson

REMEMBER how sharp and sweet life was at 16, Eleanor? How vividly, you saw beauty... how keenly you felt ecstasy or pain?

And you, John, look back. Think of that first night you and Jim slept out beneath the stars . . . the stinging joy of waking in the hush of dawn, with the tumbling roar of the stream in your ears and the thrill of the new fishpole in your shaking hand.

How real life was then. How deeply you felt it all, with every sense. And how real you, also, were. So tinglingly alive, so hungry for adventure. Once in a while, for a flash, something brings it back. The sharp, green scent of budding willows . . . rain-wet pine or chapparal. The long call of a quail . . . or squalling of a jay. The warm, pin-point of flame in cabins, through the dusk.

Then, for a flash, you manage to feel life again. But, for the rest, your mind and nerves feel doped. You sleep-walk through the days . . . doing and saying the things you're supposed to say and do.

BUT WHY? What has changed you so . . . taken the wild, sweet wonder out of life . . . turned that young, eager self to an automaton?

There's a question that at least 50,000,000 people are asking these days—staring out from office windows, over kitchen sinks—wondering why life has to end before it has really begun? But it doesn't "hafta!" You don't need to be the lumpish, torpid thing you are. You can—if you've the courage—LIVE AGAIN.

Recently, from Lorraine Durst of San Francisco, came this letter, like a call of spring. Lorraine, too, found the old pulse slipping—wondered why. Then gave herself this Look-see . . . and sent it on.

—o-o—

"WHY DON'T we get any joy out of living?

"Perhaps it's because we're always asking ourselves if we are . . . analyzing and doubting . . . dissecting our reactions to see if they check up with our neighbors!

"The truth is—we don't dare to be natural with ourselves or life . . . don't dare to act on impulse and not give a hang. Just let ourselves go! We've all become rubber stamps, and if we don't do or say or feel exactly like every one else, we're sure there is something wrong.

"As a consequence, our feelings have become standardized, so synthetic and artificial that we rarely feel anything. We're just about as natural and spontaneous as a movie star! And we're tortured by self-consciousness if we ever happen, by accident, to do something different or original.

"Our very conversation is composed of slogans—wisecracks—cliches. We all have definite lines and mannerisms. Life never gets a chance to penetrate our stereotyped personalities.

"Why don't we get joy out of living? Because we've sold our birthright of simple, spontaneous, sincere emotion for a handful of fashionable feathers and flapdoodle.

"Lorraine Dees Durst."

—o-o—

GREAT! Remember, folks, the big bowl of sulphur and molasses Grandma used to keep on the kitchen shelf, come spring, for a tonic? Lorraine's gone Grandma one better . . . given our sick souls a dose of that honesty they so badly need.

Want to try an experiment? Then watch yourself for just one day. Keep a little note book, and check every time you utter some hackneyed old bleat . . . pull some moth-eaten platitude . . . do or say or think something because "it's the thing to do."

THE ROGUE'S OWN GALLERY

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer

SPEAKING of the age of labels and specialization, it looks like Solly the Cheese Cake and Louis the Lump have tags that sort and classify 'em like unto various grades of eggs.

—o-o—

Yet underworld nomenclature is nothing new. It started with Villon and his classical muggs and was imported into America via Whitechapel.

—o-o—

As far back as 1875 the illustrious Inspector Byrnes was annoyed, irritated and otherwise frustrated by the following alphabetical list of American neighbors' children:

—o-o—

Albany Jim, Aleck the Milkman, Little Andy, Bald Face Kid, Banjo Pete, Bill the Bum, Big Doc, Boston Blackie, Broken Nose Tully, Brummagen Bill, Buffalo Kid, Curly Boy, Cincinnati Red, Combo, Cokey Cull, Little Dave, Clutch, Dutch Dan, English Harry, Steamboat Charlie.

—o-o—

There also were Funeral Wells, Grand Central Pete, Sleepy Gus, Paddy the Muzzler, Yen Hock George, Hungry Joe, Jersey Jimmy, Pretty Jimmy, Jimmy the Kid, Junko, Kehoe the Mourner, the Blink, Kid Glove Rosey, Mike the Bite, Chicago Kid, Frisco Kid, Gas House Kid, Little Tip, Little Cully and Minnie the Mooch.

—o-o—

Nicknames are gangland's file index of personalities and habits. Funeral Wells picked pockets at funerals. So did Kehoe the Mourner. Police always knew where to look for them. Old Ike was tabbed by the passage of time and Big John was unique because of his tonnage.

—o-o—

The underworld's system of identification is as cruel as it is accurate. Every nickname is a one-word biography.

—o-o—

Slang consists of the facts boiled down to quick sales and small profit. And long before Bertillon thought of his method of physical identification the underworld was using the same system of tabulating personal defects and mental quirks by tags.

—o-o—

If you couldn't find Yen Hock Joe from a label that was both name and address then you didn't know where to look. Any time the Inspector wanted Yen Hock he simply canvassed the Chinese joints and gathered him in like a speckled trout.

—o-o—

The underworld tags itself with everything but the price, and that can be talked over.

Summer Dramatic Group To Produce Four Plays

Civic Theater of St. Louis, Composed of Actors and Backstage Workers at Little Theater, to Be Co-operative Organization.

ORGANIZATION of the Civic Theater of St. Louis, a dramatic group to produce four plays for four performances each during the coming summer, not only gives the city a new outdoor entertainment, but has in it the nucleus of an actors' repertory theater.

Headed by Gordon Carter, scenic director of the Little Theater, and composed of some 35 or 40 actors and scenic department workers of the Little Theater, the group has applied for incorporation as a non-profit, co-operative enterprise and seeks to effect a permanent structure.

The plays to be given, as announced yesterday, are Ben Jonson's "Volpone," from a German translation; Lynn Riggs' "Russet Mantle," "Penny Wise," by Jean Ferguson Black, and "To Quito and Back," by Ben Hecht. The first production, as yet unnamed, will be staged in the latter part of June and the others over a period of eight or nine weeks.

Offices of the group have been opened at 386 North Euclid avenue, casting is under way and the only major detail yet to be taken care of is a location for the productions. Several sites in St. Louis County are being considered and a suggestion not yet abandoned is to give the plays on a hotel roof in the city.

Subscription pledges are being placed on file until ticket sales begin. Prices, however, will be 50 cents and $1 for single admissions, $1.75 and $3.50 for season tickets.

Although the constituency of the group is largely that of the Little Theater, the two organizations have no official connection. Carter will direct two plays, Hanns Kolmar, Little Theater actor, the other two. Carter, Kolmar, Gordon Sommers and William Cook are the present members of the board of directors.

The group has no connection, either, with the activity that was in progress a year ago for the establishment of a reportory theater for the winter season. Beginning early last spring, a group from the Little Theater which had supported F. Cowles Strickland, former director, in his aims for a semi-professional organization on Union boulevard, attempted to unite all local dramatic interests in a move for a repertory theater.

The effort failed for two reasons. Its members were unable to get any civic leader to become the official head of the group and the organization of the Playgoers, as a subscription support for the American Theater, detracted from the organization's major purposes.

Carter and his associates are hoping to avoid any aspects of competition with the Little Theater, the professional theater or Municipal Opera and point out that their aims are only to produce a group of plays for a comparatively limited public during the summer.

The actors and scenic staff will be rewarded by shares of the profits, if there are any, and promising material developed by the Little Theater in the winter will thereby be induced to remain in St. Louis through the summer. Membership is not limited to Little Theater players or staff, however, and efforts are being made to encourage participation of others.

American's Season Has 50 Per Cent Gain

THE 1937-38 season of the American Theater, which now appears to be definitely ended, was the most successful in the last six or seven years and represents a 50 per cent gain over that of 1936-37.

As compared to 14 weeks of stage entertainment at the American last year, there were 21½ weeks this year. Leader at the boxoffice was Helen Hayes' "Victoria Regina," which broke all local dramatic records for dramatic productions back to 1929, when the second week of "Strange Interlude" also did sensational business.

Other leaders were the second week of "You Can't Take It With You," "The Women," the first engagement of "Brother Rat" and the fall appearance of "Tobacco Road." "Ethan Frome," the Abbey Theater Players' week, the Noel Coward one-act plays and "Julius Caesar" drew the smallest attendances.

Much credit for the revived interest is given to the Playgoers, who subscribed for two or more seats to each of 17 new plays. Although representing only 16 to 20 per cent of the American's business, they attracted attention in national theatrical circles and more plays were routed this way as a consequence. Six productions were here before going into Chicago and two before going into New York.

Plans are being made to extend the list of 700 Playgoers to more than 1500 before next fall.

Sovey to Return As Opera Designer

Raymond Sovey, scenic designer for Municipal Opera for the past three years, has been re-engaged for the coming twentieth anniversary season, along with O. J. Vanasse, associate stage director, and Jacob Schwartzdorf, associate musical director.

Sovey, who is an outstanding designer for Broadway shows, has done technical direction for "Our Town," the scenery-less success now on Broadway, and designed orthodox sets for "Once Is Enough," "French Without Tears," "Love of Women" and "If I Were You," since he was here last summer. Two plays at the American—"Tovarich" and "Victoria Regina"—were also examples of his work, since he was the original artist on the first and collaborating artist on the second.

Little Theater Presents "George And Margaret"

GERALD SAVORY'S comedy, "George and Margaret," which has been a reigning London hit for some months and was a mild success of the current Broadway season, will be presented by the Little Theater of St. Louis in a two-weeks' run beginning Thursday night. It is the last show of the season at the Little Theater.

The action takes place in the living room of the Garth-Banders, a madcap English family of moderate means. The rattle-brained mother, Alice (Madeline Haertter), is busily concerned with the management of her family's welfare, but actually is so vague that she controls nothing. Her absent-minded, mild husband, Malcolm (Eugene Wood) has reached the age where he has calculated the most peaceful manner in which to treat each individual member of the household and yet have a sympathetic understanding of them, and their activities. Especially close to him is his pretty, young daughter, Frankie (Frances Buss), whose many romances are freely discussed. The other members of the family include two sons, Claude (Gene Krell), a solemn and pompous house designer of 28 years, and Dudley (John Weaver), 21 years old, pleasant, amusing and possessed with a wild sense of humor. To the home comes a house guest, Dudley's attractive friend, Roger Frampton (Julian Luckett), a musician, with whom Frankie immediately falls in love.

The household is thrown into a flurry when Claude announces his intention of marrying the maid, Gladys (Rozene Johnson McClelland), although no one but the mother offers any objection. In addition to the excitement caused by the two love affairs in the home, there is the constantly postponed, but expected visit of George and Margaret, a dull couple from whom everyone wishes to escape except the mother. She feels grateful to them for some reason she can't recall. Just as the family has harmoniously adjusted itself, and the engagements of the two couples have been announced almost simultaneously and accepted, the long expected George and Margaret unexpectedly arrive. The curtain falls as the new, inarticulate maid, Beers (Katherine Maze), is about to usher them in.

Goldwyn Bids for Ziegfeld's Fame

By Colvin McPherson

A YEAR ago, when Darryl F. Zanuck had just produced that cheery musical, "Wake Up and Live," it looked as if the genius from Wahoo, Neb., was about to put on the mantle of the late Florenz Ziegfeld. Now it appears that Zanuck has had the insignia of greatness snatched from him by that erstwhile glove salesman, Samuel Goldwyn. "The Goldwyn Follies," at Loew's, is something really super in the way of a musical show.

The first of a series of such festivals, according to Mr. Goldwyn's promise, has showmanship, elegance, freshness, pleasant romance, inventions and innovations. Production is not merely a matter of getting together Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, Kenny Baker, Phil Baker, Adolphe Menjou, Andrea Leeds, the Ritz Brothers, Helen Jepson, Vera Zorina, Ella Logan, the American ballet and various other trinkets of entertainment. It is not in color filming or art designing by Richard Day. It is not in the book Ben Hecht wrote or music by the Gershwins. It is in all these.

For Goldwyn has proved, definitely, that a $2,000,000 musical need not be stupid nor dull. The scene is Hollywood, the matter under study a new picture production. Producer Menjou hires Andrea Leeds, one of the millions who "knows what she likes," to tell him what sounds absurd about the new picture and what does not. Here is opportunity, fully taken, for Hollywood to kid itself more savagely than it has ever done before.

Miss Leeds, or "Miss Humanity," as she is called on the payroll, makes an excellent consultant until she meets Kenny Baker in a hamburger stand, hears him sing and decides to boost his career in pictures. Kenny gets the job from Menjou and becomes a star, Menjou becomes jealous, but love wins out and in a way to which no one will object.

McCarthy and Bergen will draw most customers and give a magical piece of teamwork in return. But Miss Leeds, who played only a pitiful suicide in "Stage Door," is the surprise of the show. Lively, elated and extraordinarily lovely in color, she is the new romantic star of the year. Whether the voice with which she sings is hers or one supplied by the sound track department, the studio has neglected to say.

The Ritz Brothers are foolish enough to convert many who have not liked them, Helen Jepson of the Metropolitan sings the Drinking Song, and "Sempre Libera" from "Traviata" impressively, the "Water Nymph" number by the American Ballet is beautiful both in concept and execution, and its star, Vera Zorina, carries a dramatic role throughout the picture with skill and ease. Bobby Clark, comedian lately of the "Ziegfeld Follies," ran away with the show as originally released, but his part has been trimmed down since the picture was previewed here some months ago.

The color treatment approaches perfection. The ballet scenes, the studio and residences show careful planning for pictorial effect. More than that, flesh tints of faces are flesh color and not deep embarrassment, pastel lingerie in one scene looks like pastel lingerie and not the full-dress regalia of a battleship. Some few blue tones of lakes or lagoons are too blue but not enough to bother.

In Old Chicago.

THE San Francisco earthquake was staged to reunite Clark Gable and Jeanette MacDonald, the Chicago fire is now re-burned to clear up the family quarrels of Don Ameche, Tyrone Power, Alice Brady and Alice Faye, collectively known as the O'Learys. The epic, entitled "In Old Chicago," is at the Ambassador.

The O'Learys apparently were important people in Chicago before their cow kicked over a lantern and wiped out the shanty city of 1871. Don Ameche O'Leary was Mayor, Tyrone Power O'Leary was the big political boss and Mama Alice Brady O'Leary washed the dirty shirts of the best people. That this is somewhat incredible has not occurred to the makers of the picture. That such striplings, such novices as Power and Ameche could hold such power, however, will seem unbelievable to many movie patrons.

All this is merely to say that the kind of screen play Lamar Trotti and Sonya Levien have written and Henry King has directed is overdramatized and foolish, that the climax is too neat even for unsophisticated folk. Yet two things in the picture are not absurd and they make it well worth seeing. One is the fire and the other is the performance of Alice Brady, who recently received an Academy prize for it.

Beginning about 20 minutes before the end of the film, the fire continues intermittently for most of the remaining time. At first glance, a kind of living reproduction of a Currier and Ives print, it sweeps into panoramic effects and eventually is so limitless that every horizon seems ablaze. The flight of panic-stricken residents into the lake ranks with the camera triumphs of all time.

The clangor of fire bells, the screams of those trampled under foot, the horror of falling walls and leaping flames furnish as nice thrills as one can have sitting in his comfortable theater seat. When the cattle break from the stockyards and stampede into the streets, the full terror is a good deal more than a quarter's worth.

The drama in the life of the O'Learys cannot be brushed aside entirely, either. The opening incident, of the film, in which the father of the family is killed by a runaway team, is directed to brilliant effect. Miss Brady, who after all is a dramatic actress and not a giddy comedienne, takes the reins into her hands, figuratively and literally, and never lets them go thereafter. She makes Mrs. O'Leary a human personality and not just a Mother Machree to two popular leading men. The screen play, of course, gives her leeway to do that.

Tyrone Power develops his abilities with each screen appearance and is quite satisfactory as a charming double-crosser, but some people are going to think the demise of Don Ameche in the fire not altogether a misfortune. Alice Faye's contribution to the production is music hall singing and a few tussles with Power. Her rendition of "Carry Me Back to Ole Virginny," a little inaccurate as to lyrics, is, nevertheless, splendid.

The Ambassador management feels called upon to present a second feature, so offers "He Couldn't Say No," a farce in which Frank McHugh buys a statue of a Senator's daughter and falls in love with both statue and daughter. It has a few chuckles evoked by the comic Mr. McHugh.

College Swing.

GRACIE ALLEN'S type of humor pervades the whole of "College Swing," at the Fox. Descendant of a thick-headed pilgrim of several hundred years ago, she can inherit a college if she passes an examination. She cheats, passes and starts running the college to suit herself.

With the aid of the usual George Burns, Martin Raye, Bob Hope, Edward Everett Horton, Ben Blue, Cecil Cunningham, Jerry Bergen, Jerry Colonna and other laugh-getters, she makes the show mirthful from beginning to end.

At the end of the picture is the Ted Lewis stage show, which, except for being a trifle old style, is fast, well-organized and enjoyable. The only serious note on the Fox program is the occasional showing of a color featurette based on Edward Everett Hale's "The Man Without a Country." It tells the familiar tale with fidelity and a minimum of hokum.

The Invisible Menace.

THE St. Louis Theater, which is going to have first-run thrillers for a spell, is playing "The Invisible Menace," in which Boris Karloff haunts an island, and "Daredevil Drivers," in which Dick Purcell is ruled off a racetrack only to make one out of the city streets.

"The Invisible Menace" has murder with bayonet and attempted murder with a variety of contrivances. It has one surprise so perfectly timed that people all over the theater yelp.

"Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," comedy in which Gary Cooper and Claudette Colbert go through a series of household quarrels, is funny enough that it is taking its third week in town at the Missouri. "Dangerous to Know," a melodrama, is with it.

Olympe Bradna to Tour

Olympe Bradna, young leading lady who played opposite George Raft in "Souls at Sea," will be in St. Louis May 2 and 3 on a personal appearance tour. Although no plans have been made for her to appear at any theater, she possibly will be introduced to audiences at the Fox.

Comedy About High School Joins Broadway Successes

"What a Life," Produced by George Abbott, Details Perplexities of Lad Who Wants Money to Take His Dream Girl to a Dance.

By the Associated Press.

THIS seems to be children's hour on Broadway with more than several plays demanding adolescents in leading roles. "On Borrowed Time," "Schoolhouse on the Lot" and various other Broadway hits make much of their children and now George Abbott brings in the comedy, "What A Life," which offers an entertaining picture of the lads and lassies of 14, 15 and similar public enemy ages.

"What A Life"—and how correctly titled if one is a proud parent—is this play that happens in the principal's office of Central High School and the chief criminal is red-headed Henry, a boy with his head full of mischief and inspired only by the desire to get $2 to take the light of his life, the girl of his heart, to a dance. She is, in justice to her, a polite, law-abiding child and cannot understand his various schemes to get that $2 and at the same time get himself out of trouble. In the end his schemes gather him neither the $2 nor the peace from his problems.

Henry, who has been committing some amateurish larceny around his school by pilfering odd-fitting shoes and other remnants, attempts to smooth such misadventures by saying that somebody doesn't understand something. The whole plot progresses to that illogical summation, and Henry is in a dither, but he eventually triumphs because his amateurish ways are better than professional schemes to help him.

In this production Abbott carries along his idea, as he did in "Angel Island," that he should produce a good play and do it with excellent actors and ones that he is well acquainted with. So in "What A Life" are such well-knowns as Joyce Arling, Lea Penman and Betty Field.

"What a Life" is a good play of juvenile tendencies and there are many laughs, but it is something to be taken not too seriously.

WHERE once the Broadway Theater in the spring confined itself principally to being a little hoyden of comedy, this April it is emphasizing plays of serious thought largely from the pens of playwrights of an earlier day.

This trend has been increasing in power since two seasons ago when John Gielgud and Leslie Howard opened their controversial and rival productions of "Hamlet" and Maurice Evans presented his exciting performance of "King Richard II."

Now, under the direction of Orson Welles, the Mercury Players are rehearsing their production of Bernard Shaw's "Heartbreak House" which will open on April 29.

Shortly after, in association with the Theater Guild they will place in rehearsal "Five Kings," a combination play that will include episodes from Shakespeare's "Henry IV," "Henry V," "Henry VI" and "Richard III." The premiere of this latter production is scheduled for San Francisco early in September, after which they will take their repertory on a nation-wide tour before returning to Broadway.

Just as they have produced "Julius Caesar" with the theory that Shakespeare's comment is equally applicable to present day Fascist regimes, so they are reviving "Heartbreak House" in the belief that it is pertinent to current news happenings in Europe.

"'Heartbreak House' is a play about people whose inability to act is responsible for the occupation of Austria," Welles says. "It's a play about defeatist characters. Its people are the best conversationalists in the world. Its moral is that conversation is the extent of their activity."

Now that Ruth Gordon is playing the final weeks in her successful performance of Ibsen's "A Doll's House," Henry Forbes presented another Ibsen classic, "The Wild Duck," Friday night in its first revival on Broadway since 1928 when Blanche Yurka produced it.

Just as the Mercury Players have done some rearranging of Shakespeare, so the Forbes production has changed Ibsen considerably. In this version of "The Wild Duck" he has eliminated the first act entirely and has condensed the last four acts into two. Costumes also have been changed to modern.

Another Shakespeare revival which arrived this week is Robert Henderson's production of "The Merry Wives of Windsor" with Estelle Winwood in the role of Mistress Page.

Most successful of current revivals is the Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne production of "The Sea Gull" which Anton Chekov wrote in 1895.

FRANKIE FRISCH, manager of the Cardinals, and Pepper Martin and his Mudcats will take part in Frank Eschen and Roy Stockton's Sportslights broadcast on KSD at 5:30 tomorrow afternoon. Martin, who leads the Mudcats, doubles on the harmonica and the guitar. Fibber McGee's program probably will go off the air late in June for a few weeks while a substitute series is broadcast, and will return in September. The comedian will go to the Pacific Coast to make a movie, and his wife, Marian Jordan, who played Molly on the program until she became ill, is expected to be sufficiently convalescent to accompany him. . . . The Friday night Song Shop will be concluded with the April 29 airing.

Miss Irene Pettus To Become Bride Of P. K. Crowe

MR. AND MRS. JAMES THOMAS PETTUS of the St. Louis Country Club grounds announced yesterday the engagement of their daughter, Miss Irene Pettus, and Philip K. Crowe of New York. The news was told to a group of Miss Pettus' contemporaries who had been invited to her home for an informal tea. Guests were received by the prospective bride, who wore an afternoon gown of blue-gray crepe with deep purple orchids at her shoulder; her parents and her fiance who arrived Friday for the occasion.

Miss Pettus, who has been studying English at Columbia University in New York this winter, returned home by plane Thursday night for the announcement. Before enrolling at Columbia she attended Mary Institute and Briarcliff (N. Y.) Junior College. She was presented to society during the season of 1935-36 at a ball given at the St. Louis Country Club by her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Moulton. Last summer, and two summers ago, she and her brother, James T. Pettus Jr., were members of big-game hunting expeditions in India and Africa.

Both of Miss Pettus' parents are natives of Tennessee, and Miss Irene is direct in descent from Gen. James Robertson, founder of Nashville. Her mother was Miss May Watkins, a sister of Horton Watkins, Miss Rachel Watkins and Mrs. Francis Thatcher Cutts of St. Louis; Mrs. Frank Elliott Miller of Nashville, and Griffin Watkins of Alton. Mr. Pettus is vice-president of the International Shoe Co.

Mr. Crowe is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl R. Crowe of Wilson Point, South Norwalk, Conn. His ancestors are prominently identified with the country's early development. He is a member of the Society of Colonial Wars through Joshua Crane, one time Governor-General of New Jersey. Another ancestor was Thomas Higgins of Virginia, a General in the Confederate army, and another, his great-grandfather, was the late Baron Heinrich von Knaur of Austria. His brother and sister-in-law are Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Crowe of New York.

The bridegroom-elect attended St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H., and the University of Virginia. He is now on the advertising staff of Life Magazine. He, too, has traveled extensively in Indo-China and India. His clubs include "Explorers," "Adventurers," "Army and Navy," and "Ex-Members of Squadron A."

Mr. Crowe arrived in St. Louis by airplane Friday night, and will fly back to New York tomorrow with his fiancee. Miss Pettus will not continue school this spring, but will return home in a few days and make definite plans then for the wedding, which is to take place in June. The pair will live in New York and Connecticut.

Janet Ward Malley Engaged to Be Wed

MR. AND MRS. JAMES WARD MALLEY of Ridge road, Hamden, Conn., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Janet Ward Malley, and William Ranulf Compton, son of Maj. and Mrs. Ranulf Compton of Madison, Conn.

The news is of interest here, where Miss Malley has often visited. She is a former classmate at Sarah Lawrence College of Mrs. Gilbert Robinson Pirrung, the former Miss Lila Marshall Childress, and has been a guest several times at the Childress home. She was here for Mrs. Pirrung's debut party at the St. Louis Country Club two years ago following the Veiled Prophet ball, at which the former Miss Childress was crowned Queen, and was a member of the Pirrung-Childress bridal party a year ago.

Mr. Compton prepared at Fessenden School for Phillips Exeter Academy and Burdette College in Boston. He is associated with the National Folding Box Co. of New Haven.

The wedding will take place next summer.

Early Forecast Of Debut Season For 1938-39

With 35 Girls Already Making Plans, Next Fall and Winter Promises to Be Busy Social Season.

AN early forecast shows promise of a busy season for the debutantes of 1938-39. With about 35 young women already making tentative plans for a bow to St. Louis society, the final list may equal in number the 60 debutantes of the last winter.

The list below is provisional, and there will be many changes before the Veiled Prophet issues summons to the maids who will grace his Court of Love and Beauty at the annual ball in October.

Prominent on next year's list are the young women studying abroad last winter and this spring. Mr. and Mrs. Virgil A. Lewis' older daughter, Miss Frances Hinton Lewis, will return about May 12 from Villa Colina Ridente in Florence, Italy, to make plans for her debut. Miss Lewis, who has traveled extensively abroad, is a graduate student of Foxcroft School in Virginia and a former Mary Institute student. An Italian school was the choice of Mr. and Mrs. Hayward H. Gatch for their daughter, Miss Caroline O'Fallon Gatch; she attends Cas 'Alta, also in Florence. A third Florentine school, the Graduate House, has two young St. Louisans on its rolls: Miss Margaret McPheeters Adreon, daughter of Mrs. Robert E. Adreon, and Miss Elinor Curran, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Donovan Curran. Miss Adreon plans to remain in Europe following the close of school for further travel in England and France and Miss Curran will arrive here the latter part of next month.

Geneva College for Women at Geneva, Switzerland, was the school selected by three of next year's debutantes for the winter preceding their social bows. They are: Miss Mary Jane Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Claflin Allen Jr., Miss Mary Ellen Niedringhaus, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Holladay Niedringhaus; Miss Virginia Witherington Baugh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Edward Baugh. All three, graduates of Mary Institute, will spend the month of June in England after the close of school. A week in Paris is also to be included on their itinerary before arriving in St. Louis the end of July.

Miss Mary Louise Ewing, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick B. Ewing, who have lived abroad much of the last 10 years, is another of next year's debutantes who is studying in Europe. This winnter, she has been in Dusseldorf, Germany, taking special work in music. Her parents and brothers, Frederick B. Jr. and George, will sail early in June to join her for a motor trip through England, Norway and Sweden. Miss Ewing started to school here at the Convent of the Sacred Heart, and studied at Miss Barry's School in Florence during the years her family occupied their villa there. Mr. and Mrs. Ewing have leased Mrs. Dwight Dana's house at 54 Kingsburg place, for next year. At present they are at Hotel Chase.

A young woman on next year's list who has studied and traveled both here and abroad is Miss Laura Hale Rand, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Chambless Rand. After several years at Mary Institute, she spent a year at Westover School, Simsbury, Conn., and a similar period of time at Les Fourgeres, Lausanne, Switzerland. Studying in England under a tutor occupied another winter, and this last season she returned to Mary Institute, from which she will be graduated next month. Although summer plans are still indefinite, Miss Rand will probably tour the West with friends.

For the last decade, several, usually four, of the debutantes spend a year traveling abroad under the chaperonage of Mrs. Atwell T. Lincoln. This year's group, which will return home the latter part of the month aboard the Queen Mary, includes Miss Martha Bixby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Bixby; Miss Becky Wells, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Erastus Wells; Miss Marian Spink Merrell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Walbridge Merrell. The fourth member of the party, Miss Suzanne White, returned home several weeks ago after an illness, during which her mother, Mrs. David B. White, joined her in Europe. All four girls are graduates of Mary Institute. Miss White, who completed her preparatory studies a year prior to the other three, spent a winter at the Bennett School in Millbrook, N. Y.

A year or more at Eastern schools following graduation from one of the local preparatory schools is a common formula for preparation of a young woman for entrance into social life. Mrs. Harold W. Simpkins will complete plans for the debut of her third daughter,

Ada Jane Blumeyer To Be Wed in Fall

THE engagement of Miss Ada Jane Blumeyer and Sidney George Holthaus was announced yesterday afternoon at an informal tea at the home of the parents of the bride-elect, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur A. Blumeyer, 41 Washington terrace. The wedding will take place Oct. 11, the thirtieth wedding anniversary of the prospective bride's parents.

The hostess, the bride-elect and her sister, Miss Mary Ann Blumeyer, stood in the music room against a background of white flowers to receive their guests. Mrs. Blumeyer wore a navy blue sheer dinner gown with touches of white lace and a corsage of gardenias. Miss Ada Jane Blumeyer wore lime yellow tulle, a bouffant, droop-shoulder model, and orchids, and Miss Mary Ann Blumeyer wore a multi-colored printed crepe, with gardenias.

The engagement was made known by means of two miniature bridal parties, Miss Ada Jane Blumeyer's as it will appear next October, and Mr. and Mrs. Blumeyer in duplicates of their wedding attire in 1908. The doll bride and bridegroom in street clothes, the bride in a tailored blue suit, stood at the door of a Chicago monastery, where Mr. and Mrs. Blumeyer eloped to be married, with a monk awaiting them at the door. An all-white wedding party was posed in the candle-lit ribbon aisle of a modern cathedral with a priest at a gold altar replica, where Miss Miss Simcoke attended Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill., for a year, before enrolling at Washington University, from which she was graduated. She is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma.

The winner will be chosen by ballots voted by Junior League tearoom patrons for the duration of the show, and will be rewarded with a blue ribbon.

Mrs. Frederick Dunn, chairman of the Arts and Interests Committee of the league, is in charge of the exhibit, assisted by Mrs. Henry B. Plager, Mrs. Austin P. Leland and Miss Louise Woodruff. Results will be announced after the Tuesday fashion show next week.

WASHINGTON SCENE

By the POE SISTERS

WASHINGTON, April 16.

YOUNG BILL DONNER, son of Mrs. Curtis Winsor, and her first husband, Elliott H. Roosevelt, second son of the President, will be the only child of the family at the White House for the Easter holidays.

The only other boys among the presidential grandchildren are Curtis Dall who is with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger in Seattle, Wash., and the small son of Elliott Roosevelt by his second wife.

A glimpse of the beret the Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins is wearing nowadays recalls the time when the Secretary made her debut as the first woman cabinet officer. Then she wore a black tricorne hat in different straws. In recent months, however, she has altered this style usually in favor of berets.

One of the prettiest necklace and bracelet sets seen in Washington this season is being worn by Miss Evalyn Washington McLean, the school girl daughter of Mrs. Edward Beale McLean. Miss McLean drew the design for the set. The necklace is composed of several heavy gold chains set with topaz. The bracelet is of several chains of gold also set with topaz.

The stop sign set up by Ambassador to Great Britain Joseph P. Kennedy against presenting American women at the Court of St. James's unless they live in England or are members of officials' families, started a flood of reminiscences by the Washington women presented before the order went into effect.

Among the souvenirs treasured by Washington women who have been presented at the British court are the packs of cards with which they played games during the long wait in their carriages or automobiles before being admitted to the palace for their presentations. One well known Washington woman has kept the slippers she wore on that occasion in memory of the fact that they hurt her dreadfully during the whole of the long wait and even to the very foot of the throne where she made her curtsey.

Mrs. Charles R. Bromwell has gone to London from her home in Chicago to visit her daughter, Lady Bailey, wife of Admiral Sir Sidney Bailey of the British Navy. When the Prince of Wales, now the Duke of Windsor, came to Washington November, 1919, to bring the thanks of his father the King for the assistance given by the United States to the Allies, Mildred Bromwell was one of the debutantes who met the Prince.

Sir Sidney and Lady Bailey are in Madeira for a few months and Mrs. Bromwell will visit her grandchildren in London for a time during their parents' absence and later will take them to St. Moritz for the spring sports.

Bridlespur M. F. H. Tells Of Her Plans

Taking Arduous New Duties in Her Stride, Mrs. Henry J. Kaltenbach Jr., Says 'It's Just Like Keeping House in Two Places."

By Fay Profilet

A FAMILIAR figure in St. Louis horse show rings and a fearless rider of jumpers since finishing school days, Mrs. Henry J. Kaltenbach Jr., has been elected Master of Fox Hounds of the Bridlespur Hunt.

Assuming the post—an honor as well as a real job requiring no little courage, business ability and diplomacy—she announces that the high standard of the Bridlespur Hunt will be maintained.

"Hunting is the greatest sport in the world," she says. "It takes one out into the crisp morning air, the exercise is splendid, sportsmanship is developed and the sociability is delightful."

Her first task before the hunting season opens will be to "panel" the land for the hunt—jumpable places must be made in unjumpable fences. As most of the fences around St. Louis are made of wire the Bridlespur Hunt builds chicken-coop jumps. Fencing planks make the coops with top wires running under the peak.

Mrs. Kaltenbach has divided the hunting land into 12 sections and has appointed a captain for each whose duty will be to see that the panels are erected, that the weeds are kept down, and to receive and settle landowners' complaints, if any.

"I feel that ours compares favorably with other hunts in America," she says. "In St. Louis the paneling is rather unfortunate, for usually we are forced to go in a single line, scenting conditions are rather poor, and the horses often sink in the mud, but in spite of all this we have grand runs. Our landowners are so generous and understanding. Without their interest and co-operation there could be no hunt. They have become accustomed to hunting and are more or less a part of us. Most landowners follow the hunt as spectators and some of them tell us the direction the fox has taken and where young foxes may be found. One woman, over whose land we run, walks our hounds for us every day in the period before the season."

LEADING the field in a red coat—Mrs. Kaltenbach calls it red, not pink—is the least part of the duties of a Master. After planning the way to cast, the Master finds what coverts will be drawn, sees what farmlands can be opened, keeps the land paneled, assists in laying the drag in case of a drag hunt, helps organize and instruct the hunt schools, visits the kennels to make sure the hounds are well cared for and exercised; and she must know their names and the tongue of each dog. She must condition the horses and put them to pasture, rent stables and pay feed bills. There are landowners to be placated when young wheat is trampled or the fox kills too many chickens or the horses knock down too many fences, and she must attend the social affairs of the hunt to keep everyone happy and interested.

Correct dress for the men of the Bridlespur Hunt is: Pink coat with robin's egg blue collar, fastened with brass buttons; black boots with mahogany tops, white garter straps and spurs; white doeskin breeches; canary yellow waistcoat; white stock; string or pigskin gloves. The Master wears a scarlet coat and the Huntsman a red coat. Both wear velvet hunting caps.

Men of the field wear hard silk hats and carry a whip and wire clippers. The saddle flask is filled with whisky or sherry. Women wear dark blue coats with robin's egg blue collars; buff breeches; robin's egg blue waistcoat; white stock; black boots with patent leather tops and black garter straps. If riding side saddle, one must wear a silk hat and veil, but if astride one wears a derby.

Men and women of the field, who have not been invited to wear the pink or blue coat, wear black coats.

Full costume is only for members of the hunt. Invitees may ride with the hunt but only after two years of earned approval and acceptance may they appear in full regalia as described.

MRS. KALTENBACH likes dogs. When she was interviewed at her home on Litzsinger road, a sleek fox hound dozed at her feet and another tapped at the door until admitted to the house. The antics of the Bridlespur pack genuinely amuse her.

"The hounds have all sorts of little individual tricks," she says. "One will give tongue when he knows he is a liar, and the other hounds know it, too; and one always is able to run a cold line that the others cannot scent.

"They are beautifully trained and know the Huntsman's voice. They are alert from the moment they come to hounds until the one long blast of the Huntsman's horn calls them in. To me, the hunt is an ever-thrilling sight with hounds, Huntsman and whips running and riding before the field.

"The pack is well fed and well housed, but it has to obey the Huntsman, and do most of the real work. We have 17 couples, including American, English and Welsh hounds and about 20 couples of puppies that have been bred in our kennels. In the period before the hunting season the hounds are walked once a day for a month, then they are walked by the Huntsman on horseback every day for six weeks. I leave it entirely to his judgment which hounds are to be drafted for the runs."

The Bridlespur Huntsman is Henry Rhode, who was professional first whipper-in for Jack Long, noted English horseman and former Huntsman for the Bridlespur. Charles Gamache is first whipper-in. Other members of the staff are Milton Kahle, field master and secretary; Adalbert von Gontard, honorary treasurer, and Miss Jane Johnson, Hart Vance Jr., Harry Langenberg Jr. and Donald Scott Sharpe, amateur whips.

"The school hunts, which have just started, will be held on Saturday afternoons, when young people and others will be taught hunting terms and how to stay behind the hounds," says the new M. F. H. "Last year we had 35 actual hunts, with only three blank days. The hunt kills only six times a year. Other times the hounds are made to lose the fax or make him to ground. Unlike hunting in England we don't stop our earth, but leave the holes open in which the fox may take refuge. We ride three times a week beginning the end of September. In August we cub hunt, starting at 4:30 o'clock in the morning."

AS Miss Marceline Reyburn, Mrs. Kaltenbach started riding jumpers in horse shows when she was 16 years old. She has judged these classes at many out-of-town shows but she will appear in the ring for the first time in St. Louis as a judge when she judges the hunter and jumper classes at Maryville College Horse Show next week. Her interest in horses is almost equalled by that of her husband who, mounted on his hunter, Admiral, can ride with the best of them.

She has ridden with the hunts of Moore County, N. C.; Chagrin Valley, Cleveland; Milbrook, N. Y.; Nantucket (Mass.) Harriers; Camden, S. C.; Piedmont, Va., and Blueridge, Va. Her greatest ambition she says, is to hunt in Ireland.

Thus she is well qualified for the distinguished company of women who are Masters of Fox Hounds.

Mrs. Fay Ingalls is Master and Huntsman of the Bath County Hounds of Hot Springs, Va., The Casanova Hunt at Casanova, Va., has as master, Miss Dorothy V. Montgomery; Mrs. Robert Balney is master of the Dedham County and Polo Club Hounds; Mrs. Robert R. McCormick is master of the DuPage Hunt, Wheaton, L. I.; of the Golden Bridge Hounds of Golden Bridge, N. Y., Mrs. James C. Clark is the M. F. H. The Groton Hunt Club, Groton, Mass., has Mrs. Richard Danielson. Other women M. F. H. are Miss F. Julia Shearer, Meander Hounds, Locust Dale, Va.; Mrs. G. Randolph Scott, Montpelier Hunt, Orange County, Va.; Mrs. Rebecca Lanear Trimpi, Harriers, of Nantucket Island, and Miss Margaret Coulter, Westmoreland Hunt, Greensburg, Pa.

POSSIBLY no woman in St. Louis enjoys more general popularity than Mrs. Kaltenbach. She has been an officer and a board member of the Junior League. Despite many demands on her time she finds time for everything. A trifle above medium height, her slender figure bespeaks her active out-of-door life. Her dark brown hair, cut short and curled, may be pushed under a hunting cap or smartly dressed for the country club at nights. She likes dancing and golf. She gardens, too, for she is anxious about the lilacs at her front door, which were blooming when a recent April snow covered them.

HER new job, she explains, is "just like keeping house in two places." A glance about her attractive early American home convinces one that she is a good housekeeper. In her pretty blue and white living room, with chintz-covered furniture and bowls of home-grown spring flowers, one draws from her the thrill of hunting and her enthusiasm for the Bridlespur Hunt. She will, indeed, "keep house in two places."

The present focus of her attention, the Bridlespur Hunt, was organized in 1928 with Mr. von Gontard as M. F. H. The second master was August A. Busch Jr., whom Mrs. Kaltenbach succeeds. The hunt is the recognized one in St. Louis and surrounding vicinity and is registered with the Master of Fox Hounds Association. Both Mr. von Gontard and Mr. Busch did much to organize and maintain the high standard of the hunt. The homes of members and the Bridlespur Hunt Club have been the settings of numerous social affairs. The major annual events, in the interest of the hunt, are the steeplechase and the spring horse show at the Bridlespur Hunt Club.

How Helpless Citizens Behave Under Air Bombing in Valencia And Night Shelling in Madrid

One of Victims in Spain's Old Capital a Blind Woman—Enemy Merely "Finding the Range."

Reprinted from the New Republic.

AT 12 o'clock on an October day in Valencia it is usually warm and sunny. I stopped at the flower market and bought a bunch of flowers and some green leaves I had never seen before. I went around the corner and down the street and felt good walking in the hot sunshine. Ahead of me was a cat and I don't think I paid any attention to what had happened until I saw the cat suddenly sit down in the middle of the street. While I stood there looking at him, I began to hear the sirens. A woman with a pushcart suddenly picked up a little girl, threw the child on the cart, and wheeled it swiftly away. I think a few people began to run, but most people stopped, suddenly, and then moved on again more swiftly. I knew afterwards, by the way my jaw felt, that I had been pressing my teeth together too hard.

I turned, too, and began to walk, and told myself over and over again that as long as the sirens sounded the planes had not yet arrived. I didn't really believe that, but people were standing quietly in the open square, looking up. I went through the square quickly and toward my hotel and when I first heard the noise of the motors I didn't want to turn to see where they were. I thought: in that hotel room is a toothbrush, a clean nightgown, a cake of soap, an old coat and a box of lousy candy. Yet I am hurrying to it, it is where I am trying to go, it is the place where I have what belongs to me. And I knew, suddenly, why even the poorest women in Madrid wanted to stay with what was theirs.

"Our Planes Are Up."

But when I got to the corner of the hotel, the noise of the planes was close. I stopped at the corner and leaned against the wall. The planes were high in the east and flying fast. Next to me were two soldiers. One of them had a bunch of grapes in his hand. In a minute he said something to his friend and pointed in another direction. From the south four planes were flying toward us. They came up, swung around. Suddenly the soldier touched my arms and shouted: "They are ours. There go ours." Then he pulled off some grapes, wiped them clean on his coat, and handed them to me. He said, "Our planes are up. It's all right, now." It wasn't all right. In the section around the port, three minutes later, the Italian bombers killed 63 people. But as we ate the grapes and smiled at each other; we didn't know that.

At the Hospital.

I drove up to the base hospital at Benacasim with Gustav Regler. Regler, who is a Jesuit-trained Catholic, was a fairly well-known novelist until Hitler came in. He was a Captain in the World War and had been badly injured in this, the "little war," when his car was bombed to pieces going up to the front lines. Driving fast toward Benacasim, we talked about writers and writing and got excited and argued and had fun. We got to Benacasim at dinner time, and the Germans and the Americans were eating at one large table. Some of their wives were there with them and I thought what good-looking people they all were and how generous they were with their food and cigarettes. (There wasn't much food and it was very bad.)

Later that night, lying on a straw bed next to the wife of a Czech army officer, I thought that these foreigners from everywhere were noble people. I had never used the word noble before, and it came hard, even to say it to myself. They had come a long way to Spain, most of them making the cruel 16-hour walk across the Pyrenees. When it was over, if they came out alive, or with enough arms and legs to seem alive, there would be no glory and no reward. They had come because they thought that if a man believed in democracy he ought to do something about it. That's all they would go home with—wherever home was. Lying there, I prayed, for the first time in many years, that they would get what they wanted.

"A Bad Hypochondriac."

The next morning the American, Dr. Busch, Regler, the political commissar and I went on a round of visits. In the third room we visited, there were two men. One was a Canadian. One was a New York boy with that small, pinched, pale face that is so common among poor people in New York. The Canadian had lost his foot and didn't know it yet.

The American boy was lying on his left side, his face twitching with pain. He was so bad that I couldn't look at him and, as Busch went over to the bed to examine him, I moved away. The political commissar was a fat little man who had just recovered from a bad spine wound. I heard the New York boy cry out in pain and I said to the political commissar: "What's the matter with him?" He said: "He was shot through the kidneys and through the thigh. The thigh wound is open." I said: "Can't you give him dope? Listen to him scream." The commissar nodded: "Sure. Busch will give him something. But don't mind the boy too much; he's a bad hypochondriac."

In Darkened Streets.

In the courtyard of the press office in Madrid, somebody has put a great many big statues. Nobody is very clear about how they got there, or what they are, or why they are there, but everybody agrees they are very bad statues indeed. Wednesday night, at about 7 o'clock, a newspaper man said to me: "They're pretty awful. If they've got to shell, why can't they ever hit these things?" We reached the door to the street, "Can you find your way in the dark?" and I laughed and said sure, I was old enough not to be afraid of the dark. But when I opened the door and came out on the sidewalk, I knew that was a foolish thing to have said.

Without meaning to, I gasped. It is a terrible thing to see a city in complete darkness. A modern city is not meant to be without light at night; the buildings meet at the top in distorted triangles, and the sky seems too close to the earth. I went down the street, trying not to stumble, trying to find the curb of the sidewalks, trying not to step in holes.

Twice I got lost, and once I turned my ankle and fell, and when I got up I was crying, and thought I was crying because my ankle hurt. But when I finally got to the hotel, I ran through it, feeling safe again. That was at 7 o'clock. At 8:15 there was a sudden, whistling noise and then a far-off, muffled crash. A few minutes later, an English girl who worked in the Blood Transfusion Institute opened my door and came in to ask what I had done that day, did I like Madrid, did I want a drink, couldn't she—and stopped to listen and then to talk again quickly.

Under Shellfire.

They were dropping 40 shells a minute into Madrid and the whistling noise was growing very close. She turned to me: "Do you know what that is?" "Yes," I said, "shelling." "All right," she said. "I came up because I knew it was your first time. Come in the bathroom and you'll be able to tell how close it is." We went into the bathroom and she sat on the tub and watched me. In a few minutes the whistling went straight by the corner window and the crash this time was heavy, not sharp, and very close. She got up. "I'll go see if I can do anything. Go down to

WHAT IS THE ANSWER?

Distinguished British Student of America Gives Us Three Choices: Change Constitution, Go Fascist, or 'Fight'

Prof. Harold J. Laski of London Says 'Time Has Come to Confront Inevitability of Fundamental Change,' a Reversal of Traditional American Theory of Government.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 16.

EACH year in the two decades that have followed the World War, Prof. Harold J. Laski of the London School of Economics has visited America to have, in the British phrase, a look round. In a casual, informal way he has turned the brilliant analytical qualities of his mind on the American political scene.

He has been in a peculiarly fortunate position to do this, because for many years he has had an acquaintance, often an intimate acquaintance, with the great and the near-great in American life. Presidents, Supreme Court Justices, college professors, corporation and banking heads, all have been happy to talk with this small, precise Britisher, whose clipped speech flows in such elegant periods. In part, this comes from his residence in Washington during the war and the period when he served as an instructor in political science at Harvard University. What makes his perspective on America unique is his ability to co-relate this first-hand view with the long background of history and economics that he has acquired out of years of scholarship.

Conclusion After Another Look Round in America

Laski has just sailed for home after a crowded month in Cambridge, New York and Washington. Once again, as a more or less detached observer—he insists that he is too fond of America to be really detached—Laski has looked us over. Once again he has talked with the men who run the country. His engagement book has been a kind of rarefied edition of Who's Who, his time filled from hour to hour, almost from minute to minute.

Shortly before he sailed, Laski discussed frankly and freely with the Post-Dispatch the conclusions he has reached, not only as a result of this latest visit but out of his long experience of America and Americans. He stressed that he was speaking as a professor of political science, of broad issues and general principles as they apply to this country, as a foreigner who was not equipped to attempt even to suggest specific remedies for present-day problems.

"The time has come," Laski said, "when you in America confront the inevitability of fundamental change. It seems to me that you have three choices. You can adapt the charter of your Government, the Constitution, to this change; this adaptation must be the deliberate will of the majority of the people. Or you can go to the extreme right. Or you can fight."

This represents a marked advance in Laski's thinking. From the beginning he has been sympathetic to President Roosevelt and the objectives of the New Deal, and he has assumed, as the President assumed, that the Constitution contained implied powers sufficient to carry out the economic experiments of the New Deal. He regarded the Constitution as a flexible document. Following the course of his writings on America it is apparent that this conviction was shaken by the unanimous decision of the Supreme Court invalidating the N R A in 1935.

In an article written for the London Daily Herald he said in August of 1935:

"For the first time since 1787 the validity of the American Constitution is directly in question. As it has been put by the Supreme Court, the problem is whether the State has the power at its disposal to govern in terms of modern needs."

From the view of 1933 and 1934 he was forced by the N R A decision to the view of 1935. Now he has come to the definite conclusion that fundamental revision is necessary.

It is from this background of his earlier views that Laski's present conclusions, so frankly expressed, take special significance. They are significant, too, in the light of his long and scholarly knowledge of the Constitution and the American system of government. The files of the Journal of the Yale Law School and the Harvard Law Review contain numerous articles he has written on both American and British governmental problems. On both sides of the Atlantic his views on America have carried authoritarian weight. On the occasion of the visit just ended Laski wrote on the American crisis for a national press association. In London, New York and Washington his wide knowledge of the American past is resorted to again and again by administrators as well as scholars.

Social Complexities Raise Question of Change

It is to this question of a fundamental change in the Constitution that Laski has given no little of his time and thought during his recent visit. It was the subject of at least one of the round-table conferences with high-ranking Government officials arranged for by Prof. Edward B. Acheson of George Washington University. He discussed it at some length in the lectures he gave for the university.

The complexity of present-day society, in Laski's interpretation, has made clear the inherent limitations of the Constitution. They are essentially the limitations of an eighteenth century document which was intended to put every possible restriction on the powers of the central government. Today it is essential, in the Laski view, that the central government have complete power to establish national standards—of education, of health, of conditions of labor—and to intervene when it is considered essential in any phase of the economic life of the country.

Three Changes That Would Increase the National Power

These are the basic constitutional changes which Laski regards as essential if adequate powers are to be conferred on the central government:

1. Alter the property guarantees contained in the "due process" clauses of the Fifth and Fourteenth amendments in such a way that they will no longer be a "gate" but a "road" by way of which state intervention in the economic life of the country will be possible. An extension of the right of eminent domain is what he has in mind here, Laski explained. The alternative is to abolish these guarantees entirely.

2. Withdraw the "quasi-sovereignty" now held by the states so that the National Government may impose national standards without coming into conflict with "states' rights."

3. Strengthen the guarantees of civil and religious liberty contained in the so-called Bill of Rights in the Constitution, an essential step in view of the wide extension of the economic powers of the state. "It should be as easy for an ordinary citizen to obtain redress of wrongs, under such a revision of powers, as it is today for a corporation to obtain access to the courts."

In Laski's view, the period of "Federalism" in America has come to an end. The Federal structure created by the Constitution is no longer adequate for the government of a society in which "giant corporations" have arisen. It was adapted to an agrarian culture in which there was the constant element of an expanding frontier but not to present-day industrialism.

What is necessary now, Laski says, is "decentralization" of the powers of the Government, but he means by the word decentraliza-

Unprecedented U. S. Gold Hoard Of $12,800,000,000; How It Was Started and Its Present Status

"Desterilizing" Means Administration Will Spend Unpledged Part of It Without Repaying Loans Made to Buy It.

By SAM J. SHELTON,

Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

ONE of the most interesting things in the country in these changing and uncertain times is the Federal Government's $12,800,000,000 store of gold. This is a hoard unprecedented in the world's history.

Since civilization began men, especially misers, have stored up gold, usually in the hope of providing personal economic security. After the Franco-German War of 1870-71, the German Kaisers, Wilhelm I and later his son, Wilhelm II, kept a war chest of gold. Seemingly, the purpose of the Government's store of gold is not entirely clear to anyone, including the members of the administration.

It has not saved the nation from economic distress, the present severity of which was the subject of President Roosevelt's message to Congress Wednesday in which he proposed, among other things, a way to use a certain part of the stored gold described as "sterilized."

U. S. Holds Half of Gold.

At the end of 1934 the monetary gold held in the United States was worth in dollars $8,238,000,000. This included net imports in that year valued at $1,131,994,000.

Today gold held in the Treasury amounts to approximately $12,825,000,000, aand on Feb. 1, last, total gold reserves of all the central banks and governments of the world were said by the Federal Reserve System to be only double that amount.

Year by year the Treasury, under the new monetary plan, has continued to purchase gold from all over the world at $35 an ounce, nearly twice as much as the old price of $20.67. Net imports have been $1,739,019,000 in 1935; $1,116,584,000 in 1936, and $1,585,503,000 in 1937.

None of this great stock of gold is in circulation as money. Its possession in private hands was prohibited by one of the early New Deal laws. This completely reversed national policy which had been in effect since 1792 under which gold coin was circulated freely with all forms of currency and minor coinage redeemable at the holder's option in gold coin, except for the brief Civil War period when specie payments were suspended.

Flow From Abroad.

This gold hoard has been a worry to Government officers almost from the time it began to accumulate. As it grew in volume it provided an enlarged "credit base" which might cause "inflation." A certain amount of "controlled" inflation was desired by the administration. But the stream of gold flowing to this country in return for 35 American dollars to the ounce could not be shut off without endangering the whole national and international credit structure, according to Government and banking officials who employ these technical terms freely in daily intercourse.

The gold in the Treasury is not a free asset of the Government, except as to a limited amount. Before the present policy was adopted, gold was coined in denominations of $20, $10, $5 and $2.50. As stated, it was generally possible for anyone to obtain gold coin at a bank in exchange for any other form of lawful money. As a matter of convenience, paper currency was generally preferred for circulation. During the 1929 depression, however, gold was hoarded by persons fearful of the future value of paper currency.

On April 5, 1933, President Roosevelt ordered that all monetary gold be surrendered to banks in return for currency, dollar for dollar. Subsequent congressional legislation required that all such gold be turned in to the Federal Reserve banks which in turn were required to hand it over to the Treasury. Under banking laws of 1934 the Treasury was to issue gold certificates to the Federal Reserve banks for all old monetary gold turned in by them.

'Increment' $2,811,376,000.

Since the certificates were issued at the rate of $20.67 for an ounce of gold which the Treasury now valued at $35, there was an "increment" to the Treasury, through the magic wand of devaluation of $14.33 an ounce. This "increment," which some people called robbery of the people by the Government, at the end of the year 1934 was carried on the Treasury books at $2,811,376,000.

There was set aside out of this "increment" fund two billion dollars in gold for "stabilization" of United States money in foreign exchange markets. This was to be used at the discretion of the President and the Secretary of the Treasury in buying and selling dollar exchange in the world's money markets in order to keep the dollar at whatever price they deemed advisable. The remaining $811,376,000 was carried in the general fund as "balance of increment resulting from reduction in weight of the gold dollar." The amount now carried under this heading is only $142,000,000. The stabilization fund for foreign exchange is carried at about $1,800,000,000. The difference has been spent.

The Treasury's seizure of all monetary gold and the accompanying devaluation of the dollar resulted, therefore, in the Government's acquiring free title to that part of the gold representing the "write-up" of $2,811,376,000 on the books.

For the remainder of the gold the Treasury issued gold certificates in the name of the Federal Reserve banks which had turned in the gold, each certificate dollar representing 15 5-21 grains of gold nine-tenths fine. The dollars surrendered weighed 23.22 grains each.

Gold Purchase in Practice.

In order to peg the value of the dollar on a gold basis the Treasury adopted the policy of purchasing at $35 an ounce all newly mined gold that might thereafter be offered, just as a corporation or broker might undertake to peg the market value of stocks or bonds by buying them at an arbitrary price.

The working of this gold purchase plan is substantially as follows: The owner consigns the gold to a New York bank or a Federal Reserve bank elsewhere; the receiving bank takes the gold to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, which is the Treasury's fiscal agent; the Federal Reserve Bank of New York turns the gold over to the Treasury and receives in payment gold certificates which are virtually warehouse receipts for the given amount of gold; these gold certificates must be held by the Federal Reserve Bank, but this bank may use them as backing for its own Federal Reserve notes which it pays out to the seller of the gold.

Here is where the expansion of the credit base begins. It is the function of the Federal Reserve Banks to provide elasticity of credit; they may discount bills and loans for member banks all over the country and they may deposit such notes and bills with Federal Reserve agents as part of the required reserve to guarantee the Federal Reserve notes (currency) which they are permitted to issue and circulate.

Sales Tax Parallel.

But the law requires at least 40 per cent of such reserve shall be in gold certificates. A member bank which has discounted notes and bills for a customer may place the proceeds on deposit subject to the customer's withdrawal by check. The member bank may receive credit on the books of the Reserve Bank or may draw out the available amount of currency. It draws the currency only if it is needed in the normal conduct of business. Thus the amount of currency in circulation depends, within the limits of what may be described as

Plea for World Court.

POSSIBLY many of this generation have forgotten that Woodrow Wilson, in the deepest recesses of his heart—even up to the signing of the 1918 armistice—actually hoped for a peace without victory. Poor Wilson, how he overrated the spirituality of grasping nationalists!

But had Wilson's idealism prevailed; had France's and England's spirituality been allowed to manifest itself; had America not failed civilization by repudiating the spirituality of her most illustrious and far-sighted son; had Germany not been maltreated; had burdens too heavy to be borne not been placed upon the backs of her people, would Hitler ever have been generated? Would Mussolini have dared to invade Ethiopia? Would Japan have dared to flout the League by stealing Manchuria?

Manifestly, the problem of life cannot be solved intellectually. Time and time again, dictators, wholly lacking in idealism, have tried to mechanize human existence, but each time they have failed. And just why does history record their collapse? The answer is simple: Unfailingly, they have left truth—religion, morals and culture—out of their reckoning. Each time they have conspired against universal justice and thus solidified outraged public opinion against themselves and their nations.

But until men become angels, civilization must avail itself, if it is to survive, of one central world court, backed up by a representative policing power adequate to enforce that court's decrees.

Harsh Words.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IT is interesting to find out, as revealed in "Tweedledum and Tweedledee's" letter, that the Writers' Project in Missouri is under the direction of someone who is not a writer.

At that rate, I, a mere tiff digger, stand a chance of being placed (provided I have the right political drag) in charge of the Federal Music Project in the State, or maybe as director of the Art Project, although I don't know one note from another and can't tell a water color from an oil painting.

Apparently the magic of the WPA Administrator's wand makes the impossible possible, while we taxpayers gape in bewilderment over the way our money is used to support a lot of political parasites.

Urges Anti-Smoke Campaign.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE suggestion of J. M. Pickering, for a city-wide campaign for the elimination of smoke in the city, is very good. It would bring many to the front willing and eager to help the movement in any possible way. The continuous exodus of our "best" people, mainly to the county, should make us all willing to try to do something to make St. Louis a better place to live in.

Names for New Steamboat.

ON this side of the river at Eads Bridge, there is being constructed a passenger steamboat of the most modern type, streamlined, air-conditioned — the largest that the writer has ever seen here.

Would it be proper, at this time, to suggest a fitting name for such a fine-appearing craft? Here are my nominations:

1. Mississippi.
2. De Soto.
3. Laclede.
4. Isaiah Sellers.
5. William K. Bixby.
6. James B. Eads.
7. St. Louis.

Coming Out at the Little End.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

MISSOURI is getting gypped. According to the State Budget Officer, we have got only three-fourths of one billion dollars in Federal funds since the advent of the New Deal. That isn't as much as Missouri's per capita share of the national debt, and Missouri will have to pay even more than her per capita share, since her wealth is above that of the average of the 48 states.

But on top of this, our Federal taxes for the last five years have increased by hundreds of millions. We think we are getting something for nothing when it comes from Uncle Sam, but we are getting gypped, swindled and hornswoggled.

W. R. NELSON.

END THESE EXEMPTIONS!

Congress will soon receive a special message from the President proposing legislation to end all tax-exemption of incomes from Government securities and jobs. This became known Friday at Mr. Roosevelt's press conference, when he said that the measure he would propose would apply to incomes based on Federal, state and local bonds and earnings from Government positions of all kinds.

This is a new attack by President Roosevelt on an old problem. In a special message to Congress in June, 1935, he addressed himself to the unfairness of the present policy of exemptions—a policy which costs the Federal Government a half-billion dollars or more in revenue every year—but on that occasion he recommended amending the Constitution to effect the desired reform. Indeed, the chief point of the message three years ago was that Congress should prepare and submit an amendment providing for reciprocal taxation by the Federal and state governments of their future security issues.

The President apparently is now convinced that this desirable goal can be reached without formal change in the Constitution. When the question of the necessity of a constitutional amendment was put to him at the press conference Friday, he said he was relying on the plain words of the sixteenth amendment, namely, that "Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes on incomes from whatever source derived."

There are many close students of this issue who will agree with the President, or who will find the question open enough to justify the approach he now suggests. It is true that there have been Supreme Court decisions declaring that the Federal income tax could not be applied to state securities and salaries. But it is also true that there are decisions in recent months indicating that the court might now take the opposite view.

For years the states were held by the Supreme Court to be without constitutional authority to tax the income of contractors on Federal projects. This line of precedents was abandoned last December when the court, speaking through Chief Justice Hughes, upheld a West Virginia sales tax of upward of $135,000 on a $6,634,000 contract for Federal work performed on the Kanawha and Ohio rivers. This decision was fortified the same day by a ruling in a similar case arising from a Washington State levy on the income of a Federal contractor on the Grand Coulee Dam. Last month the court, again speaking through the Chief Justice and in an opinion which revealed a reversal of his own position, decided that the State of Wyoming could tax the income of a private corporation which had leased Federal lands. This was a full about-face from the stand taken in earlier decisions, and Chief Justice Hughes frankly acknowledged it as such.

There is a further support for the view of the President that Congress might achieve promptly through a statute what would consume more time if approached by the constitutional amendment route. In 1930, Justices Holmes, Brandeis and Stone joined in a dissenting opinion which contended that the rule of exemptions was unfair and destructive of the taxing power. Justice Stone, speaking for the three, said in the case of Missouri vs. Gehner:

> A taxpayer having no tax-exempt securities and legitimately bearing the burden of a state tax on net worth may put off the burden completely by the simple expedient of buying on credit Government bonds equal in value to his net taxable assets. The success of a device so transparently destructive of the taxing power of the state may well raise doubts of the correctness of the constitutional principles supposed to sustain it.
> So construed, the Constitution does more than protect the ownership of Government bonds from the burden of taxation. It confers upon that ownership an affirmative benefit at the expense of the taxing power of the state by relieving the owner from the full burden of taxation on net worth to which his taxable assets have in some measure contributed.

The Supreme Court has changed in both taxation outlook and personnel since that dissent was written. With several new Justices on the bench, and now that the Chief Justice has changed his view of the validity of reciprocal taxing of income from state and Federal public lands, there is reason to believe that the Supreme Court as constituted today would uphold the Holmes-Brandeis-Stone view. In any case, it is worth determining.

The change in policy which Mr. Roosevelt proposes is sound and fair. President Harding proposed a constitutional amendment to achieve it. His Secretary of the Treasury, the late Andrew Mellon, took it up and urged it upon the country as long ago as 1921. The late Ogden Mills, President Hoover's head of the Treasury Department, made speeches for eliminating the "tax-exemption evil," as he called it. So did Mr. Hoover himself.

Party and political philosophies have nothing to do with the course which the President recommends. If the goal can be obtained quickly through congressional enactment, sustained by the present Supreme Court, so much the better.

CALLING THE CARDS.

They have been trying some card tricks down at Duke University, with the professor of psychology, Dr. Rhine, doing the shuffling, or watching it closely, and the results have convinced him that "there are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio, than are dreamt of in your philosophy."

They take a deck of 25 cards—five cards of each suit—and the test is to call the fall, or lie, of the cards. If the call were mere chance, the professor has calculated, the average of correct guesses would be five. The earnest students did better than that. The "average correct" was 5.14, and that fractional percentage lifts the experiment out of mere chance into a dimension, or sector, or area, which, to the professor, is highly gratifying.

Some of the students selected for the test showed extraordinary talent. They were way above the average. The professor speaks of this gift or power as "second sight." The professor fairly beamed upon those prodigies. Summa cum laude for them. They may deserve it.

But long before Duke University lifted its learned towers to the Carolina skies, people were engaged in the hazardous venture of calling the turn of the cards. It's an old Egyptian custom that has swept into the dominance of a world-wide institution. Chance, reputedly, is the arbiter. But in the legendry of the "bank" are exploits of persons that savored of something more than luck—of an occult, uncanny skill. No Latin degree, so far as tradition tattles, has been conferred upon these rare sons of genius. Sudden death has often been their portion. There are faro dealers abroad in the land who could lead that professor of psychology up dazzling heights of education.

POVERTY'S SPUR.

The obituaries of Feodor Chaliapin, almost without exception, recite the fact of his lowly origin and the apprenticeship he served of want, difficulty and disappointment. Estimates of his art, too, bracket him with that other robusto, Caruso, who, the late Arthur Brisbane, impatient with birth-control proponents, used frequently to remind us, was the seventeenth child of humble Italian parents. Whether the Russian will live in the warm-blooded, joyously intimate immortality of the Italian tenor must await events, but the chances are that the same superabundant vitality will carry him swaggeringly on.

Here in America our "typical success" story, implanted in our folklore, might almost challenge the desirability of the silver spoon, might incline us to the belief that poverty is the handsomest gift in Clotho's quiver. The thought was powerfully phrased by Woodrow Wilson on the occasion of a Lincoln Memorial address when he said, "Genius is no snob." Like the wind, it bloweth where it listeth, and it bloweth, not only across the mountains and valleys of America, but over all the lands of the earth, as the annals of achievement so magnificently testify.

Today the Christian world sings, worships and glorifies the triumphant climax of a career that is without mortal parallel in its influence upon the history of humanity. No written tract of His survives, but from the words He spoke civilization has derived its laws. The Sermon on the Mount may be a counsel of perfection, but it is a deathless document prescribing standards of deportment to which man must aspire as long as hope moves the heart. But He was cradled in a stable, and his followers were mostly the under-privileged, and the wonders he performed were told, with the exception of Luke, by unlettered, unimportant persons.

There is a liberal measure of truth in the apothegm that man is the architect of his own fortune.

DON'T FORGET THE COLONEL.

The nomination of Illinois State Senator T. V. Smith as one of the Democratic candidates for Congressman-at-Large is another defeat for the Kelly-Nash machine. Seen in the light of Mr. Smith's excellent record in the Legislature, it adds emphasis, too, to the point that morality in government can be made a winning issue.

That was, of course, the issue, and among the many agencies that hammered it home was Col. Frank Knox's Chicago News. In passing the honors around, the official distributor should leave a large basket at the Colonel's door.

WORK OF THE CIVIL LIBERTIES COMMITTEE.

The evidence being brought out by the Senate Civil Liberties Committee in its current series of hearings is far less dramatic than that disclosed at its sessions last year. Riots, mob scenes and the methods of industrial espionage were frequent topics at the 1937 sessions. This year, the committee has been delving into the activities of organizations with high-sounding names, whose work has been done in quiet, without the picturesque settings of the open conflicts previously described.

It is an important phase of the inquiry, nevertheless. The investigators now are getting to the bottom of the shocking conditions described by previous witnesses, whose experience had been on the firing line rather than in the council chambers. The significance of the disclosures is made clear by the frequency, in recent weeks, with which witnesses have appeared with blank memories, or with a brazen statement that all records had been destroyed.

Violent tactics have been used by labor forces on occasion, and these deserve the most severe condemnation. But light is being cast on the fact that a minority of misguided employers have been responsible for outbreaks of violence in other instances. The committee had heard previously how labor spies work; now it is learning about who employs them, and why. Subtle methods have been disclosed in the circulation of material by employers' associations giving instructions in breaking strikes, rousing class fears and discrediting labor.

The committee now is nearing the end of its current appropriation, and Chairman La Follette has asked the Senate for an additional $60,000 to complete the inquiry. The request should be granted.

Civil rights are imperilled by the practices that have been disclosed. Enforcement of the Labor Act is made difficult or impossible by the methods for evading it that have come to light. Both employes and employers have the right to form associations, of course, and to exercise their respective rights to the fullest. It is the Government's logical function to see that both sides use fair tactics, and the La Follette committee has brought out essential facts on this phase of the labor situation.

THE COMMUNITY'S SPRING CLEANING.

General co-operation in the annual Clean-up, Paint-up and Fix-up Campaign, which opens tomorrow and lasts the rest of the month, will result in making St. Louis a much more pleasant and sightly place in which to live. Nature, providing bright new verdure, is doing her part toward beautifying the community. But grass only gives a grotesque contrast in backyards and vacant lots that are littered with brush, ashes, tin cans and discarded velocipedes.

Children in the public schools and in the Catholic and Lutheran parochial schools will request residents and business men to clean up and beautify their property and will report to their teachers the results of their efforts. Although Christmas is a long way off, discarded toys will be collected for repair and distribution to under-privileged children at the next holiday season.

The street cleaning division of the Department of Streets and Sewers will collect the rubbish. It is to be hoped, also, that this department will observe the Clean-up Campaign by sweeping the streets, many of which are now littered with trash which the spring winds whip up in miniature dust storms to plague pedestrians and motorists alike.

THE MAN OF PEACE.

Make Pump-Priming Work This Time!

Since first spending effort did not "take," great care must be used to insure success of new attempt, Iowa paper says; chief requisite is truce in war between White House and business; President now is reassuring, but must resist future impulses to lash out; country seen as not enthusiastic, but willing to try pump-priming again.

From the Des Moines Register.

IT cannot be overlooked that the enormous pump-priming of the first "Roosevelt recovery" did not "catch." Private industry did not take up the burden of employing the millions of jobless and of pushing out adequate purchasing power when the Government tried to quit.

It may be that the tapering off of Government spending came too soon. If there was an error of judgment there, we shared in it, and cannot scold the President. But there is no point in dwelling on that.

Clearly, we are going into another period of the pushing out of Government money. The scheme is somewhat different from the previous one. This time, there is involved the trick of "de-sterilizing" a certain amount of gold. There is talk about the "recoverability" of most of the money, since it will be put out in the form of loans. There are these and other differences.

But fundamentally, the fact remains that the Government is again assuming the responsibility of keeping the economic machine going, pending the time when private industry can take over the responsibility.

Resistance to this program will probably not be effective in Congress. The President's most determined opponents will probably not, in most cases, carry their opposition so far as to vote against the substance of his program.

If this prediction be right, then the one big concern ought to be the managing of the new spending experiment in such a way as to make it really work.

In other words, this time we must make the stimulant take hold. This time we must get the machine off dead center. No sane man dare contemplate a second fiasco. We cannot risk having another splurge of artificial business activity, bottomed on Government spending, followed by another economic back-slide and its accompanying hysteria of fear.

How can we best assure that this will not happen? The most indispensable thing is at least a truce in the war between the White House and business. This is trite but true.

We are quite aware that the great question of a new and stable equilibrium between the power of Government on the one hand and concentrated economic power on the other has not been settled. We are conscious of the necessity of either making "regulation" of giant industry work much better, or, alternatively, of taking the greater risks of more direct governmental participation in the economic process. When we say this we are but paraphrasing, for instance, Herbert Hoover. Intelligent conservatives quite recognize the existence of the problem.

But there is a time for pressing forward with reforms and a time for drawing breath. The present would seem to be, by every kind of evidence, one of those latter times.

Mr. Roosevelt finds the country rather uneasily willing to try again the pump-priming method, not enthusiastic but willing. He finds revolt in Congress already rejecting new reforms or striking down in part the reforms he has previously made, and being not very discriminating about it. He finds smart politicians of both parties obviously concluding that it is no longer too risky to oppose and frustrate him.

Clearly, he must look beyond the 1938 elections, at least to 1940. And it seems both economically and politically essential that he bolster up the courage of business. He must, in his own interest and in the interest of his "New Deal," to put it on the narrowest basis, so handle this new spending experiment as really to get business going.

We take it from certain passages in his message to Congress that he realizes this and intends to be reassuring. For instance, in that passage where he called for united action to whip the new depression and added: "I am determined to do my share."

For instance, again, when he said that self-restraint was imposed by the situation on "all of us." And in various other parts.

We hope the President will be able, day after tomorrow, to resist the terrific yen which about that time doubtless will come over him. We hope he will resist manfully the urge to say or do something by then calculated to send cold chills chasing each other again up the average profit-seeker's spine.

Disproving an Argument

From the Baltimore Sun.

OPPONENTS of Secretary Hull's trade treaty program have repeatedly charged that it would allow "third nations," which have signed no particular agreement giving concessions to us, to share in the concessions we grant to treaty nations. This would come about, it was said, because of Mr. Hull's insistence on linking his program with the most-favored-nation policy.

A good many fears about Japanese trade have arisen in the wake of the Hull program. It has been said that Japanese imports were taking advantage of the lower duties provided in our various reciprocal treaties to inundate our markets.

The Foreign Trade Council says this just isn't so. It found that only $1,818,340, or 3.2 per cent, of our imports from Japan in 1936 benefited from the lowered duties provided in our various trade treaties in effect at that time. It further found that 96 per cent of our Japanese trade remains outside the scope of the concessions we have made in our 17 trade treaties with other countries. The same conclusions are reached with respect to other countries.

It concludes that nations outside the treaty system have shared only to a minor extent in the treaty benefits, and that 67 per cent of the imports coming in under the lower duties which Mr. Hull's agreements have provided come from countries for whose benefits the lower duties were specifically authorized. Eighty per cent of such imports come from 17 nations sharing in the trade program.

These figures, particularly those relating to Japan, should end the idea that we are indiscriminately letting other countries into our home market by the reciprocity route.

The Invisible Thief

From the Chicago Herald and Examiner.

HIDDEN taxes on family income are the source of three-fourths of all money raised by taxation in the United States. A total of $12,800,000,000 will be taken in taxes in 1938 by all branches of government, local, state and Federal.

Of this total, $8,122,500,000 will be buried in the prices of goods sold at retail.

According to the survey by Twentieth Century Fund, Inc., not less than 8 per cent of the smallest possible wage will go for taxes. Eight dollars out of every hundred!

That is the minimum tax burden upon the American family whose bread-winner is at the absolute bottom of the wage scale. But get this fact, as stated by W. F. McShane, executive secretary of the Associated Merchants and Property Owners:

"Tax authorities have figured the tax drain on the public amounts to one-fourth the income of millions of Americans making less than $2500 a year."

Six hundred dollars a year stripped out of the family budget! Fifty dollars a month!

As examples of hidden taxes buried in the prices of goods sold, to the poorest family, along with the richest, Mr. McShane cites:

The 6.4 per cent tax on a loaf of bread.

The 8.14 per cent tax on a pound of beef.

The 8.04 per cent tax on a pound of pork chops.

Hidden taxation, which provides three-fourths of all Government tax revenues, is described by Mr. McShane as "an invisible thief in the kitchen gnawing tirelessly away on the defenseless family budget."

The Government is not getting its taxes by soaking the rich. It is soaking the people.

From the Washington Post.

THE Order of the Crown of Italy which has been conferred on T. J. Pendergast, Democratic boss of Kansas City, is perhaps more than an expression of gratitude for services rendered the Italians of his bailiwick. There is a strong presumption that the decoration is, at the same time, a friendly gesture from one kindred spirit to another.

Certainly in his own domain Boss Pendergast has been as contemptuous of democracy—with a small d—as is Mussolini. Of the two, indeed, Pendergast may be said to be the abler. For he has kept his stranglehold on his city's political machinery without ever having to embark on a warlike adventure and without resorting to castor oil and concentration camps for his opponents. Nonetheless, when it has come to getting out the votes, the opposition has been as thoroughly submerged as that which from time to time dares raise its head in the Italian kingdom.

In short, Mr. Pendergast deserves his Fascist decoration.

SENATOR McKELLAR believes the Government was organized to supply jobs for his supporters. Repeatedly he has tried to make of the Library of Congress a place for party henchmen. Repeatedly he has been unsuccessful. Now he is trying again.

He has insisted upon an investigation by Congress of the recent removal of a library official. He doesn't trust the librarian—one of the most respected men in the Government service—when he fires a man and tells why. But McKellar saw nothing wrong with trying to remove all Republicans from the library when the Democrats came to power in 1932.

FIGHT OVER TAXES THREATENS DELAY IN ADJOURNMENT

PARTY LEADERS CLAIM WHIP HAND

Unless Agreement Is Reached, They Say, Present Objectionable Law Will Continue.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—Senators rebelling against President Roosevelt's business tax policies declared today they were willing to delay adjournment of Congress rather than yield.

Despite this new threat to the hopes of party leaders for adjournment May 14, House spokesmen supporting the President held their ground. They contended they had the whip hand, because, if a tax revision bill were not agreed upon, the present law embodying the business-criticsed undistributed profits and capital gains levies remain in effect.

Senate members of the conference committee which is seeking to reconcile differences between the Hous and Senate tax bills repeated their determination to insist on the provisions of the Senate measure, and House members just as firmly stcuk by the House provisions.

The House bil,l bearing the approval of President Roosevelt, would impose an undistributed profits tax on corporations having income of more than $25,000 a year and a graduated scale of taxes on capital gians.

The Senate voted to substitute flat-rate levels, approved by many business spokesmen, on both corporation income and capital gains.

In three meetings of the conference committee, no suggestions for compromise have ben advanced.

One of the conferees, Chairman Harrison (Dem.), Mississippi, of the Senate Finance Committee, has suggested that the House and Senate bills be sent back to the respective chambers for votes on the undistributed profits and capital gains provisions. House conferees were reported to have rejected this course, at least for the time being.

President Roosevelt is scheduled to send Congress another message shortly, recommending the elimination of present tax exemptions on Federal and state bond issues and salaries.

Although the President has given no hint as to whether he would ask action on this subject at this session, the consensus among Senate leaders was that the message would not suggest immediate consideration.

POLICE RETIREMENT SYSTEM SEEKS TO BLOCK PENSION SUIT

Asks for Writ to Prevent Circuit Court From Hearing Claims of Patrolman Who Went Blind.

A petition for a writ of prohibition was filed in the St. Louis Court of Appeals yesterday by the Police Retirement System attacking the jurisdiction of the Circuit Court to proceed with trial of a mandamus suit seeking to force it to award a pension of $119.22 a month to William W. Casey, 4625A St. Ferdinand avenue. The petitioner contends that the statute gives it the sole right to determine retirement claims.

Since he retired from the police force in 1930 because of blindness, Casey has been receiving $44.43 a month based on ordinary disability. He contends the award should have been on the higher accidental rate because his blindness was caused by lime dust blown into his eyes while on duty during a storm Nov. 11, 1927. However, the board held he had suffered previously from eye trouble and was not entitled to the accidental rating. Casey seeks $5534 back pay.

TALK ON CHILD HYGIENE WORK

Work of the child hygiene conferences which are held twice a week at each of the nine Municipal Health Centers was discussed in a radio talk by Miss Anna Scherff, acting superintendent of the municipal visiting nurses.

The health conferences, she explained, are open only to mothers who are unable to pay for the services of a private physician. Only well children are accepted for supervision and are referred to a physician or a clinic as soon as an illness is detected.

The contest closes April 25, and the winners will be announced at a public meeting at 8 p. m. May 2 at Hotel Statler. There will be five classes, representing various grades.

English Student Gives Us Three Choices

tion something quite different from what we in America mean.

"Under your Constitution," Laski said, "the powers of government are delegated from the circumference to the center. This order must be reversed. To have an adequate Government under present conditions power must be concentrated in the center and delegated to the circumference. This is decentralization as contrasted to Federalism."

What "decentralization," by Laski's definition means, of course, is complete reversal of the American order of government. Under the Constitution the states as the repository of all power delegated certain powers to the Federal Government. Decentralized, this order would be exactly reversed.

The "quasi-sovereignty" now exercised by the 48 states Laski sees as a "serious impediment" to the proper functioning of a strong central government. Under a revision of the Constitution such as he foresees the powers now held by the states over the economic life within their boundaries would be withdrawn. The central government might subsequently delegate specific powers to the states, of an administrative nature, perhaps, but that would be "entirely in the discretion of the center." The states would retain merely a vestige of their present power, in laws guaranteeing civil rights and in the exercise of the police power.

Out of his comprehensive knowledge of this country, Laski reviewed briefly the need for such a drastic change. He pointed to the marked differences in educational and health standards between the North and the South.

"It seems to me that national standards must be imposed by a central government if you are not to have a continuing internecine warfare. One might demonstrate, with some conclusiveness, that the war between the North and the South has never ceased. Because of this continuing warfare it becomes increasingly difficult to impose any standards whatsoever. An industrialist who does not care for the standards in Massachusetts simply removes his plants to Georgia. That is one phase of your economic life, the migration of industries, which has interested me most on the occasion of this visit."

Change Not at All Easy.

Laski is not deceived about the ease with which such a profound change in the arrangement of powers within our system might be brought about. "It is obvious," he said, "that the powers now held by the states are the last protective rampart of the vested interests and it is a question in my mind whether you could alter these powers short of civil war.

"Here again one encounters the singular nature of your Federal system. Not only is the power of the states transcendent over the power of the Federal Government in the day-to-day task of imposing standards, but on the issue of a fundamental change in the form of government similarly the states have what is in effect the power of a veto. It is conceivable that vested interests might buy up a requisite number of your legislatures and block for an indefinite time any change."

There is, of course, a method of amending the Constitution which in effect circumvents the State Legislatures. It is provided in the Constitution that Congress may decide that an amendment approved by two-thirds of the members of the House and the Senate shall be submitted not to the Legislatures but to constitutional conventions made up of delegates chosen by popular election. It was in this way that repeal of prohibition was expedited through a repealing amendment specifying submission to constitutional conventions.

Laski sees in the very nature of our government, as established under the Constitution, certain serious limitations. "By the principle of checks and balances it appears that conflict, and perhaps under certain circumstances ruinous conflict, between the several departments of your Government is inevitable. Congress, in initiating legislation, must assert its independence of the executive branch, but in so doing it seems probable that it will come into conflict with the executive branch. And out of that conflict very little may come.

"It seems to me that if your system is to function you must have a Supreme Court that is prepared to go along with the majority. You must have a Congress that is also prepared to go along. Thirdly you must have a President who maintains the same consistency of purpose; a President who constantly refreshes himself by nourishment from the sources of his power, that is, from the people; a President who realizes that his responsibility is to his constituents and that his constituents are not on Capitol Hill but in the country."

Roosevelt's Predicament.

While he carefully avoided discussing immediate problems, Laski indicated that in his opinion one of the principal reasons for President Roosevelt's present predicament is his failure to go to the sources of his power in recent months. Likewise, in discussing the conflicts that result from our system of checks and balances he did not refer directly to the fight over the President's reorganization bill. With the irony that he uses so effectively, however, he said:

"I must confess that as an alien intruder I am quite unable to understand the issues which you in this country choose to become impassioned about. The nature of so many of your conflicts, I must confess it, defies the understanding and paralyzes even the faculty of imagination."

"Priority of National Claim."

On the question of the right of the State to intervene in any phase of the economic life of the country, Laski gives an answer as unequivocal as on "State's rights." There is no enterprise whatsoever in which there should be any inherent reason why the State could not intervene for the general good." Under this, the Government would not be bound by present restrictions on the field of public ownership. Thus it might act to acquire all chain stores as today it establishes a system of public power production. With the rise of "giant corporations," the right to intervene becomes an inevitable adjunct of adequate government, in Laski's interpretation.

As a student of American institutions he is fully aware of the constitutional barriers that stand in the way of the exercise of such a right today. What must be established by constitutional amendment or revision, Laski says, is "the priority of the national claim." As with "states rights," property rights should be reduced to a minimum. There would be stripped away the whole structure of "corporate inviolability" that is based on the so-called property guarantees in the Fifth and Fourteenth amendments to the Constitution.

What would remain, in Laski's interpretation, is scarcely more than what is contained in the guarantees of civil rights that have their origin in the ancient tradition of English common law; a man's home, which he would own as a matter of right, could not be invaded without a search warrant; the property either of an individual or a corporation might not be taken without fair compensation.

Laski suggests here, of course, that it might be possible to write into the Constitution an extension of the right of eminent domain. This would perhaps be a declaration guaranteeing the power of the State to intervene in any and all phases of the country's economic life. "Exactly how this is to be done is, of course, your task and not mine," Laski adds with his dry smile.

No Threat to Right to Strike.

He sees no threat to the right to strike—to leave a job, to stop work—implied in the fundamental alterations of the property clauses that he believes essential. Specific guarantees of the right to leave work would be contained in the expanded Bill of Rights that, in Laski's view, should go along with these basic changes.

"When the power of the State over the economic life of the nation is increased, as it would be increased, it becomes doubly important to re-enforce the guarantees of civil and religious liberty. In France today it is possible to sue the State for as little as 75 centimes and I think this is all to the good. The accessibility to the courts and the whole process of legal redress should be greatly facilitated."

Laski is of the opinion that the constitutional changes he outlines are necessary even though the Supreme Court today, as he puts it, "goes along" with the majority view of the country. There is no assurance, in Laski's opinion, that this would always be so. "Of course, I do not suggest for a moment," he says, his voice shaded with irony, "that any member of the court today would vote his personal economic predilections. But there is evidence that that has happened in the past."

Capitalism and Democracy.

The changes that Laski suggests are, as has been said, radical changes. They imply what is in effect a reversal of the American governing system. In Laski's view they are essential because it is no longer possible for capitalism and democracy to exist within the same society. Democracy could exist with capitalism in an expanding economy, but in a static economy—and America is arriving at a static economy—the two are mutually destructive. To preserve democracy and to enlarge its sphere, in Laski's interpretation, the State must have unlimited power to intervene in the economic life of the country to make the transition from capitalism to a kind of Socialism.

One comes down then to the pessimism that colors the views of this brilliant Britisher. He is not, one gathers, overly hopeful that a peaceful transition can be made in his own country. He speaks, in a pessimistic mood, of the "time lag," of the difficulty of making each step toward public ownership and Government control. There are so many delays and hindrances that there is no time to make the peaceful change before collapse and reaction have come down upon the structure of society. This is at the root of his pessimism.

"All That One Can Do."

One gathers, too, that Laski's latest impressions have not made him overly hopeful for America, although he speaks guardedly of current conditions and problems.

"All that one can do," he says finally, "is to present the case for reason, having the courage to accept all the implications of reason and hope the people will listen. If they do not listen, then there is nothing more that one can do. I greatly fear that they are not listening."

Harold J. Laski: A Brief Sketch

WHEN Harold J. Laski was teaching political science at Harvard just after the World War, a whole issue of the Harvard Lampoon was devoted to caricaturing him. Conventional, conservative Harvard was not a little alarmed by this slight, gnomic figure; this youthful Britisher who gave off ideas with apparently tireless energy.

Laski was not altogether happy at Harvard. There was something stuffy and murky about the place that distressed him. He returned to England to become a professor of political science at the London School of Economics; yet as a result of his American experience, he has kept an attachment for this country, one result of which is his specialization as a scholar in American affairs.

He has kept, too, that quality of intellectual forthrightness which so alarms the timid. Accepting the implications of the post-war crisis in Britain, he has found himself in the left wing of the British Labor party and a potent force there. Recently he succeeded in forcing a revision of the system of naming delegates to the party congress, thereby challenging the dominion of cautious, trade-union leaders. Believing in the inevitableness of socialism, he has found himself to the left, too, in his own school, which is largely dominated by economists of the old liberal free-trade variety.

To his office in a grimy building in a narrow street off the Strand, a long procession of Americans has gone to hear Laski talk; and letters from America go there, too. One of Laski's most cherished possession is a collection of letters from his friend and hero, the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes. In his desk he has a photostatic copy of the famous list that Holmes kept of all the books he read, his wise comments jotted down in his own handwriting. On the wall is a handsome portrait of Holmes in oils.

In a great many ways Laski is the end-product of British intellectual socialism, the long line of the Fabian Society and the Sidney Webbs. If it were not that he has such a sharp perspective on himself and his own role in life, together with an impish, yet lofty sense of humor, he would seem to have come vaguely out of one of Aldous Huxley's more brilliant novels, probably "Point Counterpoint"; and surely Max Beerbohm must have caricatured him, the impressive head, the slender figure, the very embodiment of reason, which is the impression one has on first hearing him speak in public.

But his pleasures are not all of the mind. At his modest country place, about 20 miles from London, he plays furious tennis with his friends, Kingsley Martin, editor of the New Statesman and Nation, and G. D. H. Cole, the economist. Laski, 43 years old, is married and is the father of a daughter.

DICKMANN SAYS CITY COULD USE $10,000,000

If outright grants are to be made by the Federal Government to pay the full cost of local public improvements, St. Louis could use about $10,000,000, Mayor Bernard F. Dickmann said hopefully to reporters yesterday.

He made it clear that his statement was necessarily speculative, as no program has been prepared and no bill has been introduced in Congress to provide such allowances. Reporters questioned him on the basis of President Roosevelt's message to Congress Thursday, upon the Mayor's return by airplane from Newport News, Va., where he participated Friday in the launching of the Navy's light cruiser, the St. Louis.

The $10,000,000 fund could be used principally for additional facilities at the City's eleemosynary institutions, especially Koch Hospital, the institution for the tubercular, Mayor Dickmann said. He also cited the municipal airport, Lambert-St. Louis Field, for which a variety of improvements have been urged.

In referring to grants of the full cost of public works, the Mayor had in mind allowances of the type the Works Progress Administration has been making. Heretofore Federal financing of heavy construction has been through the Public Works Administration, with grants of 30 to 45 per cent of the costs and loans, if needed, for the balance.

The President, in his message, recommended appropriation of $1,250,000,000 for the W P A for the first seven months of the next fiscal year, starting July 1; $450,000,000 for P W A grants, and $550,000,000 for P W A loans. He suggested that either 45 per cent P W A grants be made, as in the past, or a new method adopted, making loans for the full cost of improvements, to be repaid over periods of a maximu mof 5 years, without interest. Such an assumption of interest, he said, would approximately equal a 45 per cent grant. He declared that loans and grants should not be madeon work which could not be started within six months of passage of theenabling legislation and finished within a year or 18 months after being started.

Less than half of a $7,000,000 city bond item voted in 1934 for added facilities at the eleemosynary institutions has been spent. Some funds remain unspent under the $9,100,000 in other items of that bond issue.

PURCHASE OF EASTER SEALS URGED TO HELP CRIPPLED

Head of Society Says Program May Be Curtailed if Support Is Inadequate.

Unless an annual sale of Easter seals by the St. Louis Society for Crippled Children is adequately supported, the society may be forced to curtail its program for the coming year, Dr. Archer O'Reilly, president, said yesterday in urging the 30,000 St. Louisans to whom the seals were mailed last week to make reasonably prompt returns.

"It is hard to have to tell a trusting child or a hopeful parent that nothing can be done because sufficient money is not available," Dr. O'Reilly said. "Medical care can be had for the asking, but braces and many other things require cash. That is why we are asking citizens to buy Easter seals generously."

The society, supported entirely by private contributions and proceeds of the sale, has headquarters at 3534 Washington avenue, where contributions should be sent.

VOCATIONAL GUIDANCE CONFERENCE MAY 13

The St. Louis Vocational Guidance Conference, sponsored by more than 50 social service, industrial, civic, commercial, and educational organizations, will be held May 13 and 14 at Soldan High School.

The St. Louis Vocational Guidance Association, however, composed of a bout 100 individuals, who have carried on vocational guidance work in the city since its organization in 1933, has declined an invitation to the conference by action of its board of trustees. The organization is the local chapter of the National Vocational Guidance Association.

The trustees said that while they "felt that vocational guidance activities should be increased in St. Louis, a conference to discuss this need is not timely."

Purpose of the conference as announced by the Sponsorship Committee headed by Dr. Clara Menger, is to determine standards of vocational guidance, and to coordinate services of agencies in the city in utilizing the community's resources in occupational research, mental hygiene services, and employment facilities.

Among the speakers announced for the conference are: Dr. Homer P. Rainey of Washington, director of the American Youth Commission of the American Council of Education, Dr. Francis Rosetcrance of Northwestern University and Dr. Mary S. Hayes, director of guidance and placement, Washington.

ROOSEVELT SCHOOL PAINTING GIFT OF J. M. ROBERTSON

He Was Also Donor of Work in De Soto Hotel, Sister Discloses; He Died Nov. 10.

Identity of the donor of two large paintings—one in Roosevelt High School and one in the De Soto Hotel—was disclosed to the Post-Dispatch yesterday by Mrs. George F. Powell, 4440 Maryland avenue. She said her brother, John M. Robertson, head of several office building companies, who died last Nov. 10, gave the one to the school and the other to the old City Club, whose building was converted into the hotel.

Both canvases formerly hung in the Planters Hotel. When Mr. Robertson converted that structure, now the Cotton Belt building, for office use, he did not wish to destroy the pictures, but it was not made known at the time of the gifts, about 14 years ago, that he was the donor.

The canvas at the high school, "The Birth of St. Louis," depicting Laclede, Chouteau and Indians on the river front when the city was founded in 1764, was painted by the late Paul Cornoyer, noted St. Louis artist, uncle of Deputy Fire Chief Larry Cornoyer. It was done for a $1000 commission for the staircase of the Planters Hotel, which was closed in 1922. Two years ago an art dealer valued it at $5000 or more. At Roosevelt High it is attached to a stage curtain and shown at commencement exercises and other occasions.

J. Wilton Cunningham, St. Louisan who achieved considerable prominence as a painter, executed the other picture, "The Maturity of St. Louis," which occupies the east wall of a fifteenth-floor banquet room at the De Soto Hotel. It was said to have cost the Planters $10,000, for display above the staircase. It shows five female figures in classic robes and four undraped little girls, with the river front and Eads bridge appearing faintly in the background.

Another Former Recipient of Old Age Aid in Jackson County Also Drops Appeal.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 16.—The State Social Security Commission reported today the voluntary withdrawal of two appeals by former old age pension recipients whose names had been struck from the rolls as ineligible. The withdrawals, in the city of St. Louis and in Jackson County, were the first since the wave of appeals which followed a purge of ineligibles ordered by Gov. Stark four months ago.

Commission officials attributed the withdrawals to the decision of Circuit Judge Frank Kelly at Benton Wednesday, holding that the State should not grant old age assistance "for the purpose of relieving a relative from supporting a parent."

Hearings have been held in eight of 281 appeals filed. At its April 6 meeting, the commission reinstated four appellants.

WOMEN VOTERS PLAN REVIEW OF CAMPAIGN

League's Fight Against Patronage Bill to Be Topic at Convention.

The activities of the League of Women Voters in opposition to the McKellar patronage bill and in support of the Ramspeck bill which would place postmasterships under the merit system, will be among the topics at the biennial national convention of the league to be held at Hotel Jefferson April 25-29.

Mrs. Harris T. Baldwin, first vice-president of the league in charge of legislation, and Miss Florence Kirlin, congressional secretary, both of Washington, will describe the campaign at a two-hour legislative session of the league, scheduled for the afternoon of Thursday, April 28.

The league president, Miss Marguerite M. Wells, in a statement issued at Washington, said: "The McKellar measure was chosen to illustrate the league's legislative work because it is a matter on which our organization is enlisted 'for the duration,' and because it presents a clear-cut issue of patronage versus anti-patronage. We hope our convention will thus emphasize the league's stand that postmasterships should be forever lifted from the spoils system."

Prof. C. E. Merriam to Speak.

Important speakers at the convention will include Charles E. Merriam, professor of political science at the University of Chicago, who was a member of the committee appointed by President Roosevelt to draw up recommendations for reorganization of Government administrative offices. A bill based on the committee report recently was defeated by Congress.

Prof. Merriam will open and close a series of three symposia on the form, scope and nature of government in the United States. The symposia, titled "Behind the Issues," will be in line with the theme of the convention—American principles of government and traditoinal American ways of thinking about them. Prof. Merriam will conduct the first and summarize the three at a banquet meeting, April 27.

Other speakers will include Dr. Herman Finer of the University of London's School of Economics, who is in this country for a year's study at the invitation of the Social Science Research Council. Author of "Mussolini's Italy," Dr. Finer will speak at the banquet on democratic, as opposed to Fascist government.

Mrs. Eugene Meyer on Program.

John M. Gaus of the University of Wisconsin will speak on "Checks and Balances." Robert Cushman, professor of government at Cornell University, and Mrs. Eugene Meyer, wife of the publisher of the Washington Post, will be among other speakers.

Another feature of the convention will be the 15 "little dinners," devoted to exchange of ideas on teaching women to do something about government as well as to learn about it. Each of these dinners, on the evening of Tuesday, April 26, will be attended by at least one of the league's state presidents and a member of the National Board, and will be limited to an attendance of 30.

Subjects at the little dinners will include the following: "Find the Women for the Jobs," "Patterns in Pamphlets," "News Currents and Radio Activity" and "How to Be Winning and Influential."

Members of the nominating committee, announced yesterday, will be Mrs. J. Hardin Smith of St. Louis; Mrs. Malcolm L. McBride of Cleveland; Miss Katharine Ludington of Old Lyme, Conn.; Mrs. Douglas M. Moffat of New York; Mrs. R. Gordon Wagenet of Washington; Miss Ruth H. Mitchell of St. Cloud, Minn., and Mrs. Carl L. Voss of Salinas, Cal.

"Of Making Many Books"

EDITED BY
JOHN G. NEIHARDT

Profound Study of Urban Culture

THE CULTURE OF CITIES. By Lewis Mumford. (Harcourt, Brace & Co., New York.)

A TRULY monumental work has been produced by Lewis Mumford as a logical continuation of his previous major achievement, "Technics and Civilization." The earlier book dealt with the rise of the machine and its place in modern life, and the writer now has centered his attention on one important phase of its workings, as applied to those agglomerations of human beings and mechanisms known as cities.

To explain how Megalopolis grew to be what it now is, Mr. Mumford goes back to the beginning of Old World cities, to trace their development and change in a lengthy preliminary historical section. Here comes into play the vast store of learning he has at his fingertips, which enables him to set forth in glowing detail the whole story of the medieval city's growth and the daily life of its people.

These chapters are worth reading for their informational value alone, but they are merely an introduction to a profound study of the modern city and its teeming millions, which in turn leads to a searching look into the future.

Modern technics has brought with it a train of abuses which leads the writer to prefer in many respects the medieval city, despite its manifest crudities. Primitive as they were, the ancient towns had an inherent honesty and soundness about them, but since the fifteenth century, "mechanical integration and social disruption have gone on side by side," until we now have a "standardization of ugliness" and a form of life that debases the human beings caught in its vortex. Perhaps it is an unduly pessimistic view, too severe at least on certain counts, but the writer arrays his evidence persuasively.

His remedy for the congestion, physical deterioration, and noise and smoke that have come to mark the modern city is to work against the current centralization and toward development along regional lines, without regard for the arbitrary political boundaries which now demarcate the city as well as the state. This involves "the modification and relocation of various elements in the total environment for the purpose of increasing their service to the community." Such a large-scale rehabilitation the writer conceives as "the grand task of politics for the opening generation."

The tremendous vision is presented not as theory alone, for Mr. Mumford can speak with authority from the viewpoint of architect, sociologist, economist, and city planner. He speaks as a political philosopher as well, for he sees a new freedom, the very antithesis of totalitarianism, in the fuller lives to be enjoyed by dwellers in the healthier atmosphere of the reordered region.

The spirit of the book can scarcely be conveyed in a few paragraphs. It is not a volume to be read hastily or sketchily, whether the reader is in search of fact or of mental stimulus. The writer's deep scholarship, his rich style, and his broad vision demand a patient hearing for what he has to say.

A Journalist's Experiences

GLASS HOUSES. Ten Years of Free-Lancing. By Carleton Beals. (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia.)

CARLETON BEALS, who has made many a political face red with his articles and books, has undertaken an autobiography covering his years as a journalist. He has told much about Beals, but far more about the people he has met and the political and economic conditions of the countries in which he has worked. "Glass Houses" is a combination of reporting and adventure, of "Banana Gold," "Mexican Maze," "Rome or Death," and some of his other books.

The title refers to the brittle material of political structures, for much attention is given to the activities of stone-throwers, not the least of which, Beals implies, have been emissaries of Uncle Sam. Commercialism, a complacent lack of understanding, and general bungling seem to have offset every constructive effort in the matter of Latin-American relationships.

From the time Beals landed in Mexico City in 1917, ragged and jobless, he was a keen observer of politics. Three years later he went to Spain and Italy, then passing through stormy periods, returned to Mexico, and nine years later returned to Spain, shortly before the overthrow of the monarchy. Politicians, artists, exiles were his associates, and a parade of intriguing characters marches through the book. There are intimate portraits of Carranza, Luis Morones, Mexico's labor leader, Obregon, Ambassador Morrow, John Dos Passos, Diego Rivera, and many others who were in Mexico during that time. Beals discusses them with admirable dispassionateness, never hesitating to detail mistakes and shortcomings, though he greatly admired some of them. Of Morrow, for instance, he asserts that while the one-time Ambassador imbued diplomacy with dignity, in general he undermined the basic principles of the Mexican revolution and led the country back to the Diaz system. He then concludes with an expression of resentment at a "namby-pamby" biography of Morrow, because Morrow "was a man."

Decidedly on the left in his sympathies, always a defender of exploited peoples, Beals seems never to have been influenced by personal sympathies. "Glass Houses" is never sensational, and it certainly gives a clearer understanding of Latin-American, Italian, and Spanish politics during the past two decades.

British Labor Situation

POST-WAR HISTORY OF THE BRITISH WORKING CLASS. By Allen Hutt. (Coward-McCann, Inc., New York.)

MR. HAROLD J. LASKY, noted British economist, speaking of Mr. Hutt's present volume, hastens to inform us that he does not agree with "all of his (Mr. Hutt's) judgments," but expresses the hope that "its implications will save the working class of the United States some of the mistakes we have made."

The impression one gets in reviewing the British situation is that tranquillity is not its outstanding characteristic. Police brutality, it seems, has been as common in England as in the United States, except that in England the workers fight back, and, not infrequently, British "guardians of law and order" are among the casualties.

Mr. Hutt seems to prove that "squelching the reds" has met with the same success, in England, as might be expected from applying wind to a fire. And every effort of union leaders to rid themselves of "red trouble makers" has led to increased "rank and file" activities and more militant response from the workers.

Up until Mr. MacDonald became Prime Minister, the workers functioned through their elected leaders in more or less organized fashion; but the disappointment of many with MacDonald's leadership resulted in "unauthorized" strikes and mass demonstrations. Hunger marches, protest demonstrations against the "means test," led to many riots and to pitched battles with police.

Mr. Hutt charges that the Government, in 1936, aided the Fascists, led by Mosley; that they failed to put down anti-Semitic pogroms in London's East Side, and that, in many ways, the present British Government has shown its Fascist leanings. He charges reactionary labor leaders with similiar leanings, but concludes that the great mass of the workers will not follow either their Government or their reactionary labor leaders, and that, in every emergency so far, the workers have risen in their strength and demonstrated their ability to think and to act for themselves.

The Copper Kings Of Montana

FEW books like this have ever been written. In it the late Christopher P. Connolly, one of the last of the McClure muckrakers, has told what he knew about the bloody industrial and political battles waged by the three ruthless titans of Montana copper, Marcus Daly, William A. Clark, and F. Augustus Heinze, at the turn of the century. As a Montana lawyer from 1886 to 1906, and as Prosecuting Attorney of Butte from 1897 to 1901, the author played an important part in many of the events of which he wrote. There seem to be indications that publication of the manuscript was deferred until Mr. Connolly's death.

We know a good deal about the disastrous social consequences of a close hookup between big business (in this case copper) and politics; but the author's further elucidation acquaints us with all the details. In order to control elections and achieve their ends, the copper kings resorted to bribery that covered the field, from the lowliest voters to Judges of the Montana Supreme Court. Here are names, dates, places, and amounts.

Those of us who believe in democratic institutions are apt to get a bit shaky when we read that "there began in Helena a series of such astounding briberies that they almost managed, by the very commonness of their occurrence and the openness with which they were offered, to change the public mores. Men and women who had always exhibited the highest integrity began to talk about bribes of amazing size almost as casually as they would about a Christmas present of $2 made to the milkman. The business men of Helena became almost a unit in declaring that bribery was a necessity. The man who stood out against bribes found that his old friends stood aloof from him. The morning salutation of everyone was: 'What's the price of votes today?'"

There isn't a dull paragraph in the book. However, some parts of it are much too sketchy. There are some swift, graphic shots of the motley Montana scene during the 1900s that help greatly to make this work an important social and historical document.

Man Too Is Part Of Nature

BEYOND DARK HILLS. By Jesse Stuart. (E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.)

WALKING one day, when he was a boy, behind the dark hills of his Kentucky homeland, Jesse Stuart pondered the merits of man and nature. For man there was springtime, summer, and winter's night; and then he was no more. For nature there was leafage and flower, winter's rest, and spring's rebirth. Nature in it's seasonal renewings had what man lacked. Nature was worthier of worship. Now that Jesse Stuart is a man, he still gives nature his devotion.

Behind dark hills is where Jesse Stuart belongs, where nature speaks and man's voice is little heard. He loves solitude and loneliness now as he did in boyhood when he went to the woods at night with lantern and book. The wind stirring the withered leaves was music and poetry to him. When the blackberry briars bloomed beneath the apple trees and the wind off the blossoms made him jealous of the bees, he wanted to shout to the wind, the sky, and the stars: "I have something to say."

Jesse Stuart went out among men, but he did not like them. Writing about them in "Beyond Dark Hills," which is his personal story, he makes it clear that he found little good in them. Life among men was ugly and dirty and dwarfed. Because he did not like that life, he writes poorly about it. In a way of speaking, hound dogs are given a higher rating than men from the Stuart point of view; for when Jesse quotes with apparent approval the declaration of his father, Mitch, that old Black-Boy, "if he'd-a been a man would-a been the Governor of Kentucky," there is an implication that such a consummation would have resulted quite as much from the low estate of Kentucky governors as from the high quality of Kentucky hound dogs.

Home again, the dark hills were sweeter to Stuart than they had been before he tasted of life among men and found it sour. Here were the old orchards white in appleblossom time, ridges of green Irish potato vines, the blue streams, the lonely sounds at night, the wind singing in the dead September corn. Call it God, if you will. So sang Jesse Stuart when he was back beyond the dark hills drinking the lonesome waters.

When, in college later, Jesse Stuart, rebelling against academic forms, resolved to write "the way I damn well please," and wrote "Beyond Dark Hills" as his term paper, his teacher said: "I have been teaching school for 40 years, and I have never read anything so crudely written and yet beautiful, tremendous, and powerful as that term paper you have written."

Jesse Stuart is like that, crude but with a great sensitiveness to the beauty and the moods of nature.

He makes love to Horey's servants, wins Horey's wife and his car in a crap game, and trades the wife back for a hundred dollars, which Horey raises with great difficulty on his next year's crop. He pays a visit to Tom Rhodes, Horey's neighbor, drinks up Rhodes' whisky and spends an hour in his barn, peeking through a crack at a pasture because "there's something about looking through a crack that nothing else in the whole wide world will give you." Finally, in a day of whirlwind preaching, he condemns the sins of Georgia as "the worst in the world" without specifying one of them, and makes every soul in the community "come through," as the saying goes.

"Journeyman" was first published privately in 1935, and the popular edition was issued concurrently with the presentation of a stage version in New York. The novel contains some of Caldwell's lustiest humor. The narrative is finely, sometimes poetically, done, and, as in the author's previous works of fiction, the picture of "Cracker" Georgia is honest and convincing.

However, Mr. Caldwell has written with scant regard for the complexities of human nature. We are asked to believe that Dye's visit has done something to the half-dozen people he most intimately touches, but we are not told what, and the characters are drawn in a one-dimensional manner so that it is difficult to believe in their existence. Dye is more varied than the others, but he behaves with an inconsistency that Mr. Caldwell has neglected to motivate and make plausible.

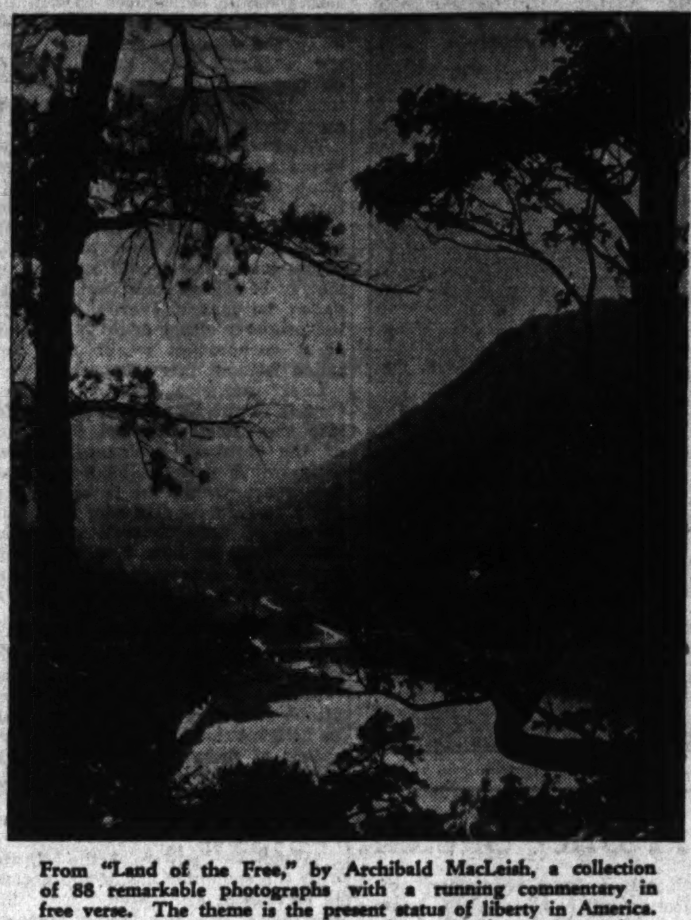
IN THE ALLEGHENIES



From "Land of the Free," by Archibald MacLeish, a collection of 88 remarkable photographs with a running commentary in free verse. The theme is the present status of liberty in America. Whether or not the text should be taken seriously as poetry, there is no denying the vital meaning in many of the jagged lines. (Harcourt, Brace & Co., New York.)

An Island Grove in Illinois

A PRAIRIE GROVE. By Donald Culross Peattie. (Simon & Schuster, New York.)

DONALD CULROSS PEATTIE has to his credit a series of books so unusual that the titles thereof come immediately to mind on the mention of his name: "An Almanac for Moderns," "Singing in the Wilderness," "Green Laurels," "A Book of Hours." His latest, "A Prairie Grove," belongs in the same company.

To say that "A Prairie Grove" is not the work of genius that "An Almanac for Moderns" was, is not to pass an adverse judgment on the new book. Measuring the 40-year-old poet-scientist-philosopher of Glenview, Ill., by himself is stern business. It would be fairer, perhaps, certainly more flattering, to compare his works with those of his contemporaries who write about the world of growing things and man's place in it.

What Mr. Peattie has done this time is something new in so far as this reader has been able to discover. He has studied minutely and written carefully the life story of a small plot of Middle Western soil. The acre whose biography he records is in Illinois, "the state shaped like an arrowhead," the state of his birth to which he has returned to live after a lengthy sojourn on foreign soil.

He does not locate precisely his island of trees on the prairie's sea of grass, but it is where his own people came a century ago from New England and New York, driving their lumbering wagons under the arching boughs of the knotted burr oaks, through the asters and sunflowers and great golden foxgloves into a virgin world.

Mr. Peattie's story, or song, for a large part of it is music set to words, opens long before the arrival of his bearded forebears from the seaboard. He begins with the beginning as science knows it, and many readers will cherish above the rest those first pages in which he sketches the fashioning of the prairie: the coming and going of the seas, the laying down of deep layers of death out of which life was born, then the glaciers, the climatic changes which took away the ancient prototypes of the elephant and the camel and the horse, and finally yielded the great plains on which the Indians roamed when the visionary Frenchmen and the coureurs de bois came in their great canoes.

Indeed, the book is really three in one, for after the writer takes the reader into the ancient woods and grasses with him to watch the animals and birds fighting for mastery and mating to reproduce their kind, he tells the story of an American patriot on the frontier, and finally of the Goodmer family and how the way of things on the prairie shaped the lives of each of them.

Mr. Peattie says he only remembers for the grasses and the trees and his kind who have gone before. It is a memory which lifts his head into the stars while his feet stand firm on the prairie soil with its carpet of bird-foot violets in the gusty spring. It enables him to look not only into the dim past but ahead to the unknown with calm assurance.

Recollections of a Golden Era

THIS is such a book as a man writes when the sands have almost run and he sits in the chimney corner with his memories. It is gossipy, sometimes imaginative, and is fluently written. There is an atmosphere of golden haze, as if life had been good for the author and something of the same quality had been imparted to his impressions of others. Although he avows the impossibility of writing autobiography—at least for himself—this novelist and newspaper writer has nevertheless revealed much of his own personality by reflection from the subjects of his sketches.

Julian Hawthorne presents unique and intimate views of Emerson, Thoreau, Lowell, Bronson Alcott, and others of the Boston-Concord galaxy, besides his father and mother, Nathaniel and Sophia Hawthorne, and that unquenchable Aunt Lizzie Peabody, whose influence on the child was so strong. Fellow collegians at Harvard, personages of the stage, English notables, occurrences natural and supernatural—all these are drawn upon for the material which emerges as dramatic short story, as delineation of personality, as rollicking humor, or as mellow philosophizing; and there are passages which might have been written by the elder Hawthorne himself.

Perhaps the height of imaginative interpretation is reached in the sketch of Ruskin, which will bear quoting: "Impassioned and companionless elf left over after the others departed, together with faith and belief and the sense of justice and other good lost things . . . He was a bodiless intellect, a disincarnate emotion. I remember seeing him coming along the pavement of Piccadilly . . . In his faded brown clothes he resembled an autumnal leaf, blown hither and thither by a light breeze. He was not like a person. Had I walked straight at him I should have passed through him, neither of us feeling anything. But what a vast power he was . . ."

Published posthumously and edited by the novelist's wife, this volume takes rank with the irreplaceable personal recollections of a golden and vanished era of American life.

Ask the Women Of Barcelona

GEORGIAN ADVENTURE. The Autobiography of Douglas Jerrold. (Chas. Scribner's Sons, New York.)

"I HAVE lived sufficiently close to great events to be able to know what was going on, but not so close as to be prevented from saying what I know," Douglas Jerrold writes in his autobiography, which covers the period of King George V's reign. His career, as an officer in the Royal Naval Division during the World War, and as a publisher and newspaper correspondent following the War, brought him into close contact with such personalities as F. Yeats Brown, Lloyd George, Sir Oswald Mosley, Hilaire Belloc, King Alfonso, and General Franco. From behind the scenes he has participated in events of international political significance. It was he, Jerrold claims, who obtained the airplane which carried Franco from the Canaries to Morocco in the summer of 1936 at the beginning of the Spanish War. He had also helped supply the insurgents with British machine guns and ammunition.

His World War service apparently was not as exciting as his later unofficial activity in behalf of Franco. The War for him seems to have been a purposeless jaunt through Europe, from London to Paris, from Paris to Rome. "After Rome, Genoa, and after Genoa, Ventimiglia. . . . Thence to Marseilles where we feasted on little wild red strawberries drowned in kirsch." In that way Jerrold discovered that "uncongenial company is the chief horror of war."

The author's most original discoveries, however, were made last year, while traveling in Franco's Nationalist territory, where he was delighted to find that civilization "is at a new and glorious beginning." Generously he invites the democracies of the world to share in the "renascence" that Franco has brought to Spain. "We cannot disinterest ourselves and expect to share in the fruits. There is a stirring of the waters and a new spirit abroad in Europe. The men who have walked with Christ have come back, as they always must, to tell the tale."

As for Franco, Jerrold describes him as "a supremely good man." The Fascist leader "is an ardent Christian and he is fighting for social justice. . . . He is neither ambitious nor dictatorial; he is filled with a profound humility. . . . He is not only a man of great power, but he is a man of great charity." As to Franco's goodness and charity the women and children of Barcelona can testify.

Documented opinion sympathetic to the loyalists the author labels as propaganda. "It has a smug slickness which revolts; like rotten mackerel by moonlight, to quote John Randolph, it shines and stinks." Quite aptly the same phrase may be applied to Jerrold's book.

Sordid Life In London

PAMELA HANSFORD JOHNSON began to publish novels three years ago at the age of 23. "World's End"—her fourth—has been highly acclaimed in England, the critics comparing it frequently with Hemingway's "Farewell to Arms." Certainly it is with a rather remarkable insight and understanding for a woman of her age that she has written of the emotions of a group of lower middle class people in London under the double stress of their own private struggles for financial security and the confusion of living "in the waiting rooms of war."

The story concerns chiefly the married life of Arnold and Doris Brand, a young couple whose love for each other is fundamentally sound, but whose enjoyment of each other is constantly threatened by their fight against poverty and the psychological complications of their struggle. Arnold, unemployed much of the time, resents bitterly taking money from his wife and, in his resentment, he turns occasionally for companionship to a cheap, stupid girl, Rosary Stevens, who lives across the way, simply to escape his feeling of inferiority to Doris. And Doris, after hours of drudgery in a draper's shop, is in such a state of exhaustion most of the time that she is unable to show her love for her husband. So they go on through the trivia of their daily lives with only occasional moments of unalloyed happiness, which are much too quickly lost in the irritation and confusion in which they exist most of the time. In the end, sudden tragedy raises their love to something above the desperate struggle for existence.

The sordid details of life in a cheap London boarding house are strikingly portrayed, but one suspects that at times the story would have been more effective if it had been a little more restrained and a little less tawdry.

Main Street With a Difference

SOME idea of the considerable changes that have occurred during the last two decades in the general outlook and approach of the reading public may be had by comparing this first novel of William Allen White's son with Sinclair Lewis' "Main Street."

The themes of the two books are similar—the stultifying, deforming effect of small-town morals and psychology upon the restless, imaginative individual. But Carol Kennicott, however sympathetic a character, was fundamentally unimportant to the people of Gopher Prairie. The leading characters in White's book, on the other hand, are two high-pressure business men, father and son; their self-expression is in terms of aspirations that lie close to the hearts of most Americans, and their financial and spiritual bankruptcy have implications that shake the foundations of the whole social structure in which they move.

There is another important difference. Lewis presented the damning facts of Gopher Prairie as final, unalterable, a dismal but inevitable culmination of the great American dream. White cannot stop there. He must go on to examine the forces which have made his townspeople what they are, to trace their development from year to year, from event to event; he leaves them in a state of dynamic flux, with only a hint of possible future direction.

The plot of "What People Said" is essentially simple. It is the story of a small-time utilities magnate and his son. The latter, prevented by circumstances from following the traditional middle class path into his father's business, becomes a promoter and a speculator. Social, business, and political relationships are built up with a genuineness that has the solid ring of fact; the whole community moves through the prosperity of the 1920s to the economic and moral crash that becomes specific in the fortunes of the leading characters.

White writes tersely, objectively; his familiarity with his characters and his town is obviously that of personal experience, and his insights into group thinking and feeling are based upon a completely rounded acquaintance. Occasional technical devices, borrowed from the realism of Bennett and Hardy, seem out of place, and the concluding narrative of the court trials which wind up his characters' careers is disproportionately detailed. But the soundness of the entire presentation makes these faults negligible. It is a creditable first novel.

—Jean Winkler.

Man's Invincible Stupidity

THE BROTHERS. By H. G. Wells. (The Viking Press, New York.)

IN format this is a small book, but it is large in meaning—larger still in its implications. Mr. Wells has a rare faculty of expressing an idea in narrative form, without allowing the idea, the abstract reasoning, to crowd the story aside. Thus, readers will find in "The Brothers" a presentation of the author's social theories; but they will find also a vivid and absorbing tale of two very real men, and of their strange destinies.

The tale tells how the twin brothers, Richard Bolaris and Robert Ratzel, leaders of the Fascist and Communist forces in a civil war, and strangers to each other, meet and discover their fraternal relationship. They discover also that they are brothers not only by blood, but in ideals: only their terminologies differ. Both of them are, they find, fighting the same enemy, the "Common Fool"—the invincible stupidity of human beings—and in the upshot they join themselves against this force. Such a struggle could have, of course, only one conclusion. But though they fail as individuals, Mr. Wells is not entirely hopeless. He sees these two idealists as but forerunners, and he envisions a time when all men shall see the light, a time when the "new order" shall be realized. For another force, not merely individual, is at work: the force of human indignation.

There is a great deal said here in a small space; yet the book is perhaps even more remarkable for what it does not say. This author is not one to force indigestible ideas down the throats of his readers. He suggests rather than states explicitly, and "The Brothers," instead of being only an exposition of Wellsian social theory, is valuable as a springboard for the reader's own thinking.

Romantic Tale Of Waterloo

CURRENT fashion in war stories definitely leans toward glamor as contrasted with the horror theme so popular a few years ago. In certain respects this thought may be disturbing, but unquestionably the shift in emphasis has produced some readable novels, among which Miss Heyer's romantic tale of Waterloo is notable.

The story itself follows the approved heroic tradition. Lary Barbara Child is by far the loveliest as well as the most daring of all the fashionable English set who flocked to Brussels during the social season that ended with Waterloo. With her gay adventures and her audacious manners she contrives to set most of her compatriots by the ears until, at a ball, she meets Col. Charles Audley, one of Wellington's aides de camp. They fall in love at sight, become engaged, eventually quarrel over an indiscretion of Barbara's. The engagement is broken, and the Colonel, his affections seemingly held by another, departs for the battlefield. After a magnificent description of the contest in which Napoleon was overthrown, the story closes back in Brussels with the few characters who have survived the action.

Heretofore Miss Heyer has been known chiefly as a capable writer of detective fiction, but the present work clearly proves her versatility. In her newly chosen field she shows herself to be reasonably skillful in developing a rather commonplace plot, decidedly more adept at characterization, but a real artist at historical narration. Her descriptions of the social scene at Brussels, the intimate picture of the Iron Duke and his generals, and her stirring account of Waterloo, all combine to produce a genuinely interesting novel.

Extraordinary First Novel

IN the quiet city of Ghent three charming old ladies, who have long been friends, keep a small but distinguished school. Once brilliant and vivacious, they have never lost their joy in living, but have added to it the serenity and understanding of years. Doro, who wrote poetry in her youth under the pen name of Jean Latour, has retained the integrity of her spirit in the renunciation of her love. Clairette has found peace after the sorrow of her husband's death. Annette, "a warm and willful angel," is the practical one who happily cares for the other two. It is into this unusual household that Mark Taylor, a young author longing for guidance in his immaturity, comes from England in search of Jean Latour, whose poems in their "transparency" and depth of emotion promise an answer to a need that the modern world cannot satisfy. Nor is he disappointed, for Doro's understanding brings him release from his uncertainty and shows the way to self-realization.

This, clearly, is a writer's book concerned with the problems of the creative mind. Its central theme is the relation between literature and life, the influence of "the adorable dead," the great writers who are more comforting and nourishing "than anyone alive." Miss Sarton has voiced her own literary creed in her description of the manner in which Doro's reticent individualism, her stressing of personal integrity as a basis of art, her suggestion to "withdraw, think, be silent," give orientation to Mark who is "shipwrecked in the twentieth century" with its noisy insistence upon relativity and generalization.

It must not, however, be imagined that this is a mere exposition of ideas, a tale dealing in dry abstractions. Very real are the three "Little Owls" with their gentle gaiety and pleasure in the trivial events of the day. Miss Sarton shows a keen understanding of the characters of these women, the intense inner life and the fragile strength which have enabled each to build an enduring mode of existence upon sorrow and frustration. Equally vivid is the extremely masculine Mark, pathetic in the perplexed rawness of his youth, tragic in his fevered passion for an unattainable woman.

There is something of classical simplicity and perfection in this novel—the author's first—with its delicately colored rhythmic prose, its penetrating humor, its charming atmosphere, its restrained but intense emotion. Miss Sarton has a genius for conveying definite impressions by suggestion. A few memories, certain scenes apparently chosen at random, and the whole life pattern of each character is subtly revealed. Throughout is a luminous clarity, a lyric quality, and a warm humanity which give to this highly individualized story that hint of the eternal which is the sign of true art.

ENGLISH PASTORAL POETRY. By William Empson. (W. W. Norton & Co., New York.)

Although the main body of this study is concerned with English literature, the author brings to bear on his subject a wide knowledge of the poets, prose writers, and political and religious thinkers of other countries. The book should heighten the reader's enjoyment of the well-known writings of the past, and his understanding of the literary products of our own time.

"Inflation Stocks," Favorites in New Deal Drives, Come Back Into Center Of Market on New Spending Plan

Advances Reflect Call for $4,500,000,000 Funds —U. S. Bonds Spurt on Two Billion Expansion in Potential Credit.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 16.—"Inflation" stocks favored by speculators throughout the New Deal pump-priming and credit expansion drives the last five years came back into the center of the stock market stage this week as new spending-lending plans took shape in Washington.

Buying of stocks and commodities expanded when the full scope of President Roosevelt's plans, calling for $4,500,000,000 additional outlay of Federal funds and more than $2,000,000,000 expansion in the potential credit supply, were laid before Congress in his relief message Thursday. Reacting in a manner grown familiar to Wall street observers the last few years, traders bought rubber, copper, farm implement, steel, oil and other industrial stocks and the major commodities, especially wheat and cotton.

The bullish response at first, however, had visible marks of restraint. Consideration of the message over the Good Friday holiday, however, brought a broad and active demand for industrial shares, and final gains on the week ran from 3 to 10 points in some pivotal leaders.

Bond List Responds.

Among the first to give clear-cut response to the administration's recovery plans was the Government bond list. The President's message was followed by a brisk upturn in Treasury issues. Bond men explained the rise as based on expectation of a record-breaking increase in surplus banking reserves through the release of nearly $1,400,000,000 in impounded gold to help finance the spending an tdhe $750,000,000 reduction in reserve requirements.

The effects of this huge increase in potential credit supply, bond men said, should be to encourage banks to expand investments, especially after dumping more than $2,000,000,000 from investment holdings the last year and a half. Corporate bonds, generally, however, did not follow the advance, for the market still was smarting from the break in Santa Fe securities.

Stocks ended the week with a rallying sprint today in which market leaders climbed 1 to 5 points.

Expectations business would be quick to respond to the huge credit expansion plans of the Government apparently overshadowed current earnings statements stressing the falling trend in the first quarter.

Buying Orders Saturday.

With buying orders piling up in commission houses over the Good Friday holiday when the Exchange was closed, the trading pace at the start of the brief session was sufficient to put the ticker tape behind for a while. A little profit selling slowed the proceedings later. There was another speed-up at the finish and favored issues ended near their top marks for the day.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up 1.5 points at 41.2 for the two-hour dealings. For the week the composite showed a net gain of 1.3 points. It was the third consecutive week's advance, with more than half of the sharp March slump having been recovered. Transfers totaled 1,057,860 shares, compared with 1,414,480 last Saturday, which was the largest volume for a short day since Oct. 23, last.

Interest today was centered principally in heavy industrial shares, especially those of the commodity and inventory type which, in the view of some, constitute a hedge against inflation and rising prices.

Conspicuous on the upswing were U. S. Steel at 48⅝, Bethlehem 51¾, Westinghouse 80, du Pont 110, Allied Chemical 149, Anaconda 31, Kennecott 36⅝, J. I. Case 79½, Union Carbide 72⅝, Air Reduction 47½, General Motors 34¾, Chrysler 47¾, Douglas Aircraft 43¼, Sears-Roebuck 62¼, Loew's 43⅛, Standard Oil of New Jersey 49¼, United Aircraft 26½, U. S. Rubber 28⅜ and U. S. Gypsum 73½.

American Telephone, down at the beginning on a somewhat unsatisfactory profits statement, came back with the rest of the list and emerged with a net advance of 1⅝ at 130⅛.

Rails Up Moderately.

Most rails were up moderately, but these were still under the influence of poor traffic operations and the belief transportation relief legislation is unlikely at this session of Congress. The outlook was further clouded by refusal of carrier unions to accept a voluntary wage cut and it was understood managements would press for action under the Railway Labor Act.

Buying of "Federals" in bond market was mainly by banks which, under the credit expansion program, may see their excess reserves reach a record high. Corporation bonds were higher, but none too lively.

Foreign markets were closed as were most domestic commodity exchanges, in observance of Easter. The wheat market at Chicago closed ¼ to ⅝ cent a bushel lower. Corn was ⅛ cent higher to ⅜ cent lower.

The important news of the week, marketwise, was the President's recovery message to Congress on Thursday and his "fireside chat" to the nation in the evening of that day in which he explained the steps that would be taken to bring business and employment back to normal. Wall Street commented in particular on the conciliatory tone of both the message and broadcast and implications were seen of another "breathing spell."

Helpful was the conclusion of an accord between Great Britain and Italy and the growing belief the war in Spain is nearing an end.

Turn Up From Low.

President Roosevelt sent his message to Congress just as many traders were closing accounts for an Easter recess. Leading foreign markets shut up shop yesterday until Tuesday.

Furthermore, a wide break in Santa Fe shares, following delay in action on the interest usually paid May 1 on the 4 per cent adjustment bonds of 1995, though not due until late fall, and a rather doubtful business outlook—as depicted by several corporate heads—prevented many newly-won converts to the bull cause from wading heavily into the markets.

Having yielded in a year approximately half the market values quoted at the recovery peak in March, 1937, the stock market was regarded by some analysts as situated to respond to another touch of Washington's spending-lending spurs. Business, too, seemed to have found a fairly firm footing after its steep decline from August into February. The Associated Press weekly index of industry activity again held to the narrow course it has followed the last eight weeks and was supported in part by a further better-than-seasonal gain in residential construction.

Total stock sales during the week (five days) amounted to 4,409,114 shares, compared with 4,424,050 a week ago and 6,635,860 corresponding week a year ago. Sales from Jan. 1 to date were 71,976,404 shares, compared with 178,053,856 a year ago and 201,092,373 two years ago.

INDUSTRIAL ACTIVITY INDEX RISE IS RESUMED

Most Important Industries Register Substantial Gains—Steel Operation Off.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 16.—Industrial activity this week resumed the rising trend of the past two months, with most important industries registering substantial gains.

The Associated Press seasonally adjusted Index, based on latest available statistics, rose to 69.4 per cent of the 1929-30 average from 68.8 last week and compared with 104.9 a year ago.

For almost three months industry has held a steady pace. The Index has fluctuated between a high of 70.4 and a low of 68.2 since January.

Steel operations hit bottom 15 weeks back. Cotton manufacturing established its recession low 11 weeks ago, residential building a month ago.

Automobile assemblies was the only component of the Index to decline this week, touching a new low for the year. Steel mill activity, electric power output, residential construction and total freight carloadings advanced.

The upturn in loadings, however, reflected a sharp rise in coal shipments. The most important freight classification, miscellaneous loadings, continued to slip, dropping to the lowest level in five years.

COMMODITY INDEX IN A FRESH SETBACK

Weighted Figure Falls to the Lowest Basis in Last Four Years.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 16.—Commodities dipped further this week, although agricultural staples and textiles breasted the receding tide for modest gains.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 important wholesale commodity prices fell to the lowest level in four years, with industrial raw materials setting pace for the recession.

At 67.76 per cent of the 1926 average, the index compared with 68.16 last week and 94.26 a year ago.

Also punching down into new low ground were several important groups of commodities; food, industrial and non-ferrous metals. In each case, trade commentators pointed to heavy—and rising—inventories as a potent depressant, demand having shown little variation from the slack level of recent weeks.

Break in Livestock Prices.

Although rubber, lumber and zinc forged ahead moderately, ranking industrial staples such as steel scrap, hides, tin, lead, burlap and turpentine were under pressure.

Livestock quotations suffered one of the widest breaks in recent months; hogs, cattle and lambs concurring in the slump. Here again, increasing available supplies were generally considered to have been the club that drove prices down.

The trend among market-basket items was mixed. Substantial setbacks in eggs, sugar and butter, however, outweighed upturns in cocoa, flour and lard.

Also mixed were grains, wheat and oats advancing, and corn and rye giving ground. Cotton was the determining factor in establishing an increased agricultural price index. The upswing in this staple reflected improved mill buying as steps were taken to slash production and bring it more in line with demand.

What Index Shows.

Textiles were buoyant on much the same basis, wool, cotton cloth and silk being higher for the first time in about two months.

Advance in Major European Currencies in Terms of Dollar

Installation of New French Government and Roosevelt's Message Cited as Factors.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 16.—Installation of a new French Government late last week, following the decisive rebuff in the French Senate to the radical financial proposals of Leon Blum, started a persistent advance of major European currencies in terms of the dollar.

The demand for foreign monies received another boost in mid-week when President Roosevelt's congressional message was given an inflationary interpretation in banking quarters, a view reported shared in European financial circles.

Enthusiastic endorsement by the French Parliament of Premier Daladier's demand for decree powers touched off what was described as the heaviest wave of buying of the franc thus far this year. The official French control found vigorous intervention necessary to avoid too sharp a rise in the unit.

Near the week-end the franc was quoted around 3.16 cents, or a net gain on the week of about .10 of a cent.

The discount on the 90-day forward franc narrowed to .05½ of a cent from around .09 of a cent at the end of last week.

Sterling bounced nearly 5 cents during the week with $5.00 quoted in the quiet holiday market.

Holland guilders, about ¼ of a cent higher, made a dent in heavy losses sustained earlier in the year. The belga and Swiss franc lagged a trifle, showing only minor gains on the week.

The inflow of foreign gold showed signs of tapering off. Total engaged abroad for the week was $11,583,000, compared with $12,900,000 the preceding week. Foreign exchange traders indicated current rates are well above the point at which gold shipments to this country are profitable.

European currencies maintained their forward move in terms of the dollar today as banking circles here and abroad studied implications of administration plans to expand the nation's credit base.

The pace was set by sterling with an advance of ¾ of a cent. French francs, after slipping a trifle in early trading, ended .00¼ of a cent higher. The Holland guilder advanced .06 of a cent, the belga .03 of a cent and the Swiss franc .04 of a cent.

NEW YORK, April 16.—Foreign exchange closing rates follow (Great Britain in dollars, others in cents): Great Britain demand, 5.00¾; cables, 5.00¾; 60-day bills, 5.00¼. France demand, 3.16½; cables, 3.16½. Italy demand, 5.26½; cables, 5.26½. By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 16.—The United States dollar lost 2 cents in terms of sterling today upon resumption of foreign exchange trading after the Good Friday holiday. Closing at 5.00¼ to the pound, the rate compared with Thursday's final quotation of 4.98¼.

French francs ended 158.16 to the pound, against 158.12 Thursday.

NONFERROUS METAL MARKETS ARE QUIET

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 16.—Pre-holiday quietness prevailed last week in domestic non-ferrous metal markets.

Foreign markets were relatively more active and steadier, especially in the case of copper. Electrolytic for export moved up to 10.17 cents a pound, c. i. f. European base ports, and was above the domestic base of 10 cents a pound for the first time since March 16. Primarily, the upturn abroad in the red metals was coupled with the improved European political situation, especially with relation to the Anglo-Italian accord and the diminishing tension in the internal French situation.

Zinc was steadier in quiet trading. The dual price of 4@4.15 cents a pound, East St. Louis, was eliminated late in the week when 4 cents was generally quoted. Prospects for expanding galvanizing operations seemed to influence sentiment to a large extent.

Lead was unchanged at 4.50-55 cents a pound, New York. A small and occasional demand developed, mainly for maturing needs.

Steel ingot output eased slightly to 32 per cent of national capacity. The automotive industry, despite a seasonal pick-up in retail sales, were apathetic buyers and railroad purchases continued slow.

Tin fluctuated irregularly over narrow limits, ending with spot net unchanged at 38¾. Buyers were reticent and producers uncertain as a result of the increased agitation from producers for substantial increases in quotas under the control plan.

Antimony was dull and unchanged at 15.75 cents a pound.

March Sugar Deliveries.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—The Agricultural Adjustment Administration reported today that refined sugar delivered to American markets in March totaled 397,990 short tons, raw value, compared with 1,156,477 short tons during the corresponding month last year.

Officials explained that deliveries in March last year were unusually high because of a desire of shippers and producers to market supplies ahead of enactment of the present sugar control law and its excise tax.

March deliveries by refiners were reported at 267,004 short tons, raw value; by beet factories 82,314, and by importers 48,672.

Stocks of sugar held by cane refiners on March 31 were reported at 711,721 short tons, raw value, compared with 381,454 short tons, raw value, on the same date in 1937.

LARGEST WINTER CROP SINCE 1931 DEPRESSES WHEAT

Influence More Than Offsets Reports From Southwest of Possible Cold Weather Damage.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 16.—Wheat prices declined ¼@⅝ cents today in a dull market dominated by the prospect of the largest winter wheat harvest since 1931.

This value-depressing crop outlook more than offset reports from the Southwest indicating damage to some fields as a result of last week's cold weather. Strength in securities and inflation gossip, which caused an opening upturn of as much as ¾ cent, later were ignored when profit-taking on the basis of Thursday's sharp advance appeared. Lagging export business during the holidays in foreign markets contributed to the persistent light selling that kept wheat fractionally lower after the first 10 minutes of trading. Grain belt rains the past two days also had a bearish effect.

Wheat closed ¼@⅝ down, compared with Thursday's finish, May 84¼@⅜, July 81¾@⅞, September 82⅜@½; corn ⅛ up to ⅜ off, May 60¼@⅜, July 61⅞@62, September 62¾@⅞; oats ¼@½ higher, May 29¾c; rye unchanged to ⅜ up, May 61; lard unchanged to 5 higher.

May and July wheat were lifted to 85⅛ and 82⅝, respectively, at the opening, but this bulge attracted profit-taking that caused a reaction of about a cent. From then on the market was dull, with prices showing little recovery power, although at times they rose to around the previous closing level.

Crop comment from the Southwest indicated damage from frost and freeze in the Texas Panhandle and parts of Oklahoma, but the most serious harm was believed to have been confined to this area.

Firmness in corn futures was attributed partly to indications of heavy shipments for export with the opening of lake navigation. The reaction in wheat, however, pulled corn prices down, although the latter were fractionally higher most of the session. Two-day accumulation of receipts was large.

Oats and rye also were firm, while buying of lard was attributed to inflation talk.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, April 16.—May wheat was offered at 83½c at the close. May corn was offered at 60¼c.

Winnipeg wheat opened ¼%¾c higher, and early was ⅛@¼c lower. The close was ½c higher to ⅛c lower.

Liverpool and Argentine markets were closed for Easter-tide holidays.

Local wheat receipts which were 33,000 bu, compared with 3000 a week ago and 22,500 a year ago include 20 cars local and 2 through. Corn receipts which were 216,000 bu compared with 147,000 a week ago and 148,500 a year ago included 140 cars local and 4 through. Oats receipts which were 18,000 bu, compared with 4000 a week ago and 56,000 a year ago included 8 cars local and 4 through.

St. Louis Cash Grain.

In the cash grain market Saturday, soft wheat was steady to 1c higher. There was a fairly good demand and the better wheat moved readily to mill and order buyers. Corn was ¼@½c higher. Demand was good, with mills, elevators and industries showing interest. Premiums were unchanged to ¼c under Thursday's levels. Oats were ¼c higher. Supply was somewhat larger, but demand was only fair, and a few cars were carried over. Mill and outside buyers showed the interest.

BRITISH CELANESE, LTD. OMITS HALF-YEAR PREF. DIVIDEND

LONDON, April 16.—British Celanese, Ltd., with paid-up capital amounting to an equivalent of $44,829,078 on the basis of current exchange rates, announced today the half-yearly dividend on the 7 per cent cumulative first preference shares, due on April 30, would not be paid.

Directors explained their decision as having been taken "owing to unfavorable trading conditions which have prevailed."

The full dividend was paid in 1936 and 1937. Previous arrears were cleaned up in May, 1936. The amount of the half-yearly dividend paid April 30, 1937, was the equivalent of $562,051 at today's rate.

COTTON RALLIES MORE THAN $2 PER BALE IN WEEK'S TRADE

Buying Promoted by Inflationary Implications Traders Find in New Spending Program.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 16.—Cotton rallied slightly more than $2 a bale during the past week on buying promoted by inflationary implications traders found in the Government program to improve business conditions and owing to better demand for cotton goods.

The recovery carried prices about $3 a bale above the recent low point. July sold up to 9.02, compared with an April 7 low of 8.44 and closed Friday at 8.96, compared with 8.57 a week ago. There was no session Saturday.

The rally was established on only moderate demand from scattering local and commission house sources. Contracts were scarce owing to continued limited Southern selling as a result of the holding movement. Bombay straddle reversing was also in smaller volume than recently, although the discount of that market under New York in the May positions was somewhat more than 1 cent a pound.

May liquidation in advance of first notice day on April 26 was readily absorbed by trade and spot house interests. Trade price-fixing against recent sales of cotton goods took additional contracts from the market.

Sales of cotton goods in the last few days of the preceding week and early this week were estimated as high as 60,000,000 yards, equal to about five week's production at present curtailed rates. Mill buying of spot cotton, however, remained small and manufacturers planned further reductions in mill operations.

The weather turned clear and somewhat warmer over the cotton belt following excessive rainfall and low temperatures which recently delayed preparations and retarded germination. Freezing weather in the northern half of Texas caused some damage but the bulk of the crop has not been seeded in that area, according to the Weather Bureau.

Domestic consumption in March of 511,000 bales compares with the record figure of 777,000 in March, 1937. For the eight months of the season thus far consumption totaled 4,024,000 bales, against 5,298,000 in the corresponding period of last year.

Unprecedented Gold Hoard And How It Was Started

the credit base, on the needs of business, on the amount of commercial lending by the commercial banks—in other words, active business draws money (currency) into circulation as it is needed, and expands the volume of "bank money" (checks) passing from hand to hand.

A close parallel may be observed in the use of tokens in payment of sales tax. The volume of Missouri sales tax mills in circulation is governed by the needs of business; the greater the volume of business the more mills required. Money also is a token representing negotiable interest in various firms of property. Trading increases the amount of currency needed for circulation.

What would be the results of the new monetary policy removing from circulation the gold which measured the basic value of all money could not be foreseen, for no such revolutionary step had ever been tried before. The purpose was to increase wages and prices of commodities and thereby make it easier for debtors to pay obligations outstanding in terms of dollars. Congress specifically provided that obligations to pay in gold dollars of a given weight and fineness were void.

Gold Mining Stimulated.

One of the first results was stimulation of gold mining all over the world. The increase in price to $35 an ounce instead of $20.67 made profitable mines more so, and caused the opening of new mines and resumption of operations hitherto unprofitable. This could not have been so if all wages and commodity prices throughout the world had risen in direct proportion to the increase in price of gold. But the control did not reach that far.

Producers carried their gold to the great new market, the Treasury of the United States, where for every ounce they received $35 in American money. Obviously they had confidence in the stability of United States currency. Always before, from the beginning of the Government, money of all kinds had been ultimately redeemable in gold except for the Civil War period when specie payments were suspended, and at that time greenback paper money fell off greatly in purchasing power as compared with gold.

The Government now possessed itself of all the monetary gold, forbade its coinage and circulation as a money medium, and to made it impossible for its citizens to reduce to possession claims on gold represented by currency or bank credits.

Keeping Public Confidence.

How, then, was public confidence maintained in the gold standard as a monetary base? By the Government's ever readiness to purchase gold, by the guarantee of strong gold reserves behind all currency and bank credit, by the Government's consent that its citizens might procure gold with which to pay international obligations, and by the further fact that the President had the power conferred on him by Act of Congress still further to devalue the gold dollars down to as little as 50 per cent of its former weight. There was ever present, therefore, and still is, the possibility of a further increase in the price of gold above the price of $35 an ounce.

Under the original purchase plan the gold really cost the Government nothing at all. This was because the gold certificates issued in payment were actually warehouse receipts, saying, in effect, that the Treasury would hold safely in its storehouses a dollar's worth of gold for every dollar issued in certificates.

Theoretically, this plan would make it possible for the Government to go on indefinitely piling up gold at no cost to itself until its miser's store encompassed all that existed in the world. Practically, such procedure would ultimately break down. It has worked, however, to the point of bringing into the Treasury's underground vaults at Fort Knox, Ky., and into the mints more than half of the world's stocks of monetary gold.

Dumping of Gold.

Government fiscal officials became concerned late in 1936 over the continued flow of the world's gold into its warehouses. Disturbed political conditions in Europe and elsewhere made the United States appear to be the safest place for hoarders to keep their funds, and so not only newly mined gold but other monetary gold continued to move into the United States. All of it went into the Treasury's stores and the certificates issued on it became backing for possible "credit expansion." It is said by banking authorities that one dollar in gold reserve may support as much as $8 to $10 in various forms of bank credit.

Business was expanding in 1936 but the potential credit base provided by the gold on hand was far broader than was required. Since the gold hoard was still growing administration officials became fearful that this instrument of their own creation might overwhelm them, that with so much gold to feed on a "runaway" inflationary boom surpassing anything the country had ever known might come. And the New Deal was pledged to prevent recurrence of any such boom as that of the late 1920s.

Sterilization Plan.

The board of governors of the Federal Reserve System and Government fiscal officers worked out the gold "sterilization" plan which was made effective at the close of 1936.

Understanding of the President's plan for "desterilization" of gold as a means of combatting the new depression calls for explanation of what was expected to be accomplished by the "sterilization" plan.

Since gold on hand was far more than enough for the lawful and reasonable reserves for all the nation's currency and bank credit, a means was sought to keep the additional gold which was pouring into the Treasury from still further augmenting that credit base.

How It Was Managed.

The plan adopted was this: Instead of issuing in payment for this new gold the usual gold certificates which in turn became the base on which Federal Reserve banks could issue currency or extend deposit credits, the Government would borrow funds from the banks with which to pay for the gold. This would use up an equivalent amount of bank credit instead of enlarging the credit base. The banks lending money to the Government for this purpose would take funds out of their deposit reserves and use them to purchase Government securities, increasing their investment accounts and reducing proportionately the unused margin available to them for making new loans.

This policy was followed until February of this year. Under it the Government spent approximately $1,200,000,000 for the purchase of gold. The Government borrowed the money and pays interest on it. The gold became the absolute property of the Government; it was not pledged as security for the loans, which were made on the general credit of the United States, and it is not required as reserve for any outstanding currency issues, so there are no claims against. This gold was set aside as "inactive."

Spenders Had Eye on Gold.

Since February the Treasury has been paying for gold by the issuance of gold certificates. The change was made because of the business recession, the administration hoping that a return to the practice of enlarging the credit base might stimulate business activity. Of course gold reserves at the time still were far in excess of requirements.

It is no secret that Government spenders for months have had their eyes on this unpledged gold—gold which the Government was free to spend. Since "pump priming"—new Government spending—is again to be tried as a means of curing the depression, the first step has been to "desterilize" this inactive gold.

In plain language this means the administration will spend the gold without repaying the loans that were made to buy it.

The Government can spend the gold and still have it by issuing gold certificates against it. The gold certificates will go into the Federal Reserve Board to the credit of the Government which then may draw its checks for the full amount. Almost like a get-rich-quick scheme, or getting something for nothing, except for the harsh fact that the original debt which the Government incurred to buy the gold will still stand against the taxpayers. A business man who borrows money to buy a stock of goods is expected to repay the loan when he sells the goods. If he does not he soon finds himself in trouble.

Purpose of Sterilization.

When the sterilization policy was adopted it was intended that in the future whenever the Government sold any of the "inactive gold the proceeds would be used to pay a corresponding amount of the loan. Most of the gold came in from foreign countries, in the nature of "deposits," since the cash proceeds were left here. It was assumed that some time those countries might wish to withdraw gold from the United States. In an explanation of the method, attributed to Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Chairman Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board, published when the sterilization plan was announced, it was said: "When foreigners withdraw their money from this country through gold exports, the Treasury will put back funds in the credit reservoir. It will accomplish the program (sterilization) through the sale and retirement of Treasury bills. These will tie up lendable funds when sold, and will release lendable funds when they are redeemed by the Treasury."

Obviously if the Treasury ties up this gold as reserve for issued gold certificates so that it may spend the proceeds, the gold will not be available for retirement of the loans that were made to buy it.

Effect on International Credit.

This leads to the question of international credit as affected by the Government's monetary policies.

Gold still remains the standard medium for the settlement of international balances. In an effort to maintain stability in the relation of the dollar to the currencies of other leading nations, the United States has agreements with Great Britain and France permitting the interchange of gold as needed in the bona fide commercial relations of the countries.

Although a United States citizen is not permitted by law to possess monetary gold for use in this country, it is possible for him to procure by Government permission gold to ship to a foreign country to pay an obligation. Stoppage of such transactions as this would disrupt all international trade.

As already noted, foreigners have been sending large sums to the United States, due, in part at least, to unsettled conditions in Europe. These funds are either on deposit in banks or invested in industry, in stocks or bonds, or in obligations of various governmental agencies.

Guesses on Total.

The exact amount of such investments is not known. A generally accepted estimate is around $8,000,000,000, but a responsible banking authority has given the opinion that this is far too low. There are no present indications that foreigners will withdraw any substantial part of this fund in the near future. In fact, the flow of investments is still into the United States and the state of affairs in Europe is thought to indicate a continuance of this flow.

Far-sighted financiers have speculated, however, on the possibility of a turn in the other direction, which, it is admitted, might come on very short notice. This might call for large amounts of gold to be shipped to foreign countries, which could not be denied except by defaulting on international obligations. It would be possible for large amounts of gold to be removed from the United States in a short time.

What Plan Might Mean.

If anything like a foreign run developed on the $8,000,000,000 or more the banks in the United States conceivably would have to reduce their outstanding credits in order to release gold from reserves to make it available for export. This would mean the calling of loans and otherwise contracting credit, threatening or closing banks. So long as the Government's "sterilized" gold was held out of the reserve base it was regarded by some bankers, at least, as a "cushion" against foreign demands; that is, it would have been immediately available for return to international circulation by being sold by the Treasury, without in any way affecting American banking reserves. Now that it is "desterilized," so the Government may spend it, it goes into the potential credit reserve.

Any impairment of the Government's internal credit also would affect the situation. The strong position of Government credit today is recognized as a safeguard. How long the Government may continue to incur annual deficits and to what point the national debt may be safely increased are uncertain questions.

Billion a Year for Interest.

The new spending proposed by the President almost certainly will increase the national debt to $40,000,000,000 or more by June of 1939, a little more than a year from now. It is now $37,500,000,000. When the debt reaches that point—and there is no certainty it will stop there—the annual interest bill that will have to be paid by the taxpayers will be no less than $1,000,000,000.

What the outcome of the gold policy and other monetary experiments will be no one knows. The effort completely to "manage" the nation's currency already has been found to require new controls from time to time. It has been found that when the controls work in one place the system "bulges" in another, for which other controls must, in turn, be devised. The process is still in the experimental stage.

SEA SCOUT LEADERS TO DRAW UP PROGRAM

Plans for this year's racing schedules and inter-ship regattas will be formulated at a conference of Sea Scout leaders next Saturday and Sunday at Creve Coeur Lake. More than 150 district commodores, skippers, mates and committeemen are expected to attend.

The program of week-end activities will include a demonstration of duty crew work by Commodore H. A. Brereton and his staff, including Kenneth Howe, John McM. Cook, C. F. Montague, G. B. Langenberg, E. J. Enriques and W. A. Sommers.

Early registration of scout troops throughout the metropolitan area indicates a record enrollment at this year's Boy Scout Camporee, at Tilles Park, May 20-22. Applications for camp sites have been received by the Council from every troop in Midland District.

A special feature of the Camporee will be an Indian village erected by Cub Scouts, who will also present a program of American Indian ceremonials and customs.

Large enrollments marked the opening last week of spring training courses in nature study, camping, and elements of Scout and Cub leadership. A three-week introductory course in scouting, under the direction of Dr. L. H. Renfro, will be offered volunteer leaders of the Council's inter-racial division, beginning May 9.

More than 800 Boy Scouts are expected to enroll this year in the two-week sessions at Camp Irondale, which will open June 19 and continue until Aug. 13. Each camp session will include a 10-day hike for senior scouts in the Ozark hills.

The camp, sponsored by the St. Louis Boy Scout Council, will be directed by S. C. Reaves, assisted by a staff of specialists in various phases of camp life and scout training. Guy L. Short will be assistant campmaster and Lee Lane, director of activities.

Fifteen Boy Scouts of Troop 195 will be advanced to second class rank by Scoutmaster George Weisenstein at a Court of Honor Friday night at Irving School.

A meeting of members of the Sunset Golf Club, Inc., organized recently to operate the golf course and swimming pool of the former Sunset Hill Country Club, will be held at 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon at the Missouri Athletic Association.

The meeting was called to determine whether the required 275 members have been obtained and to receive payment of dues. If the plan for operating the place is carried out, the club will open next Saturday and operate until Nov. 30. Dues for a family, including children under 21 years old, are $100, to which must be added $10 tax. William T. Mellow is president of the new corporation and Edwin Kalbfleish is secretary-treasurer.

The Sunset Hill Country Club disbanded last July and the golf course was operated to Nov. 1 by John Manion, club professional, as an individual.

the dining room. It's in the center of the building." I said, "What good does that do?" She laughed, "Not much," and went out.

I stood there looking out into the darkness. There were no sounds but the whistling, the flight of the shell and then a sharp or a dull crash. Suddenly there was a long heavy sound in the darkness—I think it was from a man—and through it a second sound. When the sound from the man ceased, the second sound came clear: a child was screaming, shrilly. In the hour and a half that Madrid was shelled that night there were many other sounds. Some of those sounds have no name in English.

Blind Woman Victim.

This was the damage done that night: 80 people had been killed, two hotels had been hit, one grocery store and some houses in the poorest section of the town were gone, the press office had three shells in it, and the gentleman who didn't like the statues had been there to see two of the statues get two shells.

In a kitchen back of my hotel, a blind woman was holding the bowl of soup that she came to get each night. She was killed eating the bowl of soup. Afterwards an Englishman said to me: "Not m sense to this kind of killing. T don't even try for military ob tives any more, or for men. W I was on the Franco side, a months ago, I heard the Ger technicians call this 'the little w They're practicing. They're tes testing the guns. SAVING CHILDREN
— From Their Pasts —
With the PAINT BRUSH

"Three Heads Like One."

By ROBERT SELL

NEW YORK.

THE boy suffered from a split personality. Some of the time he lived in a hazy half-world in which nothing was real. And sometimes he was as normal as any other 12-year-old. In the course of time his case came before the Board of Guardians and he was sent to the Hawthorne Cedar Knolls School at Hawthorne, New York, to join the "problem children" who meet sympathetic treatment there.

At Cedar Knolls the maladjusted, the underprivileged, the children whose emotional lives have been all but wrecked by the buffets of life find refuge and, often, the readjustment that permits them to take a normal place in society. This boy was one of the many cases that Harold Goldfinger, an artist teacher of the Art Teaching Division of the W P A, Federal Art Project, accepted in his class.

Most of the pupils were bitter because to their distorted mental processes creative effort was sissified. They tied ribbons in their hair, they shredded the drawing paper, they used the paints to scrawl obscene advice to the instructor, but Goldfinger was patient yet firm and finally the children made the first of the sketches that have drawn unusual comment in an exhibition at the New School for Social Research here.

Many of the paintings are fascinating in their implications such as the first work of a 12-year-old which he called "The Woman With the Electrifying Eyes. She Sees All. She Knows All Your Secrets." This was a bad dream straight out of the other world in which the boy dwelt. Up in one corner he marked the date "1941" which he once had read in a Ripley "Believe It Or Not" cartoon and which represented to him the year in which he would become an adult presumably free from the nightmares that tortured him.

A few months later he finished another painting that demonstrated the happy change treatment and the self-expression afforded by the painting had given him. This time he drew a "Self-Portrait Without Mirrors" in which he depicted himself in the guise of a policeman. In other words he had progressed from the phantasm of the half-world to the realities of everyday life.

Pupils of the Hawthorne School, some 140 in number, are drawn from children's courts through the intervention of the Jewish Board of Guardians, a child welfare organization. They range up to 17 years of age and have been involved in such minor misbehavior as truancy, running away from home, bad company, staying out late nights and petty pilfering. These delinquencies usually spring from disturbed and inadequate family backgrounds, due to lack of normal parental direction which is, in turn, traceable to unemployment, poverty, sickness, marital inconstancy and desertion—and other factors that break up homes and leave the children to their own devices.

How distasteful living has become to some of them can be gathered from another exhibit in the show drawn by a 15-year-old boy who hated adults viciously because of his unhappy childhood. He drew two forlorn, drooped figures seated at a bare table. The background is bleak and somber; indistinct and vague. "It gives," said one critic, "an inescapable impression of despair and hopelessness. But staring, holding your attention with almost magnetic force is the empty table, clod-like figures." And when the young artist had done he handed his painting to another pupil and spat:

"'Thanks for Nothing'—that's a strange title for a painting. Well, what have I got to be thankful for? Take it in to the director with my love."

"War and Peace." Harold Goldfinger, the instructor (at left), and the artist, a boy of 16, simply identified as "N. H."

He too responded to sympathy and the painting classes. There was another 15-year-old boy who, according to Goldfinger, demonstrated a remarkable atavistic strain. Back many generations his family had lived in the Orient. Although he had never been in the Far East nor had he ever seen any Oriental art all his pictures had the semblance of Japanese prints. Particularly a painting he titled: "This Is One of the Cows Working on the Farm."

But the most amazing paintings of all came from a 16-year-old boy identified only as "N. F." As Goldfinger tells the story N. F. was left motherless as a little boy, but his father, a rather elderly man, immediately remarried. The stepmother was unsympathetic and the boy was unable to adjust himself to the changed conditions in his household. Unhappy, he took to staying away from school and finally was picked up for truancy. At Hawthorne he made little progress until the painting classes began and then a hidden talent for art was revealed.

At once N. F. showed an ability to handle great masses that comes to most artists only after long travail. In the modern forms his work drew critical plaudits.

Especially impressive was the 80-foot mural "War and Peace" that he drew for the library at Hawthorne. One of his paintings in the present exhibition, "Three Heads Like One," won from Ribert Berderio, the artist, this comment:

"The artist N. F. shows in his work an intuitive knowledge of the workings of modern art that many 'great contemporary artists' ignore altogether."

Of this painting the boy himself said:

"I wanted the three heads to be like one; each a part of the other and connected with each other. I wanted the line to be most important. I am sure Picasso and all artists feel things like this. I felt this idea inside for a long time, but I didn't have the courage to try it. I was afraid of myself."

ANOTHER curious painting by the lad, "This Is How I Feel," he explained as follows:

"This is how I feel when I paint. The mallet at the head means that I want to express myself, but it is hard. The scissors around the throat, the hunger and pain of the artist when he paints. The tube of paint—that's what I think of and dream of—paints, always paints. The bleeding heart, I can't always say what I want to. The music—I'm happy because I can paint and learn more."

Another curious painting was completed by E. S., a 12-year-old who entered Hawthorne with violent racial prejudices. After treatment he drew "Portrait of a Sad Woman" which he annotated thus:

Attendance at the art classes is voluntary. At the start attendance was stimulated by holding the painting periods in the afternoon when presence in the studio meant escape from the regular chores about the grounds—trimming hedges and trees, cleaning up the grounds. Those who were sheer escapists, Goldfinger said, soon eliminated themselves and the class was built around a group of 20 or so boys who developed an interest in painting and took pleasure in discovering that they actually enjoyed it.

"The children were encouraged to paint anything their fancies prompted," Goldfinger said. "Some of the results are puzzling to anyone not familiar with the background and temperament of the painter. Generally speaking, they painted things that were in their minds . . . phantasies, bizarre abstractions. Their figures were formless and uniformly drab and dispirited.

"These children could not talk about their troubles, either because they lacked the facility and experience, or because they were self-conscious. Some of them probably considered it no part of a man to talk about their troubles; in other words to whine.

"YET everyone who has been in great trouble or mental distress knows the easement that comes from simply talking about your troubles to a sympathetic listener or even one who has an appearance of sympathy and understanding.

"The art classes gave these children the means of getting things off their chests—bitter memories, thoughts on forbidden topics, suppressed fury. Relieved of these oppressive feelings they began to give expression to healthier impressions. They found new interests, new ideas, new things to talk about and new conceptions to paint.

"The shy, withdrawn children began to mingle with their companions; the fact that they could paint their impressions gave them a new confidence. Even though the painting was not very good it pleased them. At the same time the braggadocio of the more unruly boys was toned down as they were properly deflated by the discovery that smaller boys with less experience in deviltry were better painters. The comparison and estimates of the work were the boys' own idea. We have never 'graded' a painting, publicly praised or criticised the work of the young painters. They are very good critics themselves, and the art class has been a happy leveler in the group, taking the leadership monopoly from those who talk out of the corner of their mouths and have bolder anecdotes of brushes with the cops."

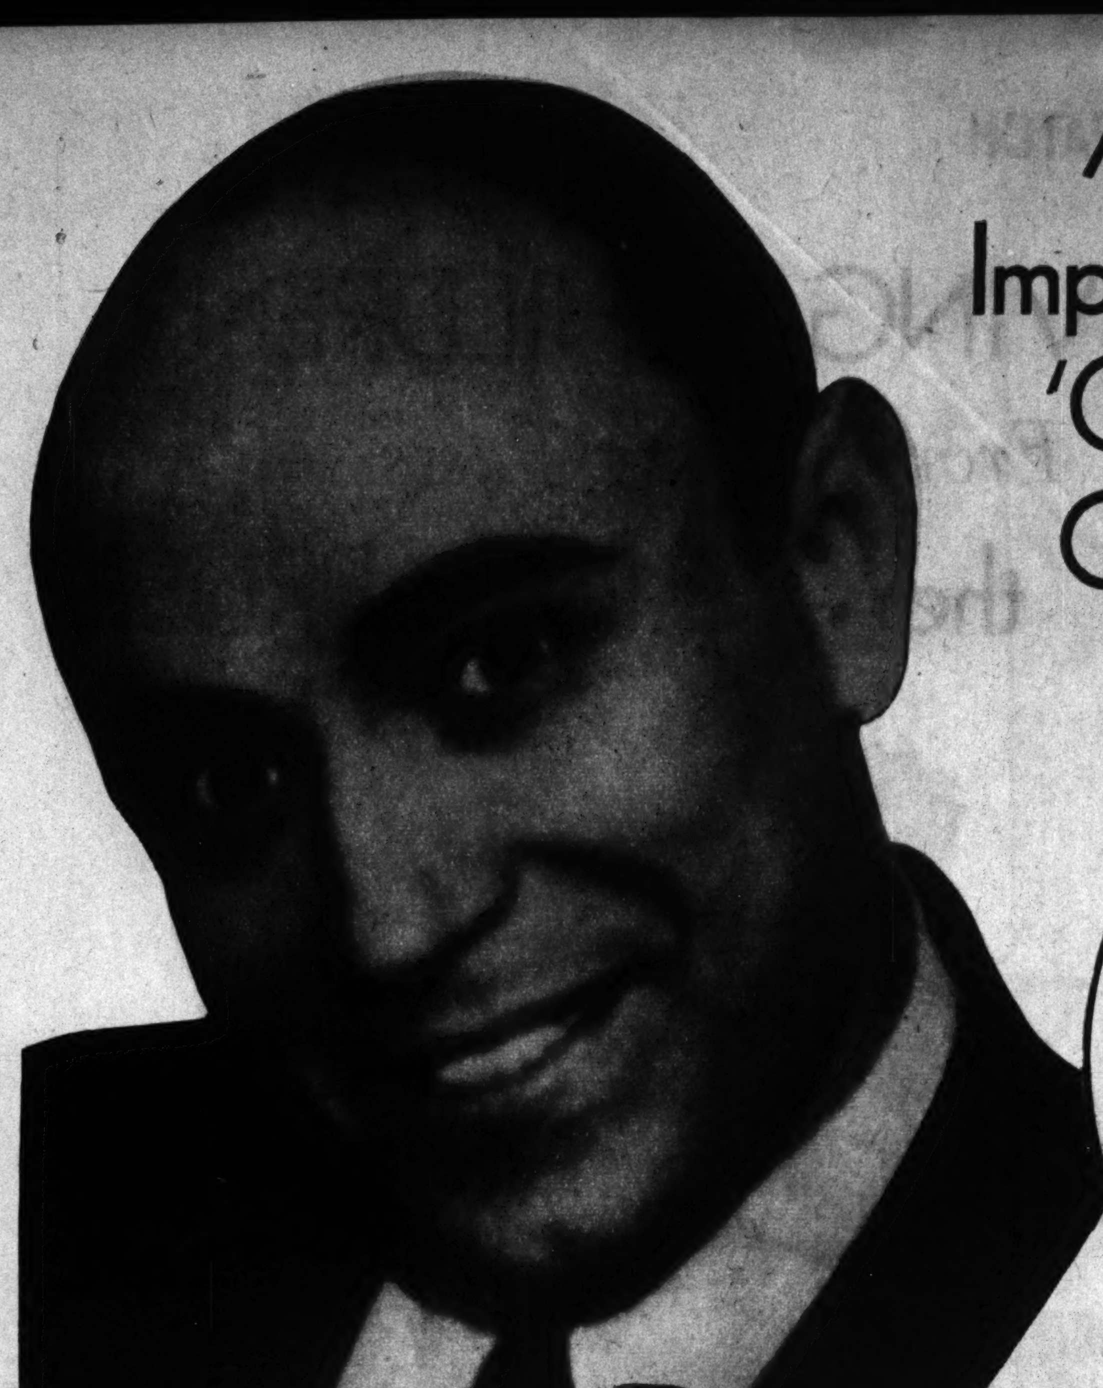
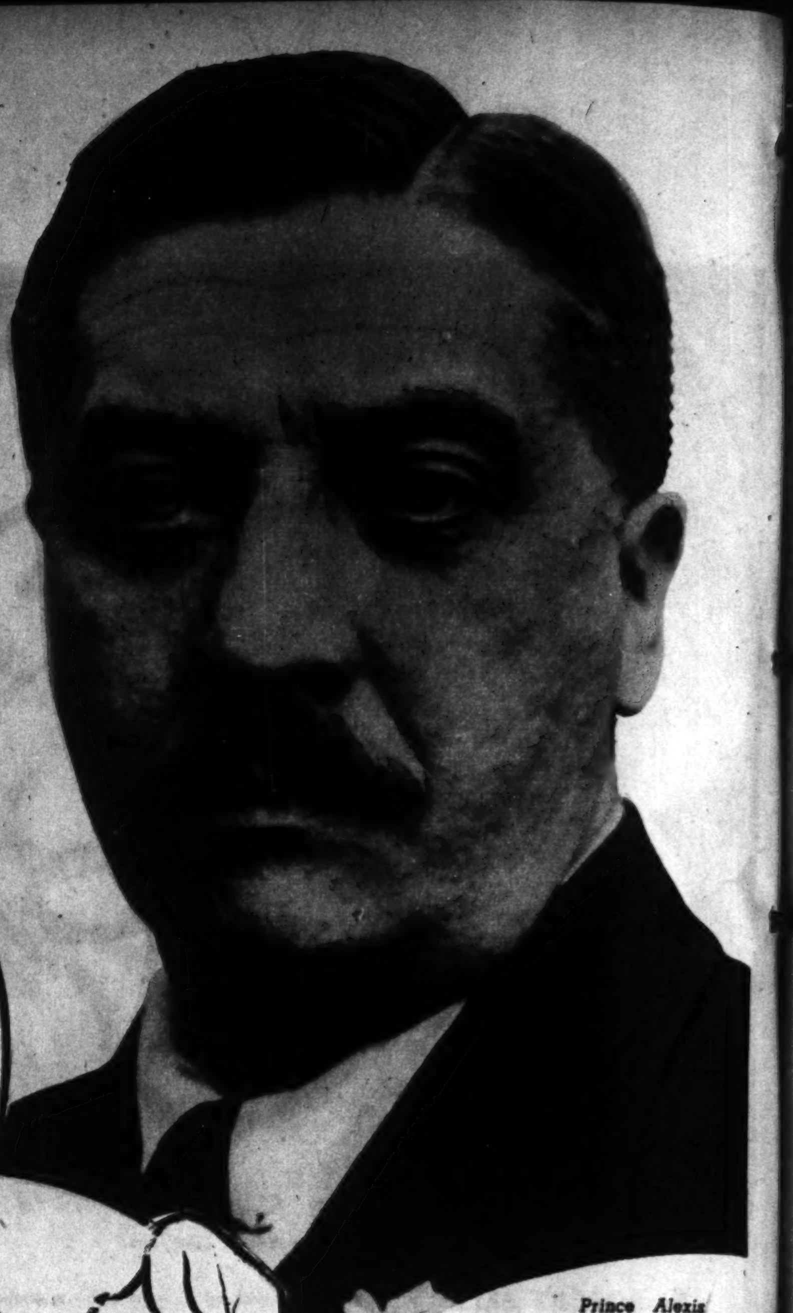
America's Imported Nobility 'Get in Each Other's Hair'



Baron Suriani.

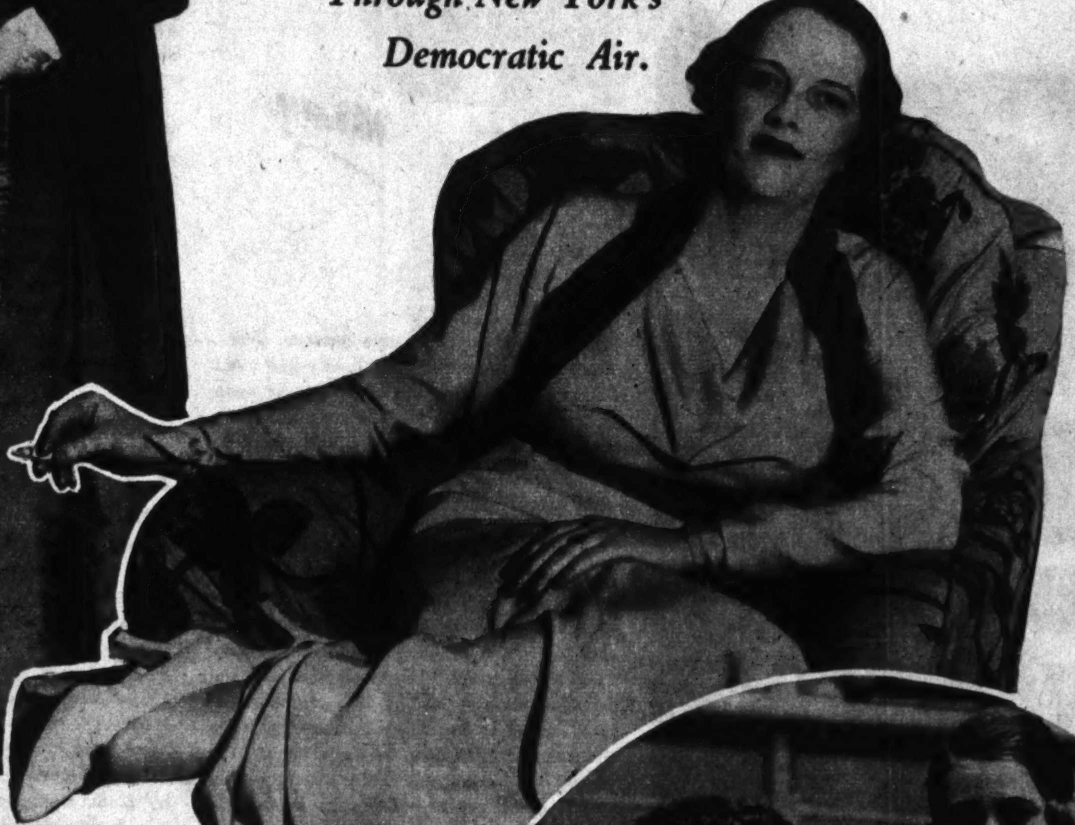


Prince Alexis Obolensky.

With the Result That the Noblemen's Club, Inc., and the Russian Nobility Assn. Have Become Bitter Rivals and Accusations Concerning the Validity of Titles Fly Through New York's Democratic Air.

By a Member of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

Grand Duchess Marie of Russia.



Baroness Carla Jenssen.

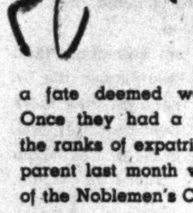
NEW YORK.



ATTENTION of a heedless American public has been focused recently on the plight of many titled foreigners in these democratic United States. Some have sought refuge here from death, others fled their native lands, it is suggested, to avoid a fate deemed worse than death—work. Once they had a united front. A rift in the ranks of expatriated nobility became apparent last month when dozens of members of the Noblemen's Club, Incorporated, stayed away in large numbers from a benefit ball given by the Russian Nobility Association.

That the two organizations would be incompatible was a foregone conclusion of those who knew the leaders of the two factions, Baron Giorgio Mario Suriani di Castelnuovo, erstwhile of Italy, known as a spendthrift until he ran out of money, and Prince Alexis Obolensky, who embarked for these rockbound shores shortly after the Soviet attitude toward members of the old Russian Court became distasteful. Prince Alexis holds the scepter of authority in the R. N. A. In the organization of N. C., Incorporated, is observed the fine Italian hand of Baron Suriani.

What with the recession following the depression and the heiress market dropping with a thud that made the 1929 stock market crash sound like the note of a musical gong, things were tough enough for tourists with titles without entering into direct competition with each other. Baron Suriani, broke but resourceful, organized the Noblemen's Club, admitting only members who possessed a title and $5 to prove it. The five was for expense of running down the title.

Whether ill feeling existed between the Baron and Prince Alexis before the N. C., Incorporated, came into being, will make little difference to posterity. But it is predictable that many a nursery, where play the daughters and sons of American heiresses who married foreign noblemen, will ring with the account of the feud which reached Kentucky proportions, sans firearms, when the Baron and Prince locked insults. Statements that they have exchanged black looks when they passed on the street have not been substantiated, but the rivalry is bitter.

Outsiders first became aware that the noblemen were not drinking beer out of the same pitcher when Baron Suriani, backed by his more militant supporters, declined to admit en banc the members of the Russian Nobility Association to N. C., Incorporated. R. N. A. had about 200 members, who if admitted singly, would pay or owe $5 a head for title exploration. The Baron insisted that his decision was not influenced by the bid for a wholesale rate.

"Five dollars!" he snorted disdainfully when someone suggested that there was the motive in his madness. "What is $5?" He contemplated his own words for a moment and continued less disdainfully:

"It is the policy of this organization to charge not only the admission fee, which is less than nothing, but dues of $5 a month which is little more than nothing. At $60 a year, it is a bargain. Mark you, if all 200 members of the Russian Nobility Association were admitted, the treasurer would only receive $12,000."

HAVING demonstrated that coin was of no interest, he expounded on the principle. He would fight until the ground was blue with blood, he intimated, to discredit for once and for all every bogus nobleman in this great America. "I myself, the Baron Giorgio Mario Suriani di Castelnuovo, will take great, great personal pleasure in revealing the truth about some of the so-called noblemen who have married American heiresses," he said.

"No longer, now, will the American heiress be left completely at the mercy of the deceptive duke, the counterfeit count, the baloney baron, who betrays her into marriage with but one thought—her money. Imagine, I ask you, her embarrassment when she learns that her title is not clear. Heaven knows how many American heiresses are available for deceivers to prey on, but I do know that there are not enough heiresses to go around among the 800 genuine titles in New York. Definitely, the faker must go. Viva American Heiress! Viva Nobility!"

Like A. F. of L. and C I O, in which men have banded together to defend their right to work under specific conditions, the R. N. A. and N. C. seemingly are cognizant that only by united effort of America's unseated noblemen can their right not to work under any conditions be preserved. The mantle of leadership in this anti-labor movement fell appropriately on the shoulders of the Baron Suriani, whose devotion to the cause has never been questioned.

As a matter of fact, in the battle of sneers, grimaces and dirty digs waged between respective backers of Prince and Baron, only one thrust seems to have come to rest at a point well beneath the Suriani di Castelnuovo hide. The ugly rumor was spread that the Baron once had worked as a waiter!

"Tell me who said that," the Baron hissed through clenched teeth, "and I will push it back in his throat."

Other statements, previously ignored by his pedigreed contemporaries, became the subject for small talk over the tea table when tea was available.

"Was it true that the Baron once had been booked as a professional dancer?"

"Was it a genuine newspaper advertisement in which his title was offered for sale to any woman with $100,000?"

"Was the Noblemen's Club founded by Baron Suriani with an eye to bettering the financial condition of Baron Suriani?"

"Did he once enter a marathon dancing contest in the hope of collecting some filthy lucre with his feet?"

"Is the Baron's own title under a cloud because his name in all its glory is not to be found in the Italian Burke's Peerage, that is, Elenco Ufficiale Della Nobilita Italiana?"

To this last doubt, Baron Suriani made indignant reply. He had failed to return to Rome and enroll under the Italian banner for the conquest of Ethiopia. He has never worn the black shirt of Fascism. Therefore, Mussolini deprived him of the blue book listing his blue blood deserved.

To slurring comments on his amateur standing, he gave more loquacious response. His defense, simply put, was: "Nobles, like ladies, must eat." Amplifying, he pointed out that an unofficial census would determine that in Manhattan alone there are more than 12,000 men and women who lay claim to various hereditary titles, despite the fact there are less than 1000 genuine titleholders. It is as if Mexican "diamonds" were accepted as genuine. The market is glutted, the price level falls, and many genuine noblemen are literally left out in the cold opening taxicab doors, while the more convincing faker drops a borrowed quarter in his outstretched hand.

If numbers alone were not enough, it has become painfully clear (Baron Suriani complained) that it is the spurious nobleman who is able to attract most publicity, hence horns in on the best cocktail parties, sits at the heaviest-laden banquet tables, occasionally sidles to the altar with the most desirable heiress. In buying a distinguished testimonial, the average advertiser is apt to mistake a well-kept van dyke or imperial for a genuine duke, passing over the latter because his beard has been plowed under. Baron Suriani asserted that true nobility is predicated on more than a goatee and a blank look through a monocle.

To prove his point, he recalled many of the frauds who posed as former lords and ladies of the court. Later it was disclosed that the only court with which they were familiar was the police court. The public has not yet forgotten the trimming it received from Harry Gerguson, the scamp from Hillsboro, Illinois, who posed in New York as "Prince Michael Romanoff." "Lord Desmond" was plain Ernest de Haven when charged with conspiracy to blackmail Alfred E. Smith Jr.

R. H. W. Albrextondare was "General Veriaguy" until exposed as a confidence man who quit impersonating physicians to claim that he used to be a soldier of the Czar. Baroness Carla Jenssen in 1932 related hair-raising adventures as a British agent, and later was deported. A Boston shoe clerk, whose courtly manners led women customers to ask if he were a nobleman in disguise, assumed the title of Count Paul Anatole Monte. A "mule skinner" named Louis Fisher became "Sir Charles Pellissier."

THE list is long, and reflection on the sums of money which have lined the imposters' pockets brings Suriani's blood to a boil. As soon as he has increased his membership, now fallen to less than 100, he intends to renew his drive to have the official "inspected" stamp placed on all his titled associates.

It is his plan to have each applicant to the Noblemen's Club carefully investigated and his title certified. But before he may carry a card which will permit him to enter into competition with his fellows, he must present two social references to establish that he has not degraded himself by earning a living in the ordinary channels open to the jobless—work with his hands, or in any "undignified" occupation.

The menial has lost his or her value to the N. C. or, the Baron insists, as potential groom, guest or endorser. The Noblemen's Club card will be the password to the upper crust and perhaps to a slice of buttered bread to boot, he hopes.

Meanwhile the Russian Nobility Association, led by dignified Prince Alexis, continues to provide at $1 a year a social saddle for unhorsed Russians of noble birth. Their dance, doubtlessly enthusiastically supported by some of their own members, was for the benefit of needy Russians in the United States. R. N. A. members must be eligible for listing in "The Nobility of the Russian Empire in America."

Officers include Alexander Bodisco, once chamberlain of the Russian Imperial Court. The highest Russian title in America is that of Grand Duchess Marie Romanoff, a cousin of the late Czar.

None of the officers of the Noblemen's Club were seen at the R. N. A. ball at the Ambassador Hotel although curious eyes searched corner after corner, palm after palm, for them. Naturally no one expected Baron Giorgio Mario Suriani di Castelnuovo.

There are those in America who speculate on what would have been the scene if the two rivals, Baron and Prince, each bleeding figuratively from the verbal rapier thrusts of the other, had met in the crowded, colorful ballroom. Would words have yielded to action? Would hot Italian blade clash on cold Russian steel? Would seconds have been dispatched for duelling pistols? "Who knows?" asks one group, with bated breath, and the other responds, "Who cares?"

Smashing Argentina's Maffia Kidnaping Gang

It Took the Police Six Years to Bring to Justice the Terrorists Who Murdered a Newspaper Reporter and the Son of One of the Nation's Richest Families.

Abel Ayersa.

Juan Vinti.

Graziella de Marino, "Flower of Death."

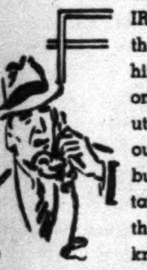
By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine



ROSARIO, Argentina. FIRST they called him on the telephone and told him to leave the city at once. Then, a few minutes after he stepped out of his taxi, they buried a stiletto in his taxi driver's back. Next, they sent a woman, known as the "Flower of Death," to tell him that he could live but 24 hours longer in Rosario. Finally, they sent a fake telephone call that lured him from a cafe in the heart of the city to the sidewalk where two men, firing from a slowly moving automobile, riddled him with revolver bullets.

That was why Silvio Alzogaray, star reporter on The Critic, of Buenos Aires, did not finish his series of stories on the kidnapings committed by Maffia gangsters in Santa Fe State during 1931 and the first nine months of 1932. No arrests followed his murder. But 15 days later, on October 23, 1932, there was another kidnaping that stirred all Argentina. The Critic's columns had heaped censure on the police after the murder of Alzogaray. Now the columns of the front page were devoted entirely to censuring the police, to the detailing of the latest kidnaping and to recalling the whole series of abductions in the past 18 months.

This latest kidnaping concerned Abel Ayerza, 20-year-old medical student and son of one of Argentina's 10 richest families. With three other young men he was driving in his automobile from Marcos Juarez, where they had attended a movie, to his mother's ranch, near Rosario. They had left the main highway and were on the narrow side road leading to the ranch when they found their way blocked by an automobile straddling the center of the road. Juan Bonetto, foreman of the Ayerza ranch, put on his brake and got out. A man in the other car jumped out, advanced and asked whether or not he was on the right road for Marcos Juarez.

Then, before Bonetto could answer, four men with rifles came out of the bushes that lined the road and surrounded the Ayerza car. After ordering the other three occupants out they asked which one was Ayerza. He stepped forward. The man who had asked for directions and who seemed to be in charge of the four armed men said that he must have proof. Ayerza took off his hat and showed him his initials.

"Wait a minute, I'm Santiago Hueyo, son of the Minister of Finance, Dr. Alberto Hueyo. I'd like to go with Abel."

The leader, after hesitating a moment, told the guards to let the youth accompany Abel. Both of them were bound and put in the back seat. Bonetto and the fourth, Alberto Malaver, a scion of one of the leading families in Buenos Aires, were hustled back into their machine, bound and gagged. One of the armed men laid his rifle down, drew a knife, punctured the four tires on the car, waved the knife in front of Bonetto and Malaver, and warned them to make no move for two hours.

Remarking that the families of the two abducted youths would hear from them in a short while, the leader of the kidnapers took the wheel of his automobile, edged the machine past the Ayerza car, and sped away over the rough road at a dangerous clip. Despite the warning and the stoutly knotted ropes, Bonetto and Malaver worked loose in an hour. A few minutes later and they were knocking at the door of a small farmhouse. The owner, who knew Bonetto, readily lent him his automobile. The foreman and Malaver, after risking their necks a dozen times in their wild ride to Marcos Juarez, got hold of Chief of Police Leonidas Romo and told him what had happened.

THERE wasn't much they could give in the way of descriptions of the kidnapers. All except the leader had their faces concealed with handkerchiefs. The leader had kept his hat pulled down and stood outside the glare of the headlights. One of the gunmen had appeared to be only 18 or 19 years old. All had spoken Spanish with a marked Italian accent.

By 1:30 o'clock that night news of the crime had been received in all the major cities of the nation. The police and the newspapers all agreed that the kidnaping was the work of the Maffia. The newspapers carried long articles reviewing the history of the Sicilian criminal society that had gained a foothold in Argentina in 1915 but had not become a major problem until 1930.

And just 10 hours after the kidnaping, young Santiago Hueyo rushed into the police station at Rosario. He was closeted for an hour with the highest officials of the department. Then, appearing with two detectives as bodyguards, he entered a restaurant for a hasty bite to eat, ignored reporters, and took an express train for Buenos Aires. His father met him at the station.

A short time later that afternoon, the elder Hueyo issued a terse statement to the reporters. Santiago had been released by the gang for the express purpose of expediting the ransom negotiations; he had promised the kidnapers that he would not betray them in any way; he had no information for police or reporters; Abel Ayerza's safety depended on Santiago keeping his word.

Santiago Hueyo then took the night express back to Rosario. On his arrival he at once set about trying to persuade police to give up their search for the gang until the ransom had been paid. But the police of Rosario and the states of Santa Fe and Cordoba went right on with the hunt. Suspects were arrested right and left, but to no avail.

The next day, while a reporter was talking in a hotel lobby with Bonetto, one of Abel Ayerza's brothers rushed up and excitedly told the foreman that contact had been established with the kidnapers and $30,000 ransom payment had been arranged. Then, finding out that he was speaking in the presence of a reporter, he said no more except to add that the numbers of the bills would not be taken down.

Two days later the Ayerza family received a second letter from the gang. In compliance with the instructions, Hernan Ayerza, Abel's oldest brother, and another member of the family, left the ranch on the morning of October 31 and drove into Rosario. At exactly 11 a. m., they stood at a designated corner—one of the busiest in the city—and waited. Each wore a big white flower in the coat lapel.

At five minutes after 11, a car stopped close to them and a man got out. He walked up to Hernan Ayerza and handed him a 50-cent piece. That was the sign. Hernan handed over a package containing $30,000 in paper money. The man walked leisurely back to the car, got in and drove away with his companion. Not a word had been spoken.

NEXT day, Miquel Viancarlos, chief of the Criminal Investigation Bureau, heard of a peculiar telegram that had been sent from Rosario to the village of Corral de Bustos, a village not far from Marcos Juarez. The telegram read: "Send pigs urgently." The recipient was Anselmo Dallera, a farmer. Viancarlos correctly interpreted the wire to mean that the prisoner was to be released and that Dallera was the man who was to release him or to pass the word along. A checkup showed that Dallera had no police record, but was known to have associated with persons suspected of having Maffia connections.

Dallera surrendered quietly and protested that he was innocent. But he could not explain the "urgent" need for the pigs in the metropolis of Rosario. Finally he admitted that he "suspected" one Juan Vinti and one Santos Gerardi might "know something" about the case. He even confessed that Vinti, long suspected of being connected with the Maffia, had been on his farm just the day before. A little more grilling and he added that Vinti might be found in a certain house at Marcos Juarez.

Federal, State and local police smashed into the house. They found only a youth of 18, Carlos Rampello, a brother of Antonio Rampello, owner of the house. The scared youth said that Vinta had left hurriedly only a half hour before the police arrived.

"Oh Senor! Madre de Dios, no!"

They took him to headquarters. Half an hour after his arrival there he admitted that he had been one of the five in the car. He named Vinti as the chief, and the aids as Gerardi, Jose Frenda, and Romeo Capuani. Where was Abel Ayerza? He did not know. After a while the police were satisfied that he really did not know.

Three months went by.

Then, on February 14, two police officers at the railroad station in San Nicholas, not far from Buenos Aires, had a stroke of luck. Carmelo Vinti, brother of the man they thought was leader of the kidnapers, stepped off a train right into their arms. The officers took Carmelo and a gentleman who had the misfortune to be talking with him, one Juan Latorre, to the Marcos Juarez police headquarters. Carmelo was grilled. A few hours later his death was announced. It seemed that he had heart disease.

Latorre, afraid that his heart might have some weakness that he was not aware of, began to talk when he realized the attitude of the police. He "understood" that Abel Ayerza was no longer alive. He was sure that if the police would just stop questioning him and arrest and question Salvador and Cayetano Rinaldi of Rosario they would learn everything they wanted to know. Latorre was greatly relieved when the police hastened out of his cell to seek the Rinaldi brothers.

The Rinaldi brothers were clapped in cells within a few hours. They were soon prevailed upon to admit that they had helped Juan Vinti plan the kidnaping. They became so talkative that they also named two women that they were sure the police would be most happy to question. The Rinaldi brothers were not very chivalrous.

The police came back with Salvador's mother-in-law, Maria Devalle de Marino, and Graziella Sabelli de Marino, the "Flower of Death." Maria had mailed the ransom letters and Graziella had sent the telegram about the pigs. They, in turn, revealed where Santos Gerardi could be found.

PIECING together all the bits of information extracted from the various prisoners, the police established that Juan Vinti had shot and killed Abel Ayerza on a farm near Corral de Bustos on the very day that the ransom had been paid. It seemed that Juan got the impression that the negotiations had fallen through. When he heard the next day that the ransom had been paid, he went to Rosario, met the two collectors, and took his share of the money—$5000.

The body of the kidnaping victim was found near the farm. It was sent back to Buenos Aires and given a public funeral. The owners of the farm, Vicente and Augustin Digrado, who had been seized on the farm, were hustled off to prison.

After the funeral, the search for Juan Vinti and the other unapprehended kidnapers in the case went on with renewed vigor. But it was not until May 13 that there was any development. On that day, Cesar Etcheverry, former Commissioner of Buenos Aires police, who had been hired by the Ayerza family to aid in the hunt, got word that "salt could be put on three birds' tails" at a certain house in a Rosario tenement district. The police hurried to the house, entered by the front and back doors and several windows, and emerged with the "birds" —Juan Vinti, Romeo Capuani and Jose Frenda.

A few hours after their capture and they had confessed to kidnaping the youth. They also said that two other members of their gang, Santiago Buey and Felipe Capuani, had shot down the reporter, Silvio Alzogaray. Buey was captured a few days later, but Felipe Capuani made good his escape.

The months dragged by and still there was no trial. The newspapers charged that the Maffia had influence somewhere and was trying to hold off the trial until the public had forgotten. And when the trial was held and the defendants were found guilty, the defense lawyers made use of loophole after loophole. There were 11 trials, appeals and retrials, and it was not until last December that the kidnapers were sentenced.

Life imprisonment was the sentence for Juan Vinti, Romeo Capuani, Jose Latorre, Vicente and Augustin Digrado, Salavador and Cayetano Rinaldi, and Santos Gerardi. Carlos Rampello drew 18 years, Maria Sabelli, 20, and Graziella, 12. Jose Frenda was not sentenced. He had been killed by Vinti in a quarrel in the prison yard while they were awaiting trial.

John Steinbeck was born at Salinas, California. He is 36 years old, six feet one, massive and kindly. He knocked about the country until 1929 when he tried his hand at writing. His novel, "Tortilla Flat," attracted wide attention in 1935, but "Of Mice and Men," last year, eclipsed it and, adapted as a play, has been hailed as one of the finest in years.

By JOHN STEINBECK

THE spring is rich and green in California this year. In the fields the wild grass is 10 inches high, and in the orchards and vineyards the grass is deep and nearly ready to be plowed under to enrich the soil. Already the flowers are starting to bloom. Very shortly one of the oil companies will be broadcasting the locations of the wild flower masses. It is a beautiful spring.

There has been no war in California, no plague, no bombing of open towns and roads, no shelling of cities. It is a beautiful year. And thousands of families are starving in California. In the county seats the coroners are filling in "malnutrition" in the spaces left for "cause of death." For some reason, a coroner shrinks from writing "starvation" when a thin child is dead in a tent.

For it's in the tents you see along the roads and in the shacks built from dump heap materials that the hunger is, and it isn't malnutrition. It is starvation. Malnutrition means you go without certain food essentials and take a long time to die, but starvation means no food at all. The green grass is spreading right into the tent doorways and the orange trees are loaded. In the cotton fields, a few wisps of the old crop cling to the black stems. But the people who picked the cotton, and cut the peaches and apricots, who scrawled all day in the rows of lettuce and beans are hungry. The men who harvested the crops of California, the women and girls who stood all day and half the night in the canneries, are starving.

It was so two years ago in Nipomo, it is so now, it will continue to be so until the rich produce of California can be grown and harvested on some other basis than that of stupidity and greed.

What is being done about it? The Federal Government is trying to feed and give direct relief, but it is difficult to do quickly for there are forms to fill out, questions to ask, for fear someone who isn't actually starving may get something. The state relief organizations are trying to send those who haven't been in the state for a year back to the states they came from. The Associated Farmers, which presumes to speak for the farms of California and which is made up of such earth-stained toilers as chain banks, public utilities, railroad companies and those huge corporations called land companies, this financial organization in the face of the crisis is conducting Americanism meetings and bawling about Reds and foreign agitators. It has been invariably true in the past that when such a close-knit financial group as the Associated Farmers becomes excited about our ancient liberties and foreign agitators, someone is about to lose something. A wage cut has invariably followed such a campaign of pure Americanism. And of course any resentment of such a wage cut is set down as the work of foreign agitators. Anyway that is the Associated Farmers' contribution to the hunger of the men and women who harvest their crops. The small farmers, who do not belong to the Associated Farmers, are helpless to do anything about it. The little storekeepers at cross roads and in small towns have carried the accounts of the working people until they are near to bankruptcy.

And there are 1000 families in Tulare County, and 2000 families in Kings, 1500 families in Kern and so on. The families average three persons, by the way. With the exception of a little pea picking, there isn't going to be any work for nearly three months.

THERE is sickness in the tents, pneumonia and measles, tuberculosis. Measles in a tent, with no way to protect the eyes, means a child with weakened eyes for life. And there are the various diseases attributable to hunger, rickets and the beginning of pellagra. The nurses in the counties, and there aren't one-tenth enough of them, are working their heads off, doing a magnificent job and they can only begin to do the work. The corps include nurses assigned by the Federal and State public health services, school nurses and county health nurses and a few nurses furnished by the Council of Women for Home Missions, a national church organization. I've seen them, red-eyed, weary from far too many hours, and seeming to make no impression in the illness about them.

It may be of interest to reiterate the reasons why these people are in the state and the reason they must go hungry. They are here because we need them. Before the white American migrants were here, it was the custom in California to import great numbers of Mexicans, Filipinos, Japanese, to keep them segregated, to herd them about like animals, and, if there were any complaints, to deport or to imprison the leaders. This system of labor was a dream of heaven to such employers as those who now fear foreign agitators so much.

But then the dust and the tractors began displacing the sharecroppers of Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas and Arkansas. Families who had lived for many years on the little "croppers' lands" were dispossessed because the land was in the hands of the banks and the finance companies and because these owners found that one man with a tractor could do the work of 10 sharecroppers' families. Faced with the question of starving or moving, these dispossessed families came West. To a certain extent they were actuated by advertisements and handbills distributed by labor contractors from California. It is to the advantage of the corporate farmer to have too much labor, for then wages can be cut. Then people who are hungry will fight each other for a job rather than the employer for a living wage.

It is possible to make money for food and gasoline for at least nine months of the year if you are quick on the getaway, if your wife and your children work in the fields. But then the dead three months strikes, and what can you do then? The migrant cannot save anything. It takes everything he can make to feed his family and buy gasoline to go to the next job. If you don't believe this, go out in the cotton fields next year. Work all day and see if you have made 35 cents. A good picker makes more, of course, but you can't.

The method for concentrating labor for one of the great crops is this. Handbills are distributed, advertisements are printed. You've seen them. Cotton pickers wanted in Bakersfield or Fresno or Imperial Valley. Then all the available migrants rush to the scene. They arrive with no money and little food. The reserve has been spent getting there. If wages happen to drop a little, they must take them anyway. The moment the crop is picked, the locals begin to try to get rid of the people who have harvested their crops. They want to run them out, move them on. The county hospitals are closed to them. They are not eligible to relief. You must be eligible to eat. That particular locality is through with them until another crop comes in.

It will be remembered that two years ago some so-called agitators were tarred and feathered. The population of migrants left the locality just as the hops were ripe. Then the howling of the locals was terrible to hear. They even tried to get the army and the C C C ordered to pick their crops.

About the fifteenth of January the dead time sets in. There is no work. First the gasoline gives out. And without gasoline a man cannot go to a job even if he could get one. Then the food goes. And then in the rains, with insufficient food, the children develop colds because the ground in the tents is wet. I talked to a man last week who lost two children in 10 days with pneumonia. His face was hard and fierce and he didn't talk much. I talked to a girl with a baby and offered her a cigarette. She took two puffs and vomited in the street. She was ashamed. She shouldn't have tried to smoke, she said for she hadn't eaten for two days. I heard a man whimpering that the baby was sucking, but nothing came out of the breast.

I HEARD a man explain very shyly that his little girl couldn't go to school because she was too weak to walk to school and besides the school lunches of the other children made her unhappy. I heard a man tell in a monotone how he couldn't get a doctor while his oldest boy died of pneumonia, but that doctor came right away after it was dead. It is easy to get a doctor to look at a corpse, not so easy to get one for a live person. It is easy to get a body buried. A truck comes right out and takes it away. The State is much more interested in how you die than in how you live. The man who was telling about it had just found that out. He didn't want to believe it.

Next year the hunger will come again and the year after that and so on until we come out of this coma and realize that our agriculture for all its great produce is a failure. If you buy a farm horse and only feed him when you work him, the horse will die. No one complains at the necessity of feeding the horse when he is not working. But we complain about feeding the men and women who work our lands. Is it possible that this state is so stupid, so vicious and so greedy that it cannot feed and clothe the men and women who help to make it the richest area in the world? Must the hunger become anger and the anger fury before anything will be done?

SKETCHES FROM LIFE

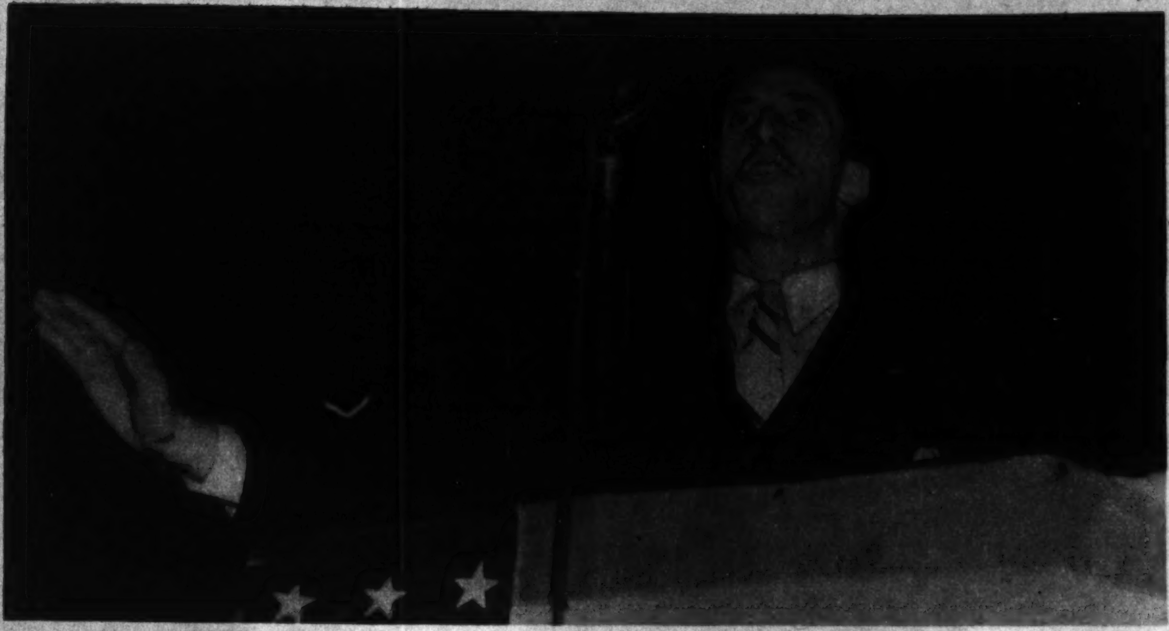
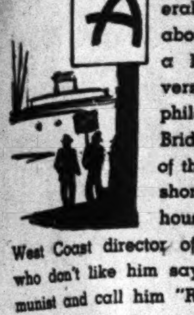
(HARRY BRIDGES
MADGE BLESSING)

The Rich Australian's Son Became the West Coast's Labor Leader



SAN FRANCISCO.



AN AGENCY of the Federal Government is about to take a hand in a long-standing controversy over the political philosophy of Harry Bridges, militant leader of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union and West Coast director of the CIO. People who don't like him say Bridges is a Communist and call him "Red Harry." Bridges himself says he is not a Communist. Immigration officials are scheduled to hold a hearing here on the twenty-fifth of this month to try to find out the truth—with deportation the fate of the labor leader if his enemies' viewpoint is sustained. The outcome of the hearing is being awaited with intense interest by union labor throughout the country, by employers of maritime workers, by legislators who shiver publicly over the "Red menace," and by—among many others—people who are intrigued by arresting personalities.

There is practically no trace in Bridges' appearance or manner of the wildness popularly associated with the revolutionary, the man who seeks the forcible overthrow of an established order. Bridges is a slim, loose-jointed man of 38, with sharp, bright eyes and a "wise" look to his sharp features. He is rather quiet, and cautious in his assertions. After six turbulent years with the water-front unions he has a great respect for facts and a great reliance on them. His tremendous effectiveness as a public speaker comes from his use of facts and logic, not from fiery eloquence. He wouldn't know what to do with an oratorical flourish, rarely raises his voice above a speaker's ordinary tone. His sharpest gesture is a quick stab with an index finger. If his diction and grammar were a little better, his speaking style would be almost professorial.

With only a meager education, he has gained a keen insight into the complex social principles that underlie modern life. Business men who have sat across the table from him in negotiations have commented on his grasp of economic realities and his shrewdness. He seems to know instinctively when a compromise will advance his cause and when he should stand firm. He is quick at repartee—can puncture a specious argument with a phrase.

His name is not "Harry." It is Alfred Renton Bridges. In the 12 years that he labored as a longshoreman on the San Francisco docks before the 1934 general strike thrust him into national prominence, his fellow workers nicknamed him "Limo Harry" because of his Australian birth. That became shortened to simple Harry.

Like many labor leaders he is an apostate from family tradition. His father was a rich and conservative real estate agent in Melbourne, Australia. There is a contradiction also in his racial strain. His mother was of Irish descent and his father English.

His early grounding in labor was gained from two uncles, one of whom served as a Labor member of the Australian Legislature. Quitting school when he was 16 years old, young Bridges went to work for his father. But he soon had enough of extracting rents from indigent tenants and gave it up.

He wanted to go to sea but his father opposed it. The elder Bridges decided the quickest way to get the notion out of his son's head was to let him try it. So he arranged with a Norwegian skipper for his son to ship out to Tasmania and back.

THE vessel was blown 100 miles off course by a storm and Bridges was swept overboard. But when he was fished out he was more enthusiastic for the sea than ever.

He became a defender of the workers early. In 1920 after a voyage in which Bridges led the sailors in protesting against arbitrary discipline, he "jumped ship" at San Francisco.

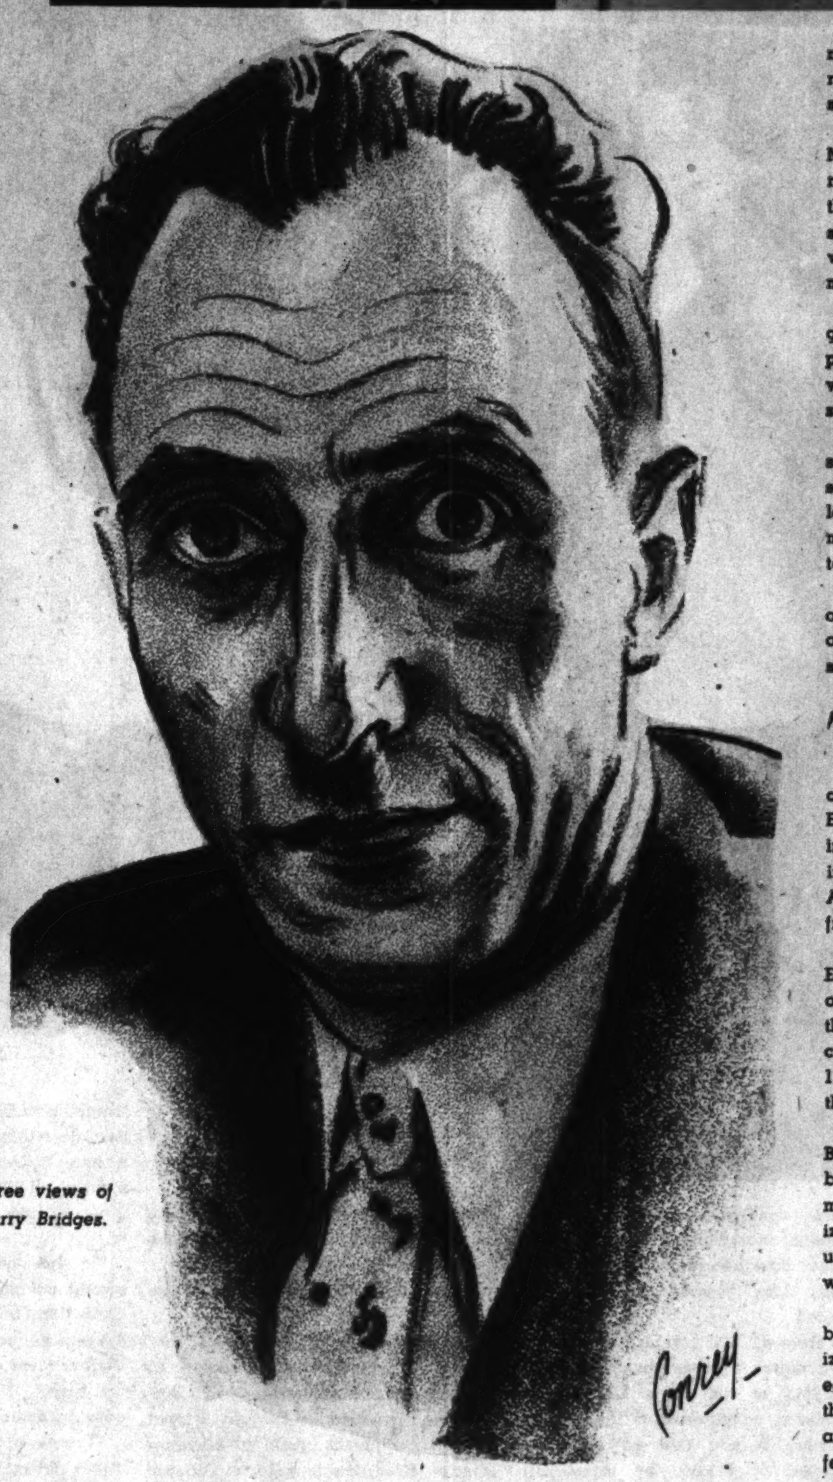
This is the basis of the illegal entry charge upon which it was sought to deport him in 1934. But he was able to show that he had paid a head tax on his entry into this country and was permitted to remain.

Now a second "deport Bridges" cry roars along the West Coast, and this time he must defend himself against the charge of being a Communist. He declares there is no more to this than there was to the previous charge.

Last winter when the charge was being echoed before the United States Senate Committee on Commerce and Labor he telegraphed several times for an opportunity to defend himself to the committee and even journeyed to Washington for that purpose. But a hearing was refused him.

FOR two years after "jumping ship" Bridges sailed in the coastwise trade and then settled down as a San Francisco longshoreman.

His quick wit and labor sympathies made him popular and he became a leader of a discontented faction that wanted to break away from the company union, called the Blue Book Union, and form a standard union. The men resented paying dues to the Blue Book Union. They complained that foremen discriminated when hiring in favor of those who paid them for jobs and they wanted to abolish the "shake-up." This was the line of longshoremen that formed every day on the docks waiting to be hired, often standing for hours in wind and fog.



Three views of Harry Bridges.

Even in those days Bridges preached "organization" . . . "rank and file control" . . . "union demorcacy" . . . "labor unity." These became the shibboleths of his organization of the water-front workers and his amalgamation of the various maritime crafts into a cohesive federation.

There were complaints about Bridges' "radicalism" even then. But he was an expert winchdriver and kept his place on the "star gang" made up of the best longshoremen available.

Two abortive attempts preceded the successful organization of the longshoremen in 1933. The thing that put it over was publication of a mimeographed bulletin called "The Waterfront Worker" by Bridges and a little group of associates. It was an effective bit of pamphleteering.

The Bridges group early in 1934 got control of the district convention of the International Longshoremen's Association, an A. F. of L. union, with which the San Francisco union had affiliated. Against the advice of conservative labor leaders they voted immediate demands for higher wages, union recognition and a coastwise agreement with ship owners.

Refusal of the demands led to a strike in May, 1934, and it rapidly spread to other maritime crafts, which had grievances of their own. Working for unity among the striking crafts, Bridges secured a compact whereby they agreed that any settlement must include all unions involved.

Out of this troubled situation arose the general strike. Labor charges that it was precipitated by the exhortations to violence which came from employing groups. Two strikers were killed by police.

Labor's demonstration of resentment was a spectacle this city will never forget. Thousands of men and women marched with silent and bitter faces as the bodies of the two men they regarded as marytrs were borne to their graves.

Federal intervention and a combination of other factors caused the strikers to accept arbitration, and labor's demands were met substantially in the subsequent award.

THIS is the background against which Bridges came to power. His preaching of unity resulted in the formation of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific. Even though some of the constituent unions, including the longshoremen's, have gone into the CIO while others remain in the A. F. of L., the federation preserves a united front in the marine industry.

The idea spread to the Gulf Ports and the East Coast where marine workers broke away from their old leadership and formed the National Maritime Federation. The Pacific Coast unions called another strike in 1936 to renew their contracts and consolidate their power.

With relative peace in the maritime trades, Bridges after the 1934 strike began to help build unions in other industries. A dozen or more such unions were formed until organization had been extended into such hitherto unorganizable fields as retail clerks and wholesale house workers.

Today San Francisco has the reputation of being the most solidly and militantly organized town in the country. Bridges has wielded the single most effective hand in rearing that structure. He preaches collaboration among the workers of different industries as fervently as he does among the diverse crafts of his own industry.

Almost ceaseless attacks have been made on him. There are the "Red" charges, and there are stories that he has accumulated great wealth. These stories are hard to believe when one sees the modest scale on which he lives.

For a long time his saalry from the waterfront unions was $40 a week. Not until he became district president of the I. L. A. did it advance to $75.

The workers seem to have unshakable confidence in him. When international officers of the I. L. A. became dissatisfied with his contumacy and cut off his $75 salary the workers made it up.

There have been tales of plots to assassinate him, but he goes about his business apparently fearless. He is about the hardest man in San Francisco to see but only because he is so busy.

ONCE secretive with newspaper men, he has learned the difficult knack of meeting them in hurly-burly contacts. Labor reporters have found him a reliable source. He is an invincible realist and his conversation is illuminated with revealing flashes of humor.

He remains as much a believer in rank-and-file unionism as when he voiced the woes of longshoremen over mugs of beer in the Embarcadero saloons. Friends say the fear of isolating himself from the rank-and-file is one reason why he continues to live so simply, almost impecuniously, when his salary would now permit greater indulgence. He conceives a labor leader's task to be that of keeping in closest contact with his following so that his policies and attitudes will reflect their desires. He thinks labor policies should be decided in free and open membership debate, and not in conspiratorial whispering of "leaders."

His vision encompasses the co-operation of workers of all industries not only in economic matters but in political action as well. He is a sturdy advocate of a broad party made up of workers, farmers, small business men and professional people.

Do all these principles, policies and actions make a man a Communist? Harry Bridges emphatically answers, "No!"

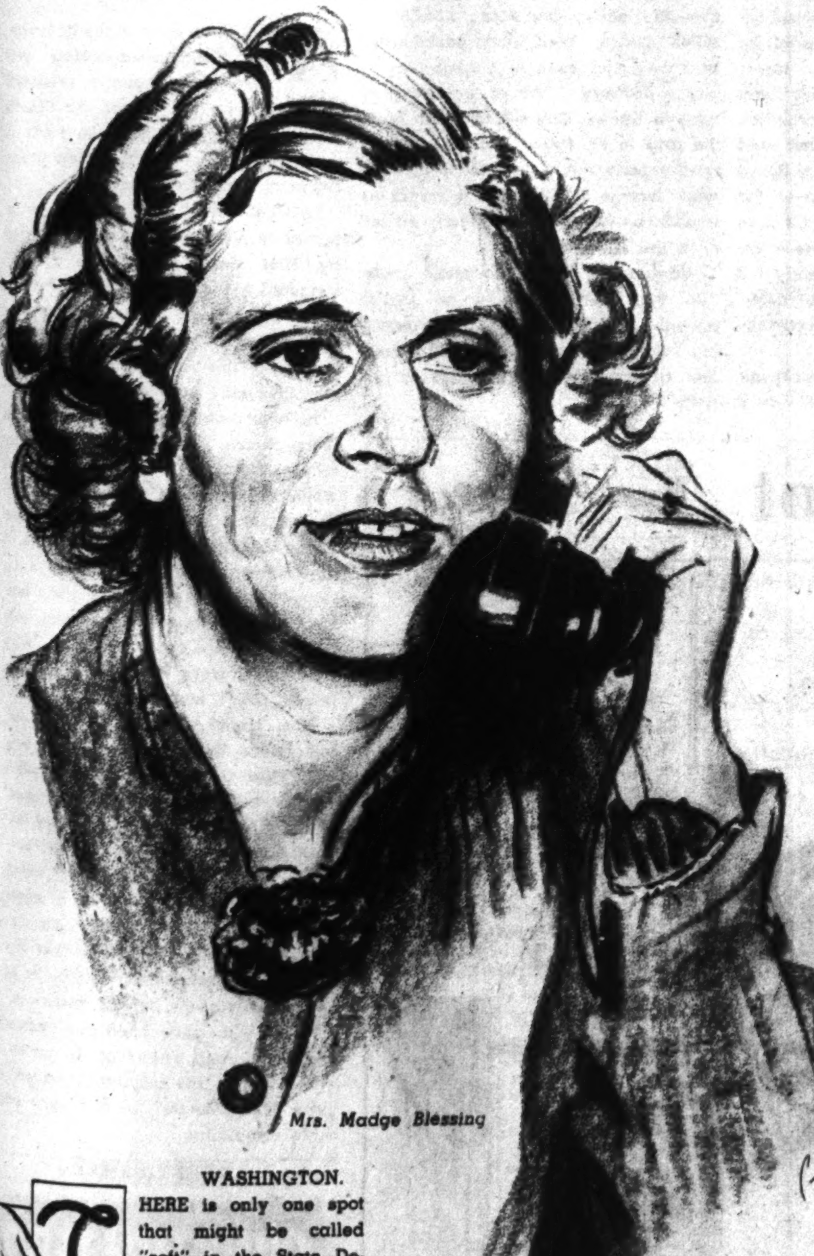
Looks for the Lost All Over the World



Mrs. Madge Blessing

WASHINGTON.

THERE is only one spot that might be called "soft" in the State Department. It is a little office almost lost in the maze of stern and dignified machinery set up for the handling of the United States' relations with foreign nations. Just one little cell in the huge State Department Building, its existence is unknown to most people. Yet it is the only international "missing person" bureau in the United States.

Mrs. Madge Blessing, who conducts this unusual office, admits it might be called the "wailing wall" of the State Department. For never a day passes without inquiries from American citizens distraught and helpless because they have not heard from Jim or John or Helen abroad and don't know how to establish contact with them. The appeals for help come from the rich and the poor. Sometimes it's a Park avenue wife whose husband went vacationing on the Riviera and sometimes it's a Pennsylvania coal miner whose son volunteered to fight in Spain.

Those who believe that all Government departments are run on a basis of red tape would be astonished at the personal interest Mrs. Blessing puts into her work. She is far from insensible to the stories of Americans abroad who are destitute and badly in need of aid, and she frequently can be found in her office at all hours of the night and even on Sundays and holidays, working on some urgent case. None is closed until the missing globe-trotter has been found or is positively identified as having died.

Her card files contain thousands of cases, some more than a dozen years old. Mrs. Blessing has figured in some well-known "missing person" cases, such as that of Paul Redfern, aviator who attempted to fly from Georgia to Brazil and disappeared. Every time some explorer of the Brazilian jungles emerges with a rumor that Redfern is still alive, and there have been dozens of these rumors, Mrs. Blessing is deluged with inquiries and adds the new information to her card on the missing flyer.

The normal run of Mrs. Blessing's work concerns persons who are missing, making contact between destitute Americans abroad and their families here, and arranging aid for Americans who have become sick in foreign lands.

No expense is spared when an American citizen is ill or lost. Cables, telephone and radio are employed when needed. Mrs. Blessing works fast to relieve anxiety here. For instance, the children of some Americans, who have been traveling abroad with an aunt or guardian, will "disappear." The frantic parents get in touch with Mrs. Blessing and she cables the consul in the area where the children are traveling. The consul investigates. If he finds the children, he makes arrangements to ship them home, even going so far as to find some person to take charge of them on the voyage if they do not have a guardian.

During the past year or so Mrs. Blessing has been doing a land office business as a result of the general tension in Europe and the wars in Spain and China. War presents Mrs. Blessing with her most difficult problems. Hundreds of mothers whose sons have disappeared believe they went to Spain, but are not sure.

BOYS volunteer under assumed names and unless they wrote to relatives it is almost impossible to find them. Mrs. Blessing explains again and again to frantic parents that war upsets the normal communication system. Sometimes letters are lost in a bombardment, sometimes they take weeks to get from the front lines to America and sometimes the son just forgot to write.

The "missing persons in Spain" file is her major one at the moment. But the "China" file is also giving her plenty of work. Names of both missionaries and business men with interests in that war-torn country are included in her records. It is much more difficult to get in touch with persons in China than in any other place, even Spain. The cities are scattered and communications are bad. Sometimes even the use of radio is resorted to in beseeching Americans to communicate with those at home.

Mrs. Blessing gets many requests for finding people which she must necessarily turn down because they are out of her province. Appeals to find missing seamen, who seem to think nothing of getting lost for six months or a year, she turns over to the Department of Commerce. Sailors of the United States Navy are, of course, handled by the Navy Department. Requests to find persons who are lost "somewhere in the United States" she has to decline, because, with thousands and thousands of persons reported missing in this country each year, she would need an immense staff. She does, however, work with the Red Cross. She gives them the names of persons in need of medical aid and they give her appeals to find missing wanderers.

Many strange requests come over Mrs. Blessing's desk. Some of them are of a more or less humorous nature and serve to relieve the strain and tension which is more usual to her job. For instance, recently a couple of Americans, who had left Barcelona when Franco's bombing raids began, became solicitous over two horses they had left behind and appealed to Mrs. Blessing to find them. The bureau treated them as "persons" and the usual channels were gone through. The consul at Barcelona finally located the horses, but discovered that a big feed bill was owed. This information was cabled back to the States and the money forwarded to Spain to insure the horses' continued munching of hay.

Mrs. Blessing has been with the State Department for some 20 years and is well versed in the technique of international relations. It is two years since she was made the head of her office. She likes her work, she says, because of the human element in it and because of the satisfaction she gets from being able to help those in distress.

'Deacon' Buckminster AGAIN BEATS the LAW

The Silver-haired, Dignified Confidence Man Who, With 'Yellow Kid' Weil, Has Been Responsible for Some of the Most Amazing Jobs in Criminal History, Wins Over a Chicago Jury.

Fred "the Deacon" Buckminster.

CHICAGO.

AS THE prosecutor told how Miss Agnes Harter had been neatly swindled of $32,000, the defendant, old Fred Buckminster, turned his blue eyes on the jury. He shifted his crippled body with difficulty to another position in his chair. He stroked his long silver locks. The jurymen stole glances at him and noticed that his wrinkled face bespoke utter defeat.

He had not testified nor did he have an alibi. In fact he didn't even have his own lawyer. Only the Public Defender, Benjamin Bachrach, represented him. Bachrach spoke briefly to the jury, mentioning the defendant's age, 74 years. Buckminster looked like a tired old man.

The jury filed slowly out of the courtroom. Two hours and 20 minutes later they returned. The verdict was "Not guilty."

Judge Francis Allegretti gasped, stood up and leaned over the bench, glaring at the astonished jury.

"You have turned loose one of the slickest con men in the world," he declared bitterly. "I don't know what brought about your verdict. You won't be taken on any other jury here during the remainder of your term. You would be useless around here. You are discharged from further service. Go down and get your checks."

In denouncing them for their verdict, Judge Allegretti indicated he had been far more impressed with "The Deacon's" police record than with his lameness, his long, silver hair, his sad eyes and his attitude of complete defeat. For Buckminster is one of the smoothest confidence men still separating the gullible from their money. And, as an additional proof of his position among confidence men, he is the chief lieutenant of "Yellow Kid" Joseph Weil, if possible even better known to the police, and sought now on the same swindle charge on which Buckminster was freed.

Together the suave, cultured pair went after wealthy, hard-headed business men for the most part. They had a dozen escapes from prosecution. Shortly after the war they pulled a series of fake steel stock deals on a score of Western bankers which, police said, netted them more than $1,000,000.

The imaginative Weil, a clever actor, always did the brainwork. His lieutenant, a man who looked the soul of saintly dignity, shared with him a contempt for heavy-handed methods. Buckminster, like his chief, had finesse and elegance. He made an ideal "steer."

Released in 1922 from the Illinois State prison at Joliet on paroles granted by Governor Len Small (they were serving short terms for operating a confidence game), Buckminster and Weil announced to the world that they had reformed. "The Deacon" declared he was going to work as a laundry checker. "The Yellow Kid" insisted he was going to be a real estate salesman. Both these declarations drew a horse-laugh from police, who knew the pair would never be content with prosaic jobs and piddling incomes. Buckminster left the prison in an angry mood, declaring he was through with Weil forever because he had been double-crossed. That, too, drew cynical guffaws.

Only a year later, Buckminster was interrupted while sunning himself at Miami, Florida, by police officers. It seemed that he and his old partner had been indicted in Chicago charged with swindling a wealthy Detroit coal merchant, George W. Malcomson, of $30,000 in a copper transaction. They had a peculiar genius for copper deals, specializing in them a considerable part of the time. But nothing came of the indictment—as usual.

For a few years, Weil's name appeared alone in the news in connection with swindles. He was helped by various confederates but his trusted lieutenant was either keeping carefully in the background or else working alone. Soon, however, the team was reunited.

Another view of Buckminster.

In August, 1930, Joseph Kindelberger, a Kalamazoo business man and former president of the city's Chamber of Commerce, complained to the Chicago Detective Bureau that he had been swindled of $15,000 by three men. Shown a group of Bertillon pictures of known swindlers, Kindelberger had no trouble picking out an excellent likeness of Weil. A man wearing a Van Dyke beard, silk hat, spats and Malacca stick, Weil was easily recognizable. He was the leader of the three who had swindled him, Kindelberger said. Another consultation with the picture file and he picked out Buckminster, slightly less arresting in appearance.

KINDELBERGER told a familiar story. After six weeks of negotiations on a business deal, Weil and his cohorts suggested it be completed in Chicago. In an anteroom of the suite occupied by Weil and "The Deacon," Kindelberger encountered two taciturn Chinese. Weil, touched with compassion, described them as homesick men willing to sacrifice their Montana copper mine for just enough money to carry them back across the Pacific to their beloved China. Kindelberger, much impressed, bought $15,000 worth of stock in Weil's firm, which was going to buy the mine for a song.

The police were amazed three weeks later when they received a letter from Kindelberger asking them to drop the swindle charges against Weil, Buckminster and associates. "I only loaned the $15,000 to the gentlemen," Kindelberger wrote. "I am convinced I was wrong in swearing out warrants for Weil and his two friends. Their attorney has returned part of my money already and has given me notes for the balance. I agreed to stop this prosecution."

The Chicago Better Business Bureau, incensed, wrote a protesting letter to Kindelberger. "Whatever sum Weil restores to you," read the letter, "will be money plucked by the notorious operator from some other man's pocket. Can you take this kind of money without a pang of conscience?"

But Kindelberger did not appear when the hearing opened against Buckminster and Weil five months later. Weil delivered a long lecture to the Court on the inequalities of justice and suggested that bond houses instead of respectable business men like himself be investigated by the authorities. Buckminster, always the silent partner, listened and nodded occasional agreement.

Just six days before they were freed of the swindling charge brought by Kindelberger, Buckminster and Weil had been arrested on charges of operating a confidence game at Rockford, Illinois. Harry Maule, a Racine (Wisconsin) contractor, said they had fleeced him of $6500. But Maule later failed to identify the pair at a "show up" in the Rockford County jail and once again they were on their way.

In April, 1931, Buckminster and Weil again were back in the news. They were arrested for investigation at a Chicago restaurant, where Weil was addressing 30 guests who paid $1.50 a plate to hear him talk about crime. While the pair occupied adjoining cells at the Detective Bureau, Weil dictated a letter to Buckminster announcing his "abdication" as king of confidence men. "Realizing that the twilight of kings has come, I abdicate," he announced. Police were not inclined to take him seriously.

Their doubtful attitude toward the abdication of Weil and his cohorts as chiefs of the con men was vindicated in short order. In December, 1932, Weil and Buckminster were arrested in St. Louis. A suitcase containing more than $20,000 in bonds, which they had left behind in a Kansas City garage and then asked to be forwarded to them in St. Louis, led to their temporary undoing.

Buckminster was registered as Fred E. Hale and Weil as J. P. Davis when detectives dropped into their hotel room and invited them to come along. They acquiesced pleasantly, appeared more agreeably surprised when at headquarters they were recognized forthwith as men of prominence.

All in all, they were as prosperous looking and dignified a pair as ever affixed their fingerprints to a St. Louis police identification sheet. Buckminster, six feet tall and white-haired, was more reserved than his chief. He sat against a wall, nodding now and then as Weil turned to him for confirmation of his narratives of their long careers, but for the most part Buckminster preserved a dignified silence. The carefully dressed "Deacon" wore a brown Homburg hat, set jauntily above a red-brown tweed suit, blue shirt tastefully set off with a dark red tie, spats and black shoes.

After Weil had discoursed at great length, Buckminster took up the narrative, describing himself to reporters as a man thrown constantly by circumstances into the toils of the law. "A pawn of fate, like all of us," Weil put in.

"It was the unfortunate fact that I owned an imported Fiat automobile in 1910 that brought me into trouble," Buckminster said. "I was hired to drive the car for a group of men whom I did not know. I did not take the trouble even to disguise my license plates.

"I was arrested and was thunderstruck when I learned that they had swindled a farmer out of $3000. At that time I was in possession of knowledge that might have hurt certain business associates, so they railroaded me to the penitentiary, three years in Joliet. Reprisal with the gun was not widely used in those days, you know. After my release the police followed me constantly and still do."

Buckminster, who speaks precise English without affectation, declared he was a graduate civil engineer—"never mind the name of the university; my family, you know." After graduation he became a shorthand teacher and finally was secretary to Chief of Police R. W. McClaughry of Chicago in the early nineties. During the Chicago World's Fair in 1893 he became a detective sergeant, and subsequently left the force to establish a private detective agency—"and a most lucrative one."

After leaving Joliet prison, Buckminster related, he and "Mr. Weil" ran a motion picture theater in Chicago for eight years, with the police always watching them. "I moved to a Southern city and there for eight more years had a lucrative business under another name—promotion of stock issues and so on," Buckminster added.

Explaining how they happened to own the valise containing $20,000 in stolen bonds, Weil and Buckminster said they had been in Kansas City to buy a brewery. "An acquaintance of mine in Kansas City asked me to bring the grip to St. Louis," Buckminster related imperturbably. "Without knowing what was in it I decided it would be injudicious to do so. Therefore we left it in the garage."

Joseph "Yellow Kid" Weil.

The bonds in the grip traced to Weil and Buckminster were part of the $104,000 loot stolen a few months before from a bank in Riverdale, a Chicago suburb. The swindlers waived extradition to Illinois and announced they were "willing and anxious" to be taken to Riverdale for questioning.

AFTER three days in the holdover, the distinguished-looking pair were unconditionally released. Chicago police had notified the Illinois Bankers' Association that the facts in the case would not warrant their prosecution of Buckminster and Weil.

Last February 8 Buckminster was returned to Chicago to face the charge by Miss Harter that he and Weil swindled her out of $32,000. "I am a poor, broken old man," Buckminster told police. "I am ready to plead guilty to this charge and anything else they may have against me."

He was returned from the Michigan State Prison, where he was mathematics instructor in the night school while serving three years for a confidence game at Owosso. That case involved posing as a representative of the Chinese Government. When a detective remarked about the white hair combed back and falling to his coat collar, "The Deacon" said: "Why shouldn't I wear it long? I'm a professor, am I not?"

Miss Harter, who is 45 years old, told police Weil and Buckminster supplied her with letters of introduction which she later learned were faked. After gaining her confidence, they discussed a plan to sell her copper mining property in the Jocko River Valley of Montana. Again it was a copper transaction. In 18 months, while they posed as mining engineers, Miss Harter said she gave them $32,000 for expenses before she became suspicious.

Weil, who gave bond and skipped, is still a jump ahead of the police—who, despite the acquittal, decided to hold "The Deacon" for any other possible complaints.

POST-DISPATCH PASTE-UPS

A HAPPY DUCKLING EASTER BOX

By WALTER DAHLGREN

A HAPPY EASTER to you—and to make it happier here's a cute little Easter box to paste up. The Happy Duckling will stand guard over anything you may put in the box. Furthermore when you shake his wing he will make eyes for you.

DIRECTIONS ● Mount the page upon thin cardboard and then cut out the parts. Be sure to cut out the large holes, for eggs, and the duck's eye. First paste up the box—folding upon dotted lines will bring parts into proper position to be pasted (stars indicate where to put paste). Next pivot part "A" to the back of the duck by pushing a straight pin through the "Xs." Be sure to bend the pin over at the back so as not to get stuck! Then paste the tab of the wing to the starred area on the duck. Now put paste on the inside of the back of box and paste the lower part of the duck's base to it. That's all—and your Easter box is ready for use.

HICKORY HOLLOW FOLKS

And the Things They Do

By WALTER QUERMANN

THE STORY GETS AROUND

THE CHARACTERS

O. HUM—A selfish opossum.
GRUMPY—A gruff old bear.
RIP RACKEY—An interested raccoon.
HARRY HOARDER—A thrifty squirrel.

A gentle spring rain was drumming down on the umbrellas of a small gathering in Hickory Hollow. Umbrellas that, in some cases, were too big for their owners, and in other cases much too small to keep one dry. But no one noticed the rain. No indeed. They were too interested in what O. Hum was saying. So interested were they that they failed to notice Grumpy coming along. They didn't even know he was there till he asked what all the excitement was about. And O. Hum is about to tell him as

THE PLAY BEGINS

O. HUM—The King of the Land of Magic told Bill Bunny that he would have anything he could wish for in one wish.

GRUMPY—(Excitedly.) He did? What did Bill wish for?

O. HUM—He hasn't made the wish yet. The King said Bill would have one month in which to make the wish. That was last week. So Bill's only got three weeks left. Bill wants to make a wish that will do all of us the most good. (After talking a little longer they all decide to go home and think over this very important problem. Then they will all meet at Bill's house the next week to make their decision.)

HARRY HOARDER—(At home, thinking.) Gosh! If he would only wish for all the nuts and acorns in the world.

RIP RACKEY—I want him to wish for nice milky corn all year 'round.

GRUMPY—I'm going to make him wish for all the honey in the world. If some folks don't like honey, they can learn to like it. (Now O. Hum didn't go home for his thinking. He's still wandering around in the rain.)

O. HUM—What we need is ripe persimmons all the time. I'm going over and have a little talk with Bill. Gee, I hope he doesn't wish for carrots and clover and lettuce—wouldn't it be awful if he did? Ugh!

How Chief Osceola Satisfied Seminole Justice

The White Man's Court Failed to Halt Killer John Billy's Career—And the Tribal Council Took the Law Into Its Own Hands.

MIAMI, Florida.

OLD CHIEF OSCEOLA finished polishing the shotgun, took another squint down the glistening barrel — it was a single barreled weapon —then snapped the breech shut, and grunted.

His son, Billy Osceola, moved quietly into the hut, came close to the raised platform on which his father was sitting, and lifted the old man in his arms, for Chief Osceola suffers so acutely from rheumatism that it is difficult for him to walk.

Billy staggered to the truck parked outside and lifted his father into the front seat, then climbed in himself. Down the road they chugged, through the outskirts of Miami.

The chief searched in the gaudy petticoat which he still wears—a fashion that is passing out of style with the younger braves. He found his pipe, lit it and puffed as they drove along a narrow lane lined by scrub palmetto.

They reached Musa Isle, a Seminole village inside the city limits of Miami, and Billy Osceola stopped the truck. Just ahead of them stood a small hut.

A tall Indian thrust his way through the door of the hut, and came straight toward the truck. He never wavered. He came straight on, and stopped about 15 feet away. For a long minute he and the chief looked each other in the eye.

Osceola knocked the ashes from his pipe, and laid the pipe carefully beside him. Then he picked up the single barreled shotgun resting on his knees, aimed carefully at the tall brave and blew the man's head to bits.

He acted as public executioner on behalf of his tribe after six chiefs, who reviewed John Billy's career of violence, voted death for him, and honored the old chief by appointing him as agent to carry out their decree.

The drama enacted on the outskirts of Miami, winter home of millionaires, touts, gangsters, gaudy ladies, and plain, everyday folk seeking tropical sunshine, proves again the odd fact that the Seminoles are an independent nation, living their own lives, enforcing their own laws—even the death sentence.

John Billy, whose violent rages will no longer disturb the quiet of the Indian villages, was a "killer." Eight years ago he stabbed to death another Indian in a drunken brawl. The tribal council met promptly in the recesses of the Everglades and put him on trial for his life. These Indian courts tolerate no red tape, no lawyers, no legal tricks. They are as blunt and direct as a court-martial.

The council decided that Billy had struck in self-defense, and set him free.

Three years ago Billy killed another Indian, and this time the Florida police took a hand. They arrested Billy for murder and brought him to trial in the Circuit Court of Collier County, on the west side of the State. The jury found the evidence insufficient and John Billy, the bad man, went free again.

But the Seminoles felt things had gone wrong on two counts. First, they believed that the white man's court had erred in acquitting John Billy. Next, they felt—and this strongly—that the case should have been tried before their own tribal council. But for the time being they did nothing. At the next Green Corn Dance, however—that institution which decides various problems of the Seminoles—an order was issued banishing Billy from the Florida West Coast.

He went to the Dania Reservation, and for about a year there was no trouble. Then Billy returned to his habits of rowdyism and drinking, and was banished for a second time.

Following this decree he moved to Musa Isle, the Indian settlement at Miami, and there set himself to the task of becoming the most drunken Indian in the history of the Seminoles. From his drinking he took time off to beat two Seminole women, one of whom was about to become a mother. Both women were badly injured and the expectant mother almost died. Billy, who had stabbed two men to death and gone free, signed his death warrant when he turned from killer to woman beater.

A supreme court of the Seminoles met. It consisted of the six chiefs, and they gathered for two successive nights in the heart of the Everglades. The question before them was simple: What should be done with Billy? Their decision was marked by equal simplicity: Execute him.

At the second of their night meetings the chiefs decreed the death penalty, and named old Chief John Osceola as the executioner. They thought that it should be his privilege, because of his years and his dignity and the honor in which he was held by the tribe. Osceola agreed.

It was on the morning following the second conference of the chiefs that Osceola polished his single barreled shotgun, was driven to Musa Isle, and there brought John Billy's career to an end.

And having concluded this task, Osceola had his son take him back to his own camp. When the police arrived they found Osceola sitting in the middle of the camp, barefooted, smoking his pipe and dressed in his gaudy colored petticoat. Other Indians were crowding around to shout their congratulations and to give him money, which he placed in a tin cup. Moreover, a tribal celebration had been arranged for that night.

"Sure, me kill'um," he said. "Me good."

By that last he meant merely that he was a righteous man, ready to stamp out evil whenever he encountered it.

A coroner's jury sitting in Miami evidently agreed with him, for it acquitted Chief Osceola on the grounds of justifiable homicide. Seminoles summoned as witnesses testified that Osceola was executing the commands of the council of chiefs when he shot John Billy.

Chief Josie Billy, one of the six chieftains, took the stand, and said:

"Me know John Billy all his life. He kill Charlie Lee and another Indian. We don't like him. We kill him."

During the inquest the courtroom was packed with Seminoles wearing their gaudily-striped garments. A newsreel man's floodlight, placed on the desk of the Clerk of the Court, added to the bizarre effect.

Soon after the inquest, Brown Tiger, acting as representative of the Okeechobee Tribe, drove to Miami to tell Chief Osceola that his council had discussed John Billy's fate at length and decided that the bad man's execution was entirely justified.

When it came time for John Billy's funeral not a Seminole would attend the last rites. Even his widow and his stepson refused to claim the body. A white man whom John Billy once attacked was his only friend in death. This white man, Agent Scott, superintendent of Indian affairs in Florida, was once set upon by John Billy and badly bitten on the wrist. But that was forgotten now, and it was Scott who saw that John Billy had a decent burial. The superintendent also went among former neighbors of the dead man and urged them to attend the funeral, but they merely shook their heads and said, "No go."

Agent Scott alone had a good word to say for Billy.

"He died bravely," said Scott. "When Osceola drove into camp and called Billy out, Billy knew that the death sentence had been passed, and that there was no appeal from it. He walked up to the truck and took his medicine without flinching or uttering one plea for mercy."

SO ENDED a grim episode in the history of a people who preserve much of an ancient way of life in the midst of modern civilization. Students of customs and manners have found the Seminoles a fertile field for observation. One such observer, Miss Florence Fritz, a writer of Atlanta, Georgia, who gathered information at first hand in several trips to the Everglades, recently told some of the things she had learned about these Indians.

"They are a strange people," she wrote, "at once ludicrous and majestic, who live forever in the yesterday with little jokers of today thrown in that seem only to emphasize their imperturbable savagery. Primitive marriage customs, weird burials and harsh justice prevail despite all efforts of missionaries, Government agencies and private interests.

"Divorce is most uncommon, but if need comes it is probably more easily settled among the Seminoles than anywhere else on earth. The husband simply gets out. The wife and children remain with her people.

"Ancient customs, including the Green Corn Dance, govern their lives. And yet these dark-skinned mystics, in gaudy costumes, will glide barefooted through the palm-lined streets of Fort Myers to the motion picture shows, where, in stoic solemnity, they watch Western pictures, slap-stick comedy and sex appeal march across the silver screen before them. Then, wordlessly, they arise and glide out. Or they go shopping in the five-and-ten-cent stores and purchase yards and yards of vivid-hued, factory-woven cloth, which they take with them on foot, in dugout canoes, or in dilapidated automobiles, to their primitive camps."

W. E. D. Welch, an Atlanta silhouette artist, spent four months among the Seminoles in the Florida Everglades not long ago. While there he saw Joe Longdog, an 80-year-old medicine man, apparently effect amazing cures by the homely if odd device of blowing bubbles in a can of water.

On one occasion Jonnie Tom, a young brave, split one of his teeth by biting down on a hard shelled pecan. When the medicine man arrived Jonnie Tom's jaw was swollen to the size of a pumpkin.

"The medicine man had Jonnie Tom lie down on the floor of a hut," Welch relates. "First he spat on the swollen jaw. Then he dripped a can of cold water from the slough, and I cringed as he set that cold can on Johnnie Tom's sore face. The medicine man spat on the can, and taking a hollow reed from somewhere under his kimono, began to blow bubbles in the water. He stopped every few minutes to rap Jonnie Tom smartly across the soles of his feet with a small paddle.

"Indians are reputed to be stoical, and to show no pain, but that doesn't apply to toothache. Jonnie Tom made plenty of noise.

"THE medicine man applied no medicines, and as nearly as I could tell, he wasn't doing Jonnie Tom a bit of good with his spitting, bubble blowing and foot spanking. So I was the most surprised man in the village when, a couple of hours later, the swelling suddenly went down and Jonnie Tom stood up grinning.

"The medicine man asked no fee. He simply drank the water in the can, stepped into his canoe, and disappeared down the slough. I asked Jonnie Tom how he was feeling. He said, 'Feet not so good—face all right.'

"Just how did the medicine man cure Jonnie Tom's toothache? Could it have been hypnotism? Certainly it was not by drugs and herbs, for Jonnie Tom did not take medicine of any kind, and none was rubbed on. If it was hypnotism, how far could it go toward curing a sick person?"

Of the Seminoles generally, Welch says:

"When a man feels particularly industrious he goes out and catches an alligator or shoots a deer or wild pig. Food is plentiful, since the Indians are not particular about their diet. Besides venison and pork they eat alligators, moccasins, rattlesnakes, wildcats, rabbits, muskrats, foxes—nearly anything. The women cultivate corn and grind it in mortars made of cypress. You know there are no rocks in the Everglades. They also have a few wild coconuts, bananas, oranges, and a lot of cabbage palms. Tender bamboo shoots take the place of asparagus."

CORNS COME BACK BIGGER, UGLIER
unless removed Root and All*

HOME paring only affects the surface of a corn—leaves the root to come back bigger, more painful! Don't take chances with old-fashioned, unknown remedies. Play safe with the scientific Blue-Jay. It ends pain instantly by removing pressure, then in 3 short days the corn lifts out root and all (exceptionally stubborn cases may require a second application). 6 for 25¢. Same price in Canada.

*A plug of dead cells root-like in form and position. If left may serve as focal point for renewed development.

KAY, I'VE NEVER SEEN ANYONE WITH SO MUCH PEP AND VITALITY— WHY YOU'RE THE BELLE OF THE WHOLE BEACH!
—AND I'M SO HAPPY. ISN'T IT MARVELOUS?
IT CERTAINLY IS! BUT LET ME IN ON YOUR SECRET.
OH, IT'S NO SECRET! BELIEVE IT OR NOT, I MERELY CUT DOWN ON THOSE HEAVY, RICH FOODS THAT SLOW YOU UP. INSTEAD, I EAT 2 SLICES OF WONDER BREAD FOR ENERGY WITH EVERY MEAL.

HOW WONDER BREAD BUILDS UP ENERGY

If you want to have the radiant charm ...the sparkling vitality that, screen stars agree, makes women truly attractive ...you must have energy—vital energy! This, you can only get from the food you eat. Wonder Bread, food authorities agree, is one of the best sources of energy. It is made of choice ingredients that supply in abundant measure this food-energy you need.

And Wonder Bread is slo-baked to make it more quickly, more completely digestible . . . to give you vital energy more quickly and easily!

IT IS — YOU WAIT AND SEE!

IN ACTUAL COMPARISON WITH OTHER BREADS—

89 out of every 100 women chose Wonder Bread

Women by the hundreds of thousands have made the famous 1-2-3 comparison of breads in stores all over the country. They have compared virtually all popular brands by the very method experts themselves use to compare bread quality.

Now look at the actual record! To date 387,643 women have made this test . . . and 89 out of every 100 have chosen Wonder Bread over all others.

These women declared Wonder Bread best after discovering its tempting delicious flavor, its firm delicate texture, its appetizing "wheaty" fragrance!

Has any bread you know ever won such overwhelming preference? Never, we believe, have women been so outspoken in their enthusiasm for any bread!

Now when you buy Wonder Bread, you can be sure that you are getting the one bread declared BEST in this fair, impartial bread comparison by American housewives. Get a loaf of slo-baked Wonder Bread tomorrow!

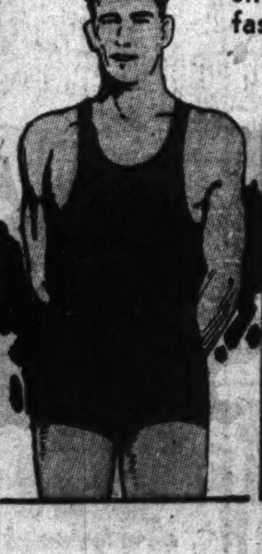
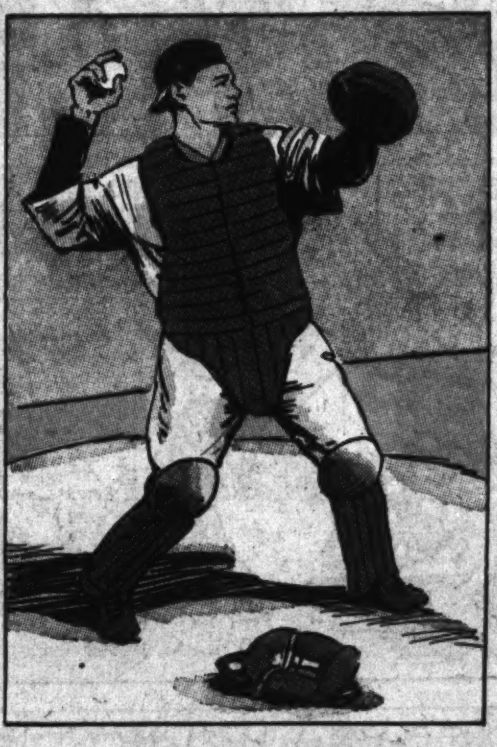
And the schoolboy marvel not only leaves the classy field behind—he sets a new world record!



This is the lad, Al Vande Weghe of Newark, N. J., who electrified the sports world that night of April 5, 1934, by swimming the distance in 1 minute, 36.9 seconds.

Baseball . . . . by NED BRANT

Catching



Throwing

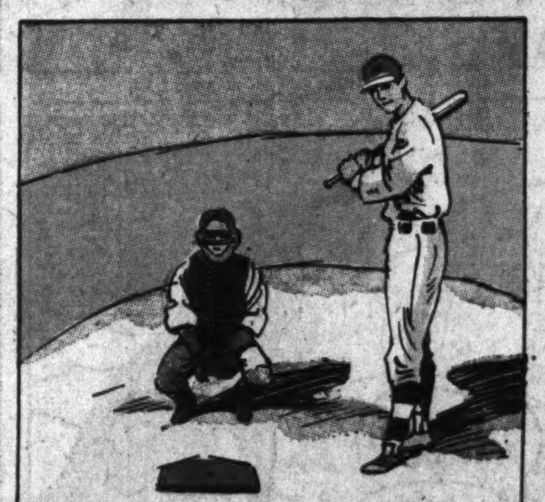
Signalling



Note that persons outside the diamond can not see the signal. Watch for batter's weaknesses. Get the ball back fast to the pitcher. Keep the pitcher from working too fast. Come up to a throwing position, even though the runner has not started to steal.

On bunted balls, the catcher should tell the pitcher where to make the play. The catcher should have signals with the basemen, so they may know when he's going to throw. And the outfielders should know those signals, so they can back up the basemen.

Next Week . . . . Playing First Base.

"WE KNOW TOBACCO BECAUSE WE GROW IT—WE SMOKE CAMELS BECAUSE WE KNOW TOBACCO"—TOBACCO PLANTERS SAY

"I know the kind of tobacco bought for various cigarettes," says Beckham Wright, who has been growing tobacco for 19 years. "Camel got my choice tobacco last year, as they 'most always do. You bet I smoke Camels—I know what fine tobacco is in 'em."

"I had the dandiest tobacco crop ever last year," says Roy Jones, well-known tobacco grower. "Camel paid the biggest prices to get the best lots. I know Camel uses costlier tobaccos, so they're the kind I smoke myself. Camel is the leading cigarette down our way."

Walter Devine's tobacco brought the highest price in his market last year. "The Camel people took the choice lots," he says. "They usually do. I know tobacco, so I'm partial to Camels. Most of the big growers here feel the same way. They're Camel smokers too."

THEY ARE THE LARGEST-SELLING CIGARETTE IN AMERICA

CAMELS ARE A MATCHLESS BLEND OF FINER, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS—TURKISH & DOMESTIC

NOTHIN'. BUT SALLY, DID YOU KNOW MILDRED'S STEALIN' YOUR BEAU? HE JUST WENT INTO HER HOUSE--WE SAW HIM!

VI'LET! YOU HADN'T OUGHT TO HAVE TOLD SALLY THAT!

THAT'S ALL RIGHT, VIOLET! IF DON LIKES MILDRED BETTER, THERE'S NOTHING I CAN DO ABOUT IT!

SURE THERE IS, SALLY! GOODNESS, I BETCHA IF YOU WENT TO SEE YOUR DENTIST ABOUT YOUR BREATH --LIKE EVERYBODY SAYS YOU OUGHT TO --YOU'D GET YOUR BEAU BACK FROM THAT MILDRED IN A MINUTE!

SALLY, TESTS SHOW THAT MOST BAD BREATH COMES FROM DECAYING FOOD DEPOSITS IN HIDDEN CREVICES BETWEEN TEETH THAT AREN'T CLEANED PROPERLY. I RECOMMEND COLGATE DENTAL CREAM. ITS SPECIAL PENETRATING FOAM REMOVES THESE ODOR-BREEDING DEPOSITS. AND THAT'S WHY...

COLGATE DENTAL CREAM COMBATS BAD BREATH

"You see, Colgate's special penetrating foam gets into the hidden crevices between your teeth that ordinary cleansing methods fail to reach . . . emulsifies and washes away the decaying food deposits that cause most bad breath . . . dull, dingy teeth . . . and much tooth decay.

"And at the same time, Colgate's soft, safe polishing agent gently yet thoroughly cleans and brightens the enamel—makes your teeth sparkle—gives new brilliance to your smile!"

3 MONTHS LATER—THANKS TO COLGATE'S

THAT WAS THE BEST CIRCUS IN THE WORLD, I BET, SALLY! AN' IT WAS AWFUL NICE OF YOU AND YOUR BEAU TO TAKE US!

HE'S BOTH, MARY SUE --THANKS TO YOU AND VIOLET!

NO BAD BREATH BEHIND HER SPARKLING SMILE!

...AND NO TOOTHPASTE EVER MADE MY TEETH AS BRIGHT AND CLEAN AS COLGATE'S!
